SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

ADVICES of stirring interest have reached us by the mail just arrived, and it seems far from improbable that we are already plunged into a second war with the Celestial Empire. In our last number we adverted to differences of a grave character which had arisen at Canton between the British authorities and the Chinese Viceroy. These the British Consul had been most anxious to remove, but all efforts for the purpose proved unavailing; and, on the 8th October, the Viceroy brought matters to a crisis by boarding a small vessel, commanded by an English captain and bearing the British flag, seizing twelve of the crew, who were Chinese, and hauling down the union jack from the vessel, of which his soldiers retained possession. Rumours of the outrage having reached the Consulate, Mr. Parkes forthwith proceeded to the captured vessel, in order to make the necessary investigation, preparatory to the adoption of ulterior measures. Here, however, he not only failed in his purpose, but was, moreover, insulted by the officer of the imperial guard, and threatened with personal violence. An interview with the local functionaries was subsequently sought by the Consul; but here again the Mandarins contemptuously rejected all demands for explanation. A strong remonstrance, detailing the facts and requiring redress, was then addressed to Yeh, the governor of the city, but to this no satisfactory answer was vouchsafed, the Viceroy appearing determined to defend the proceeding. In the mean time intelligence of these events had been despatched to Sir John Bowring, at Hong-Kong, and also to Sir Michael Seymour, the admiral of the fleet in the Chinese seas, the result of which was the despatch of a naval force to Canton, accompanied by a considerable body of marines. These arrived on the 18th October. A further period was then granted to the Viceroy, Yeh, to apologize for the insult which had been sustained, with a distinct warning that, should compliance be refused, recourse would be had to coercive measures. The required apology not being forthcoming, it was determined to resort to hostilities. Accordingly, on the 24th October, all the forts, save one by which the city is externally guarded, were attacked and captured by the British seamen and marines without

ARRIVAL OF MAILS.

DEPARTURES OF EACH MONTH—MAILS FROM LONDON TO INDIA.

Via Southampton (from London), at 8 o'clock on the morning of the 4th and 20th. It is advisable to post letters in London on the previous evening; if the 4th or 20th be Sunday, then on the evening of the 3rd and 19th.

The Mails for China are despatched under the same regulations, and at the same rate of postage, as those to India.

 The Marseilles mails of the 10th and 26th overtake the Southampton mails of the 4th and 20th at Malta; from which place they are conveyed by the same vessel.

loss, the Chinese offering but a faint resistance. The guns, numbering one hundred and seventy, were spiked, and some of the forts were burned, while possession was retained of the remainder. This being accomplished, a pause was allowed, with the view of affording to the Viceroy an opportunity for the restoration of pacific relations. On this occasion Yeh had recourse to the usual Chinese policy. Twelve men, with chains round their necks, purporting to be the crew of the captured vessel, made their appearance at the Consulate. These, however, it was manifest, were criminals of the lowest class, evidently dragged from prison, and were consequently at once sent back. It now became obvious that the Chinese governor would neither grant redress nor consent to an interview, and the British commander accordingly resolved to make an attack upon Canton itself. The wall by which the city is surrounded measures thirty feet in height and twenty-five in thickness. It is composed partly of sandstone and partly of brick, and is surmounted by cannon. Operations having commenced on the 27th, a practical breach in the wall was effected on the 29th, when the British troops entered, and gained the governor's palace. The position does not appear to have been tenable, the troops having been withdrawn in the evening, with a loss, however, of only three killed and twelve wounded. At this point a renewed offer of negotiation was made by the British, but rejected by the Chinese. It was then determined to storm the old inner portion of the city, which was defended by a massive stone wall, and contained the garrison of Canton. The bombardment took place on the 3rd and 4th November, and on the 6th her Majesty's steamer Barracouta engaged and destroyed a fleet of twenty-three war-junks. The Chinese appear to have stood well to their guns, the Barracouta having received no less than eighty shot in her hull and rigging. A final interval for reflection was then granted, but at the date of the last advices no symptoms of accommodation had been manifested; on the contrary, the barrier forts had been re-manned by the Chinese.

From the Circular, which is given below, it may be gathered that there is no prospect of a speedy peace or of the resumption of trade. We can only trust that the opportunity now offered for a revision of our treaty with the Celestial Empire, and the establishment of our relations on a satisfactory footing, will not be lost sight of.

The number of British war vessels at Canton is as follows:—Sailing vessels: Calcutta, flag, 80; Sibylle, broad pendant, 44; Nankin, 50; Comus, 14. Steamers: Niger 14; Encounter, 14; Barracouta, 6; Sampson, 6; Hornet, 17; Coromandel, 3.

CIRCULAR.

“Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, Canton, Nov. 15, 1856.

“Her Britannic Majesty's Consul has received the instructions of his Excellency Rear-Admiral Sir (M. Seymour, K.C.B., naval Commander-in-Chief, &c.), to issue the following notice to the British community:—

“His Excellency feels it unnecessary to recapitulate to the British community the origin and progress of what has been done at Canton during the last few weeks by her Majesty's naval forces under his command. Their loss has happily been trifling, and their operations, now including the capture of the Bogue forts, eminently successful.

“His Excellency regrets to find that neither the extreme measures to which the Imperial Commissioner's defiance of treaty obligations has compelled him to resort, nor the plain proof given that the city and its inhabitants are at the mercy of her Majesty's ships of war, have as yet induced the Imperial Commissioner to make the concession demanded by his Excellency, as a guarantee against future misunderstandings of a similar nature to the present.

“The concession is not regarded as unreasonable by Chinese who, his Excellency understands, adequately represent the feeling, of the respectable inhabitants of Canton, nor is any tangible obstacle alleged to it by these, except the impracticability of the Commissioner himself, who has laboured to associate the people with him, by representing the English as in league with rebels and outlaws, and has pushed his hostility to the ferocious length of proclaiming rewards for the lives of English subjects without distinction.

“His Excellency is determined that his demand shall be conceded; but the community must be well aware that any course his Excellency may now contemplate would be compromised by publicity. His Excellency therefore confines himself to stating that he sees no immediate prospect of a restoration of quiet.

“The security of the foreign position will be as well cared for as heretofore. The nature and object of any measures now to be resorted to his Excellency deems it advisable to keep to himself.

(Signed)

HARRY S. PARKES,

“Her Britannic Majesty's Consul at Canton.
“To the British Community at Canton.”

From India we have little news of interest. Nothing, at the departure of the mail, had been heard of the Persian Gulf expedition; but it was generally surmised that Persia had no intention of abandoning her proceedings against Herat, which place, on the authority of the Lahore Chronicle, appears at last to have fallen; and that the despatch of a further force from Bombay to Bushire will be indispensable. In the north-west, Dost Mahomed is stated to be recruiting his forces at Caubul, to which city a body of five thousand men is said to be moving from the Kohat frontier. The old chief appears not to have yet abandoned his claim upon the British Government for the restitution of Peshawar. On the Madras side, the recently suppressed disturbances at Kinedy are represented to have broken out afresh; while at Bombay, the only notable event is the death of the Guicowar, which occurred at his capital, Baroda, on the 18th October last. This prince has been described as a man of feeble intellect and dissipated habits, and the debaucheries of his latter years are said to have been unspeakably disgusting. He has been succeeded by his only brother Kundyrow, now Guicowar.

The Bengal Hurkaru observes, “The scheme of a railway to the Mutlah is favourably viewed, and as Mr. Longridge, the chief engineer, has arrived to survey the line of country, we may hope to see the works commence within a year. The establishment of a port on the Mutlah, auxiliary to Calcutta, is freely admitted to be a necessity, and Government have already taken steps towards the accomplishment of the object.”

THE PUNJAB ADMINISTRATION.

In speaking of the Punjab administration the Lahore Chronicle states:—"The success of British rule in the Punjab has been unexampled in rapidity. Deeds, not words, were at first the order of the day. Shrewd sense, practical knowledge, and resolute will, on the part of the leaders, have been backed up by the devotion, sustained energy, and earnest spirit of the subordinates. A new country with its new people, a new system with its fresh vigour, freedom of action, and unusual responsibilities, formed great attractions, and raised high hopes. The first efforts of the Punjabees were right nobly done; but human nature is not purely chivalrous, and something more than a mere sense of duty is required to keep up the steam when the call is for high pressure, and the wearied head and aching heart are sinking from over toil and broken prospects. There must be some pabulum beyond vague hopes of future reward, and as yet little has been given; on the contrary, as the country becomes more settled, and the system of Government more completely developed and enforced, whatever there was of romance gives way to the dull reality of work—the rather singular but very brilliant acts of the first executives have passed away with the opportunities then found for such exhibitions, and we have now come to the days of routine, voluminous statements, and clever clerks. Officers find that with double the work, and half the pay of the provinces, they are subjected to quite as much control, whilst the severe and uncompromising punishment of faults, and the public placarding of failings have been but slenderly relieved by the meagre praise, and public school sort of approvals of the secretary's periodical reports. However much we may esteem Mr. Temple personally, we will not be slow to speak the truth.

With regard to over-work, and the consequent injury to health, if a list of the officers, who have left the country since annexation, was compared with a similar list from any other government, the public would be surprised at the seeming deadliness of the climate. We believe, however, that it is not the climate which has caused this fatality so much as the overstraining of the mental and physical powers.

The principle which, we believe, has been acknowledged to prevail of giving men more work than they can fairly perform, with the certainty of getting a large average done somehow or other, has been too largely adhered to, and must tend to exhaustion. The system of overworking young hands as long as courage, health, and hopes last, and letting them go when all "the goodness" is out of them, is so far successful as long as you can obtain fresh victims, or, as the gold-diggers say, as long as "there are as many more where they came from."

Now, this system has lasted for eight years, and under so powerful a hand as that of the ruler, has succeeded. Whether Sir John Lawrence has been guided by selfish ambition in thus using up his agents, or whether he is himself the victim of a hard, slave-driving system, is a question amongst many. For ourselves, we believe most honestly that no man feels more deeply for the disappointment of his officers—no man appreciates more their services, and recognizes their worth more, than their distinguished chief; but we may rest assured that it is his prestige alone, and perhaps Mr. Temple's Reports, which hold matters together, and that his departure will be followed by a sudden collapse, unless the Government meets the difficulty by some more liberal system than the one now employed.

MR. ABERCROMBIE DICK.

The Friend of India, in commenting on Mr. Dick, enumerates the cases adjudicated upon by him and other Indian judges:—

"The object of public compassion just at present is Mr. Abercrombie Dick. It is not at first sight unwarranted. Mr. Dick has been forty-three years in the service. During the whole of that period he has borne an irreproachable character, and if not a remarkable has been at least an upright and conscientious judge. It has been our unfortunate lot repeatedly to attack every judge who has taken a prominent part in the criminal jurisdiction of the Sudder Court. We willingly admit that in Mr. Dick's case the errors on which it has been our duty to comment, have been often on the right side. Mr. Dick has stood up for the weak against the strong, with firmness if without judgment. He has at the end of this long career been refused permission to remain a few months longer. That seems hard, but there is an account on the per contra side.

"Twelve months ago, it will be remembered, the arrears of the Sudder Court attracted the attention of the Government. The Court was requested to furnish an explanation, which was supplied. It was not deemed satisfactory, and the judges, with a strong and natural reluctance, at length declared that the fault had been with Mr. Dick. His work was slowly done. His attendance was unpunctual, and a habit of reading every paper in Court delayed the commencement of the business of the day.

H. T. Raikes ..	1043	340
B. J. Colvin ..	916	285

"Mr. Dick explained, but the explanation was not deemed thoroughly satisfactory. He requested six months' leave, which was granted on the distinct understanding, reiterated by both Governments, that on his return he would retire. He returned, and it became necessary to claim the fulfilment of the engagement. The mistake if any did not rest with Government. The resistance, if possible, should have been offered before 'the indulgence' was accepted. There was no harshness unless a determination to enforce an agreement can be so considered. The affair is a painful termination to a long and honourable career, but the pain must be considered by all acquainted with the facts, self-inflicted."

THE LONDON MAIL of October 10 arrived at Calcutta Nov. 17 (per Hindustan).

GORUCKPORE.—Government General Orders of Nov. 18, announce that Goruckpore will cease to be a military post, and the troops will be removed to Azimgurh.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY'S STEAMER Oriental, has been chartered by Government, to effect the relief of the troops serving in Pegu.

THE GOVERNMENT 4½ PER CENT LOAN still continues to be unfavourably regarded by capitalists, and Lord Canning's refusal to publish an Indian Budget operates disadvantageously for the credit of Government. Two millions sterling is the sum said to be required, and in three months we are informed that a trifle amounting to 50,000*l.* is the total sum subscribed! If the Persians resist, or refuse to withdraw their forces from before Herat, and it is deemed a point of honour on our side to prosecute the war with vigour, and dispatch British troops into Persia through Cabul, Government will be compelled to raise money at a higher rate of interest than it now offers, and a general impression to the effect that this will be the case prevails in the bazars.—Hurkaru.

AFFRAY AT JUNGYPORE.—In our issue of the 15th Oct. we mentioned that an affray of a serious nature had occurred at Jungypore in which the collector of tolls had been severely maltreated by some natives, when in the execution of his duty. A report has just reached us, that on the 12th instant, the Assistant-magistrate of Jungypore, Mr. Herschell (son of the astronomer), when inquiring into some case at a village near Rajahmampore was attacked by a body of natives, one of whom aimed a blow at his head with a sword, but his hat saved him, and he escaped with no more ill consequences than a slight wound on the side of his head, from which we learn he is now fast recovering. These occurrences speak volumes as to the anarchy and confusion which prevail in parts of the Mofussil. The inability of the law to afford any protection to an honest man is proverbial. Things appear to be getting worse instead of better, and bribery and corruption in the Mofussil Courts appear to be on the increase rather than on the wane. When such outrages as the above are openly perpetrated upon Government officers, what must be the position of those who have neither means nor official influence to protect them?—Hurkaru.

OUSELEY V. FLOWDEN.—The points reserved in the action brought by Major Ouseley against Mr. Flowden, commissioner of Nagpore, were to be argued in the Supreme Court on the 27th November.

INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.—Mr. Joseph Graham, barrister-at-law, has been appointed secretary to the Indigo Planters' Association during the absence in England of Mr. Theobald.

THE REV. MR. WALLIS, formerly chaplain at Chinsurah, is to be chaplain at Rangoon, and Mr. Steel is to proceed to Arracan in the same capacity.

THE SHIP QUEEN.—Anxiety is experienced respecting the ship Queen, her pilot, Mr. Cleghorn, not having been heard of since the 30th October.

ANNUITIES.—The first ten of the following applicants have obtained annuities of the season from the Civil Service Annuity Fund:—1. Abercrombie Dick. 2. R. J. Tayler. 3. A. W. Beggie. 4. G. Blunt. 5. W. Bracken. 6. C. Allen. 7. G. Adams. 8. F. Skipwith. 9. E. H. Morland. 10. J. H. Crawford. 11. R. F. Hodgson. 12. R. H. S. Campbell. 13. J. G. Campbell. 14. E. H. C. Monckton. 15. H. Atherton.

COLONEL CAVANAGH returned to the presidency Nov. 14.

MAJOR WILMER.—Major William Wilmer, senior major of H.M.'s 14th Light Dragoons, stationed in the Bombay presidency, who served formerly with H.M.'s 16th Lancers on this side of India, and won several decorations for good service in the field, is about to retire from the army by the sale of his commission.

BANDS.—The Court of Directors having recognized the mess as a regimental institution, has taken in hand the regimental music. A hundred rupees a month is to be allowed to each regiment for the support of the band, and at the same time the contribution required from officers is to be reduced. The allowance is manifestly inadequate, but it is a good beginning, and we believe that it has been secured by the urgent representations of Lord Dalhousie. Regimental bands will never be efficient until the band-master is recognized as a servant of Government. It would not be true to say that even the Indian Government is insensible to the value of bands. But it has hitherto been rather shabbily content that they should be maintained at the expense of regimental officers. The present innovation may not give regimental officers much relief, but it opens the way to further improvement.—Friend of India.

THE ARMY FUNDS.—In the course of a long leading article, the Friend of India makes the following remarks on this topic:—"The result of the voting on certain propositions lately submitted to the army by the management of the Military Orphan Society affords a ludicrous illustration of the recklessness with which such votes are given. Every officer in the Bengal army is occasionally called on to take his part in deciding the fate of institutions which undertake to provide for the widows and orphans of the army, and it will be worth while to see how this duty is discharged. It was proposed (by the above society) to unite the home agency of the Orphan Fund with that of the Military Fund. This proposal, apparently a very sensible one, was negatived by a majority of 605. It was proposed that, if the above amalgamation should be agreed upon, the salary of the joint agent for both funds should be 350*l.*, with an allowance of 450*l.* for establishment. This proposal was carried by a majority of 20. It was, thirdly, proposed to unite the Indian managements of the two funds. This proposition was carried, although it had just been decided to keep up the useless encumbrance of two separate agencies at home. It was, fourthly, proposed that the first 'joint agent' in England should be elected by the army at large. This proposition the army at large, which had just decided that there should be no joint agent in England at all, has carried by a majority of 43. The general management are naturally a little bewildered by this result, and have decided on resubmitting the third proposition to the army—'being satisfied that many of those who voted on this point did so under the erroneous idea that the third proposal was dependent on the first,' that is, that the union of the Indian managements depended on the union of the home agencies. But the chief error of the Orphan Fund Committee seems to have lain in the belief that the army voted under an 'erroneous idea,' the probability being that the army voted without any idea whatever upon the subject. It is thus that the army too frequently votes. The juniors possess a power of outvoting their seniors, which has been intolerable from the first, and which every addition to the army is strengthening."

CHOLERA has been reported to have made its appearance at Buddee (in the plans), and carried even as high as Syree, the former about 40, the latter 11 miles from Simlah. A medical gentleman is said to have written, that while he was suffering from this fell disease in the Bungalow at Hurrepore (eight miles below Syree), no less than six natives died in the verandah.

COOLIES TO THE WEST INDIES.—The ships Aurora and Roman Emperor, have been chartered to convey Cooly emigrants to the West Indies, the former at ten guineas a head and the latter at thirteen pounds.

MURDER.—Patrick Cleary was tried on the 10th Nov. for the wilful murder of Serjeant Major Sadlier, H.M. 53rd Regt., found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged on the 24th.

THE OPIUM SALE took place to-day. Patna realized Rs. 935 a chest, and Benares Rs. 1,004.

STEAM TO BURMAH.—It is reported that the steamer Manchester, belonging to Messrs. Apar and Co., which has had new boilers fitted, will be taken up by Government, to maintain the bi-monthly communication with Burmah.

MR. COX is to be traffic master of the East-India Railway, in place of Mr. Roche, who has resigned.

AN EXPERIMENTAL TRIP has been made on the section of rail between Allahabad and Cawnpore.

MR. ABERCROMBY DICK.—The friends of Mr. Abercromby Dick have held a meeting to take into consideration the best mode of expressing their kindly feeling toward him.

DR. SRONG, the oldest medical inhabitant of Calcutta is, the Phoenix states, about to retire from active service.

THE NATIVE STATE OF ULWAH is to be annexed, and perhaps other Rajpootana States also.

THE LATE LIEUT. ALEXANDER J. TROTTER.—It appears by recent accounts that the remains of Lieut. Alexander J. Trotter, of the artillery, who was drowned on 4th October last in the River Jhelum, on the confines of Cashmere, when endeavouring to rejoin his encampment on the eastern bank by swimming across the river, have been discovered near Rawul Pindee, and there interred by the military authorities of the place.

AN ELECTRIC FRacas.—A Mr. Jackson, an up-country electric telegraph employé, lately came to Calcutta on some official business. As was very natural, on his arrival, he proceeded to the Electric Telegraph Office, and sat down in the signal-room. A person named Devere, who, we believe, holds an appointment in the office, came into the signal-room and ordered Mr. Jackson out. The latter, after protesting against such rudeness, but unwilling to create a disturbance, proceeded to another room. Devere followed him, and again ordered him out, at the same time, we believe, grasping him as if to drag him away. Hereupon Mr. Jackson, thoroughly aroused by these repeated insults, hit Mr. Devere right and left like a good one. It is reported that Mr. Jackson intends to proceed against Mr. Devere for assault; but if the particulars we have heard be correct, he seems to have the best of it already.

SALT LOTTERY.—On Friday, Oct. 24, the sale of Government Hidgelee salt by lottery, took place at the office of the Board of Customs, Salt, and Opium, in the usual manner. With the view of preventing a crowd of applicants gathering around this office, and thereby creating confusion, orders had been previously issued for the presentation of tenders on stamped papers, each of the value of two rupees, but this had not the effect of diminishing the number of competitors or preventing disturbance. Long before the sale commenced, the gates were ordered to be shut. Each lot consisted of 5,000 maunds, and twenty-two of such lots were sold off, the winners being mostly Hindoos of the caste of Sahas and Mundles, and only one Christian by the name of Peter. No less than 4,000 rupees' worth of stamp papers was sold on that day. The demand for stamp paper was so great that a premium, varying from four to eight annas on each paper of two rupees, was exacted by the vendors thereof.

MAJOR R. STRACHEY, Engineers, has been deputed by the Supreme Government to examine the system of accounts in the P. W. Department of the Punjab, and may be shortly expected at Lahore.

FEVER AT BHUDDESHUR.—The people of Bhuddeshur, a considerable village and a great mart for grain, a few miles above Chaudernagore, are suffering in a most extraordinary manner from fever. The disease has assumed nearly the character of a plague, carrying off great numbers every day; there is not a single house free from the unwelcome visitation.

TOUR OF INSPECTION.—We hear that Mr. W. Gordon Young, Director of Public Instruction, will start on his official tour of inspection, on or before the 10th of November, for Assam, en route to Dacca, where he will remain for a few days to inspect the several grant-in-aid schools, lately established under the supervision of Mr. Woodrow, inspector of that division. We further learn that Mr. Young will proceed to Darjeeling in the ensuing month of March, to inspect the college and schools there.

NORMAL SCHOOL AT BENARES.—The Government of India has sanctioned the establishment of a normal school at Benares, at a cost of Rs. 1,080 per mensem. The salary of the head master has been fixed at Rs. 400 per mensem.

LIMITED LIABILITY.—At a meeting of the Legislative Council, the Hon. Mr. Peacock introduced a Bill regarding joint stock companies, involving the principle of limited liability.

PUNKAHWALLAHS SUPERSEDED.—Messrs. D. Wilson and Company, the proprietors of the Auckland Hotel, have recently erected a steam-engine, by means of which a cool current of air is conveyed by numerous tubes, not only to the handsome public rooms below, but to every private room in their princely establishment on the first and second floor, maintaining during all times of the day a pleasant equable temperature. The same engine is also fitted to a powerful pump, which throws water into all parts of the house, and to an apparatus for warming every room in the house. The saving in biastees, fuel, and punkapullers, must be considerable, while the effectual manner in which the three operations of supplying hot and cool air and water to any extent, must strike the most casual observer.

NEW TOWN OF MUTLAH.—Mr. H. Wells, of the Inland Steam Service, has been selected for clearing out the proposed new town on the Mutlah. Government has authorized an expenditure of Rs. 40,000, for clearing eight and a half miles of jungle. Mr. Wells takes with him 150 coolies to assist in the operations. Two large tanks are to be dug at once. After the land is cleared, railway operations, we hope, will commence.—Phoenix.

TWO MALAY PRINCES, grandsons of the late Sultan of Johore, have presented two petitions to the Governor-General, praying for pensions. His lordship is disposed to take a favourable view of the claim, but remarks that it ought to have been brought forward long ago, considering their age, but will sanction a separate allowance of 50 dollars per month to each of the petitioners.

LIEUT. GULLY, Executive Officer, 7th Division, Lahore and Peshawur road, has intimated his intention of applying for six months' furlough, and has conditionally obtained two months' preparatory leave.

WIDOW MARRIAGE.—We hear that the reputed zemindar, Baboo Joykissen Mookerjee, in an interview with Lord and Lady Canning, has been promised the titular distinction of Raja Bahadur, if he would take the lead in the cause of the Hindu Widow Marriage; and the success of his labours will be honoured publicly in a durbar held in the Government House, when the title, with twenty-two pieces of khelat, will be bestowed upon him in acknowledgment of his exertions in the furtherance of the widows' cause.

COURT-MARTIAL ON LIEUT. J. F. TEMPLER.—The General Orders by the Commander-in-Chief contain the result of the Court-martial for the trial of Lieut. J. F. Templer, 3rd Eur. Regt., for negligence in unnecessarily entrusting a non-commissioned officer with a certain sum of public money, with which he made away; and also for carelessness in certifying to the truth of signatures which he had not himself seen affixed. The Court found the prisoner guilty, and sentenced him to lose one step, which General Anson, having taken a lenient view of the case has remitted, with the hope that Lieut. Templer will "never do so any more."

GEOLOGY, MINERALOGY, BOTANY, AND ZOOLOGY.—We understand that the brothers Schlagintweit left Simla in the end of May last. Mr. Hermann Schlagintweit went along the Sutlej through Spiti to the Pungkouk Lake, and from thence to Ladakh. He was there met by Mr. Robert Schlagintweit, who had been exploring Zulu, Lahaul, and Roopschoo. After a stay of some weeks at Ladakh, they proceeded together to Nubra and Karaborn range of mountains, assuming the disguise of merchants from Delhi, and, accompanied by some men of Yarkund, they boldly crossed over the Karaborn Pass into Turkistan; and, notwithstanding great risk and numerous difficulties, succeeded in penetrating a considerable distance of country in the direction of Khotan. Further progress was impossible from the advanced state of the season and other reasons, which we shall doubtless know shortly from themselves. They returned to Ladakh in the middle of September, and are, we believe, by this time safe in Cashmeer. Mr. Adolph Schlagintweit took the route of Zulu and Lahaul to Zaunkarr, in Thibet. This gentleman's investigations were, we believe, especially directed to a scientific examination of Western Thibet. He travelled for two and a half months carefully exploring the high mountain ranges of the Kuenbun to the northward of Shayoh and the Indus. He penetrated by three different valleys up to the centre of the range, and to the watershed between the Yarkund and Balti rivers. The most northern point reached was the height of the Mustak Pass. Returning by Iscardo, he arrived at Srinugger on the 9th of October. This is but a rough and imperfect sketch of the labours of the travellers; and we look forward with much interest to further and full reports of their progress and observations, all of which will doubtless be made public by the liberality of Government.

REVISION OF CIVIL SALARIES.—Mr. Henry Ricketts, commissioner for the revision of civil salaries, in a report which he has recently submitted to the Government, recommends that all the assistantships to the accountant-general, all the under-secretaryships to the Government, all the joint-magistrateships in the districts, and a number of other appointments besides, should be given to distinguished uncovenanted servants.

A CHOTA "CHOBHAM" IN MALWA.—Orders have been published to the portion of the Gwalior contingent, serving in this district, to prepare for a chota "Chobham," to come off in the vicinity of Mehidpore, between the 8th January and 1st March, 1857. The 3rd company of artillery and 7th infantry at Augor, have consequently received instructions to march towards the above-mentioned station on the 2nd of January, where they will join the Mehidpore contingent, and Malwa Bheel corps, in all about 5,000 irregular troops, to be under the command of Major Stockley. This will make a very compact and easily-handled little force, and a better commandant than Major Stockley, who commanded a brigade at the late Goonah Chobham to perfect satisfaction, could not possibly have been selected. The arrangements necessary for the camp will be easily carried out, and the expense to the state trifling; as all extra carriage and establishments are to be discharged from dates of arrival at the appointed locality which is admirably adapted for the purpose, being central and healthy, while provisions are at the same time plentiful in the neighbourhood. Sir Robert Hamilton is supposed to have suggested the formation of this camp of exercise, and is known to be a strong advocate in favour of such annual gatherings.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE GUIDE CORPS AND LIEUT. GODBY.

Peshawur, Oct. 19, 1856.—The services of Lieut. Godby and his detachment of the Guide Corps being no longer required at Peshawur, they will commence their march to-morrow towards Khote Murdan.

In dispensing with the services of Lieut. Godby and his Guides, Brigadier Cotton cannot refrain from tendering to that officer, and his men, his warmest thanks, for their energetic and valuable services, whilst employed with the troops of the line at Peshawur. This corps and its most efficient officer, Lieut. Godby, have been long known to the brigadier. The Guides have before served under his command, and their readiness in rendering important and useful services to Government has always excited the brigadier's admiration, as well as that of all officers who have witnessed them. The sickly state of their brother soldiers of the Peshawur garrison caused the demand for their services in the present instance, and, like true and good soldiers, they were not only promptly at the post assigned to them, but they were found exerting themselves in the most energetic and successful manner in clearing the vicinity of Peshawur of the Hill tribes, who infest the station; and showing in this instance, as in all others, that the service of Government, be it where it may, is their first and only consideration.

By order,
(Signed) H. D. HAY,
Major of Brigade.

PROTECTION OF COOLIE EMIGRANTS.

Fort William, Oct. 22, 1856.—The Governor-General of India in Council having reason to believe that, in Mauritius, to which colony the emigration of natives of India is allowed, proper measures have not been taken for the protection of such emigrants immediately upon their arrival in the said colony, it is hereby declared that the emigration of natives of India to the said colony of Mauritius shall cease and be prohibited from this 24th day of October, 1856.

By order of the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

CECIL BEADON,

REGIMENTAL MESSES.

Fort William, Oct. 23, 1856.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council, under the authority of the Hon. Court of Directors, is pleased to resolve that regimental messes shall, from the 1st proximo, be established and maintained throughout the Bengal army.

1. Every officer borne on the rolls of a regular regiment is to be a member of the mess of the corps.

2. A donation of thirty days' net pay of regimental rank is to be paid by each officer to the mess-fund on appointment, and a monthly subscription of one day's pay. In cases of promotion, an officer is to pay the difference on thirty days' pay between the rank attained and that previously held.

3. Married officers are equally liable with unmarried officers to the payment of the mess donation on coming into a corps, and on promotion; but they are liable only to one-half of the monthly subscription paid by single officers of the same rank, when such married officers do not regularly attend the regimental mess.

4. Officers having once contributed a donation to a mess of any regular regiment are exempted from payment of any further donation, except the difference on promotion.

5. Officers doing duty with a regular regiment will not be required to pay a donation. They are to be considered as honorary members, and are liable to the monthly subscription only.

6. The donation of young officers and assistant-surgeons is considered due from the date of their coming into a corps; but it will only be recovered from them by instalments, commencing twelve months from the date of their being first posted to a regiment.

7. All officers borne on the rolls of a regular regiment, including absentees on staff or detached employ, and officers doing duty, are liable to the monthly subscription, so long as they may continue in India, or are in receipt of Indian allowances, though out of India.

8. The donation and subscription, as well as the amount of the mess bills of officers, certified by the commanding officer, are to be deducted monthly from the pay abstracts by paymasters, and remitted, along with the pay-drafts of corps, to the commanding officer of the regiment, on account of the mess.

9. The commanding officer of the regiment is held responsible for the general superintendence of the mess, and it is his duty especially to observe that no expenses are incurred by the mess committee which would involve the officers in difficulty and the mess in debt.

10. General officers inspecting regiments will be required to report upon the state of the mess, and it is their duty to see that the regulations respecting messes are regularly enforced by all serving under their orders.

11. The general regulations for regimental messes, which have been approved by Government and confirmed by the Hon. the Court of Directors, will be issued to corps by his Exc. the Commander-in-Chief, who is requested to issue such subsidiary orders as may be necessary to insure the establishment and maintenance of regimental messes on a firm and economical basis.

ARRACAN LOCAL BATTALION.

Fort William, Nov. 14, 1856.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to resolve that the Arracan local battalion shall be increased from 800 to 1,000 men, and it will hereafter consist of 10 companies, of the following strength:—

1. Subadar, 1 jemadar, 6 havildars, 6 naicks, 2 buglers, and 100 sepoys.

2. A battery of 6 mountain-train howitzers, with elephant-carriage and equipments, is to be attached to the battalion, and to be retained at its head-quarters.

The commissariat department will supply elephants on the requisition of the commandant of the battalion.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will be pleased to issue the necessary orders for carrying this augmentation into effect as early as practicable.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE—CIVIL.

Fort William, Financial Department, Nov. 14, 1856.—Resolution.—Some doubt having arisen with reference to the interpretation to be put upon the resolution* of the 10th September last, regarding the indigibility of civil servants, who have taken leave of absence beyond sea under medical certificate, to furlough on private affairs, until they have served six years from their last return to duty, the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to direct that, in the case of civil servants who have taken previous leave on medical certificate under the old rules, the grant of six months' special leave of absence on private affairs, under section xiv. chapter iii. of the new absentee rules, shall not be held to be affected by the rule of the 10th September last, which refers to furlough only.

FURLONGHS AVAILABLE.

Fort William, Nov. 17, 1856.—The furlough available by the expiry of that of Mr. J. H. Prinsep, is assigned to Mr. E. M. Wylie for three years, from the date of his embarkation for Europe.

* "Civil servants, who have taken leave of absence upon sick certificate to Europe, or elsewhere beyond sea, will be ineligible to furlough on private affairs, until they have served six years from their last return to duty. This rule will not apply to short leaves to sea."

COURT-MARTIAL.

LIEUT. CHARLES HENRY HAWTREY, 50TH N.I.

Head-Quarters, off Patna, Oct. 18, 1856.—At a general court-martial assembled at Fort William on Monday, Sept. 22nd, 1856, Lieut. C. H. Hawtrey, 50th N.I., was arraigned on the following charge: viz.—

For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Barrackpore, on the night of Aug. 20, 1856, and on the morning of the following day, been in a disgraceful state of intoxication; and in having, when so excited by drink, maltreated his wife and several of his servants, and exposed himself about his house in a state of partial nudity; and eventually, by his continued violence, rendered it necessary to subject him to the indignity of being tied with cords, and placed under the charge of a native guard.

Finding.—Guilty of the charge; but the Court find he was not tied but secured with cords.

Sentence.—To be dismissed from the service.

Approved and confirmed,

(Signed) GEORGE ANSON,
General, Commander-in-Chief,
East-Indies.

On the Ganges, off Patna,
Oct. 17, 1856.

The name of Lieut. Hawtrey is to be struck off the rolls of the 50th N.I. from the date of publication of this order at Barrackpore; a report of which is to be made to the adjutant-general of the army, and to the deputy adjutant-general of the presidency.

FREIGHTS.

Quotations to London and Liverpool. 3l. to 3l. 17s.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 22).—A moderate amount of business since the departure of the last mail; the intervention of several native holidays, and the paucity of exportable goods, having been principally the cause. Previous high prices have been, however, fully maintained, and those for Sugar and Saltpetre are still higher.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 22).—There has been less activity, and notwithstanding the ruling high prices in Manchester for both Piece Goods and Twist by the last accounts, prices in our market seem to have a downward tendency; this may be attributed to the heavy supplies in the Upper Provinces, and in the hands of dealers here. The Metal market has continued firm with an upward tendency in price, but transactions have not been large.

THE BUDGET OF PROJECTED PUBLIC WORKS, 1856-57.

We publish below a summary of the despatch of the Government of India to the Government of Madras, conveying the resolutions of the Supreme Government on the subject of the Madras Budget of Projected Public Works for the year 1856-57.

The Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council observes, "with much satisfaction," that the Madras Budget has been prepared with the greatest care, that it and its accompanying are perfect in form, and complete in all their details; the secretary is moreover directed to "record the high commendation of the Government of India for the admirable manner in which the Madras Public Works Budget has been presented." He is also happy to add "that a copy of this budget will be forwarded to the other Governments, as a model for their imitation." The proposed projects are approved of with a few exceptions; but, for the present, the prohibition to commence new works conveyed in letter No. 2,048, dated 6th May, must be considered still in force, notwithstanding the general sanction now accorded to particular projects.

The new projects submitted and reported on are of five classes, irrigation works, navigation works, trunk roads, district roads, and buildings.

1.—IRRIGATION WORKS.

The project of the continuation of the southern high level channel from the Kistnah Anicut (Rs. 3,26,100) will be recommended for the approval of the Honourable Court.

The projected anicut at Streveigoontum across the Tambre-poorny river (Rs. 3,85,000) will be recommended for sanction.

To the projected Kistna Anicut channel from Vullabapooram to tide water (Rs. 1,39,700) the Government of India is willing to accord a general sanction, but remarks that the project is not yet complete, as it is wanting in some details pointed out. It is a part of the development of the entire Kistnah Anicut scheme.

The Government of India approve of the Poiney Anicut channel project for North Arcot (Rs. 1,53,283), and will recommend it to the Honourable Court.

The estimate of Rs. 64,898 for repairing, improving, and extending the Calingaroyen Channel, in the Coimbatore district, is sanctioned; and as the work may be considered in the light of a renewal or restoration rather than that of a new work, the Supreme Government do not object to the proposed expenditure of Rs. 40,000 during the current official year.

In this division of the budget another work had been proposed, —embanking the Mehanuddee, in the Ganjam district, Rs. 64,840. The Supreme government had already, in March 1856, confirmed the advance by the Madras Government of Rs. 30,000 for this work; but doubts were then expressed by the Government of India as to the propriety of commencing a system of embankment in the Mahanuddee, and attention was directed to copies of papers connected with the abandonment of part of the embankments on the Damoodah river. Additional information was called for, which has not been rendered fully. The Government of India withhold its sanction for any further outlay on this project till satisfactory and full information shall have been furnished, and till it shall be shown that the evils attendant upon the Damoodah embankments are not likely to result in this case.

2.—NAVIGATION WORKS.

The Eastern Coast Canal from India to the Pondicherry frontier (Rs. 3,75,000), proposed extension of. On this project the Government of India desire to be furnished with further information, before recommending it to the Court of Directors. First, the Supreme Government observe, the canal passes the necks of several backwaters open to the sea, and therefore affected by the tides, and it is not clear how its level can be steadily maintained, unless there be a lock at each point when it enters and emerges from these tidal lagoons. Besides, there is no specification of the works: and the estimate is a very general one. Presumably, it may be an abstract of more detailed calculations that have been well considered by the chief engineer; but there is no evidence from the papers submitted that such has been the case; and, without further details, the Government of India are of opinion the project cannot be recommended, nor would it be accepted by the Honourable Court.

The project for the improvement of the Coast Canal, between Madras and Amencacivil, appears to be essential for the perfection and maintenance of a valuable line of communication. The estimate, amounting to Rs. 72,800, is therefore sanctioned; and the work, as one of maintenance, is exempted from the prohibition on the commencement, at present, of new projects.

The proposed work (two locks and calingulahs) in the Aukeed Canal, and embanking the Weyairoo (Rs. 64,820), a project for keeping open navigable communication from the Weyairoo into the Colair Lake and the sea, is believed to be one of considerable importance; but before according their sanction to it the Government desire to be furnished with a statement of the nature and extent of the expected traffic, and the probable returns.

A project for increasing the width of the Palsole Canal (Rs. 57,280) is sanctioned.

The proposed canal from the Tuddy river to Coomtah (Rs. 36,021) appears to the Governor-General to provide for very useful objects, and to be well calculated to facilitate commerce. It is, therefore, sanctioned. A light toll is to be levied on this canal,—and it is essential that such tolls should be imposed on all canals of navigation as will defray the cost of maintenance and afford a fair return for the outlay on the work. This is considered the best test. If the facilities afforded to traffic are not worth more than the cost of the work, the work itself is a loss to the nation. If they are worth more the traffic can well afford to pay the cost and still be a gainer. A toll on a canal can be cheaply levied at a very little inconvenience to anybody. The attention of the Madras Government is particularly directed to these remarks.

3.—TRUNK ROADS.

The first proposition is for additional metalling to a part of Trunk Road No. 1. It was parallel to the railroad; has a present metalling of six yards; its original width was eight yards. The Government of Madras thinks its present state inadequate to the requirements of the traffic upon it, and recommend an additional metalling for sixty-seven miles between the presidency limits and Arcot. The Government of India think 18 feet should be sufficient of metalling for a road running parallel to a railroad; and their decision is suspended till the actual effect of the railroad in the traffic of the road is ascertained. The estimate was for Rs. 55,690. An estimate amounting to Rs. 3,26,723 is submitted for sanction for parts of Trunk Road No. 6, leading from Madras to the Bengal frontier. In this estimate six several great works are proposed. The first is for a raised causeway and bridges over the Puringadee backwater in Chingleput, at Rs. 32,023. This the Government of India regard as a work standing by itself, being one great improvement of a bad part of an existing bridged road 113 miles long, consisting of a raised causeway and two bridges. Next is an estimate for masonry work (Rs. 84,580) between Cooroor and the Moodegunda river: this is sanctioned, Rs. 50,000 to be expended in the present year. For the four following works the sanction of the Hon. Court will be requested: masonry works between Soobarum and Chittavalsah (Rs. 31,910); formation of the road between Chittavalsah and Chicacole (Rs. 93,460); completing the road between Chicacole and Sunthoshapooram (Rs. 37,200); and Custom between Sunthoshapooram and Dendagudda (Rs. 46,550).

The estimate (Rs. 89,434) for masonry work to complete the Trunk road from Ongole to Pondgul, on the south bank of the Kistnah, is sanctioned.

A project for a bridge of 45 inches of 15 yards span, over the Pennam river, on the Madras and Trichinopoly road (Rs. 1,06,333), is recommended for the approval of the Court of Directors; but the Government of India remark that some doubt is felt regarding the sufficiency of the foundations, in the probable event of sand being found in the river bed to a greater depth than that of the substructure.

An estimate for a bridge over the Vellam, at Tooloodoor, on the same road. It is sanctioned (Rs. 37,263).

A project for additional metalling between Oolundoorpet and Samaveram, a distance of 65 miles, on the Madras and Trichinopoly road, is sanctioned (Rs. 37,313). Projects for bridges across the Pennam and Guddlum rivers, on Trunk road (Rs. 46,901 and Rs. 25,869), are sanctioned. An estimate of Rs. 1,28,753 provides for masonry works for the completion of Trunk road No. 11, between Chittoor and Cuddapah, 99 miles. It includes 16 bridges and 44 tunnels (from one vent of 3 feet space to three of 6 feet). Recommended to the Honourable Court. The remark regarding apparent deficiency of foundation applying to the whole of the designs for these bridges.

4.—DISTRICT ROADS.

Road from Vizagapatam to Polaputty (Rs. 45,750), sanctioned.

Road from Masulipatam to Ibahampatam (Rs. 43,250), sanctioned.

Bridge over the Boogaroo between Vellore and Cuddapah (Rs. 38,558), sanctioned.

The sanction of the Government of India is withheld from project for a road from Gooty to Hoyalcharoo in Bellary (Rs. 31,100), it being an isolated project for one work, of which the following also is a part; an estimate for completing the road from Cuddapah to Tolapodal on the Bellary frontier: both forming a road from Cuddapah to Bellary. Sanction withheld. A complete project should be submitted.

An estimate (Rs. 59,250) is sanctioned for bridging the Bellary and Hemsagur roads.

An estimate for a bridge over the Cooum at Dacumbode Chingleput (Rs. 26,860), sanctioned.

The following estimates also are all sanctioned:—	Rs.
Road from Trivaloon to the Palan Anicut	38,600
Road from Chingleput to Tateray	41,130
Bridge across the Palan at the Anicut	94,400
Bridge over the Vellam on the Southern Coast road	35,020
Road from Trichinopoly and Salem boundary	50,000
Road from Trichinopoly to join trunk road No. 9	43,600
Bridge over the Vigary River	42,200
Pulkanooth and Nellacottah road	25,560
Road from Palamcottah to Tuticories	67,361
Bridge over the Amravaty	63,830
Bridging the Guersappah Ghat road	25,994

5.—BUILDINGS.

The proposed buildings for the sappers and miners at Dowlaishwarum (Rs. 47,028) being of suitable design, and necessary to carry out a measure approved by the honourable Court, are sanctioned,—the works to be carried to completion in the present year.

The new hospital for the European troops at Bellary (Rs. 82,330) is sanctioned.

As to the projected improvements to the Dragoon barracks at Bangalore (Rs. 1,55,600), the Madras Government is referred to separate letter No. 3134, the work as therein to be proceeded with.

A project for building married men's quarters in the Dragoon barracks at Bangalore (Rs. 90,820) is necessarily postponed under recent orders from the honourable Court, for whose sanction, however, it will be immediately and strongly recommended.

As to the project for the proposed alterations and additions at the Sea Custom House (Rs. 70,040), the first division amounting in the estimate to Rs. 50,340 is generally approved, and with reference to the emergency of the case may be carried to completion at once. The objects of the second set of improvements (the beach works and the tramway) are also approved of, and the estimate sanctioned for execution eventually.

The new civil auditor's office (37,350) is sanctioned.

EXPENDITURE ON OTHER WORKS, NOT NEW.

With regard to the statement of proposed expenditure on other works than those above named, it shows a sum for Irrigation Works expenditure of Rs. 10,74,173; for Communications, Rs. 20,30,400; and for Buildings, Rs. 6,02,641; making a total sum of Rs. 37,07,214. The supreme Government deem that this statement requires no special comment. No objection is taken to the amounts, subject to the limitation conveyed in letter No. 2048, dated 6th May.

The Madras Government are informed, in reply to their letter No. 829, dated 30th May last, that under the modified rules lately sanctioned by the Government of India, the Governor-General has fixed one lakh of rupees as the sum which may be disbursed by the Government of Madras on works, commenced under the provisions of Rules IV. and V., quoted in their communication.

SIR R. McCausland, it is said, will succeed Sir W. W. Burton as Judge of the Supreme Court at Madras. Sir R. Maxwell will become Recorder of Singapore, and Mr. Chisholm Ansley Recorder of Penang.

THE TANJORE APPEALS.—The Madras papers say that a gentleman of the Calcutta Bar is to be selected to proceed to Madras to represent Government in the matter of Tanjore appeals, which are to be tried by the Supreme Court of that presidency.

LIEUT. THOMAS GAHAGAN, 3rd Madras European regiment, has been brought to a court martial for being absent from his regiment without leave, and having, during the period of his absence, unauthorizedly proceeded to Calcutta, without reporting his departure. He has been sentenced to lose his regimental rank, by being placed at the bottom of the list of lieutenants in his regiment, as they stood on the 17th October, 1856.

THE INOL DISPUTE.—The quarrel between the Travancore and Cochin sarkars, about the stolen images and jewels, to which we have more than once alluded, is still going on, and, we suspect, likely to continue, notwithstanding the orders of the Court of Directors, tardily communicated by the Madras Government to the British resident, as we mentioned before. General Cullen has called upon the Cochin authorities to restore the bimbams and other loot, but without effect hitherto, as they contrive on various pretexts to put him off with evasion and delay. Probably they hold the Madras Executive indifferent, if not unwilling, as to the matter of restitution. We trust, however, that Lord Harris will not suffer the petty State of Cochin to set at nought the behests of his Government, whatever his personal reluctance to interfere in the case may have been. The behaviour of that Sirkar, which has all along amounted to a gross outrage on the sovereign rights of Travancore, is now a covert defiance offered to the paramount power, which ordains that restitution shall be made by the offenders. Should the latter be permitted to persist in their wrong-doing, the only rational inference will be, that the orders of the Court of Directors (or of the local Government) were issued merely for the sake of appearances, and not designed to be carried out.—Spectator, Oct. 29.

AN ATROCIOUS CASE OF BIGAMY.—The Madras papers report an atrocious case of bigamy. A man of fifty, named Kemp, who had been separated from his wife for some years, contrived to pass himself off as a widower on a girl of eighteen, and to persuade her to marry him. He has been convicted, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The information was laid, not by the second wife or her friends, but by his sons by the first wife. Among the evidence produced was a series of letters addressed by the prisoner to his sons in extenuation of the offence. They are filled with such sentences as this: "I adopted the only alternative left by which I could under God's blessing obtain some relief and happiness to my mind." When informed that his sons intended to take the part of their outraged mother, he writes: "If it is pleasure to you all to see me in trouble and suffering, do so. God will look into it." After delivering sentence, Sir William Burton remarked—"No one will commend the conduct of the two sons. They have instituted the prosecution, and not the friends of the young woman." It is said that the sons laid the information in the hope of extorting money from their father.

THE MADRAS LIGHT FIELD-BATTERY, at present stationed at Mhow, has been directed to proceed to Bombay, from whence the European company, with the ordnance, equipments, and battery establishments, will be embarked for Rangoon, leaving the horses, which are to be returned, to be attached to the Bengal battery proceeding to Mhow.

MARBLE PAINT.—The plastering of the Madras cathedral is of a species of material known as marble paint, much used in India. Although the work for the cathedral was executed upwards of forty years ago, the marble paint or plaster is stated to be still in excellent preservation. The subjoined recipe for making this kind of paint, almost exclusive to India, will prove acceptable in Europe:—One coat. One part lime, and one and three quarters of fine river sand.—Two coats. Three parts lime, one part fine sand (polish, and use the soap-stone or stealite).—Three coats. Four parts lime, and one of fine white sand. After leaving the first coat a fortnight or three weeks to dry, a second coat is applied, consisting of one part of lime and one part of fine river sand. Before it has had time to dry, the third coat is applied.

CRIMINAL STATISTICS.—The Madras Athenæum analyses some criminal statistics of the presidency. In 1854, 750 persons were charged with murder, and 602 of them acquitted. Of the number convicted, 35 were sentenced to death, 14 to transportation, and 51 "flogged, fined, or discharged in security." Thirty-nine persons convicted of dacoity with torture, were sentenced to periods of imprisonment not exceeding six months. A case of child-stealing was punished with one or two years' imprisonment. Out of 98 cases of rape 95 were acquitted, and of the three convictions, one was imprisoned for a short time, and one flogged, or fined, or dismissed on security. This state of affairs cannot last.

PUBLIC WORKS.—Our readers will be glad to learn the line of road from Cuddalore, South Arcot, as far as Chellumbrum, a distance of twenty-nine miles, is now open to traffic. This line was formerly almost impassable from heavy sand and swamps; and we understand the government has laid out upon it about Rs. 45,000. A great portion is made with raised embankment over swampy ground. There has also been built one bridge of five arches, each of thirty feet span; three smaller bridges; and twenty-nine large road-tunnels. This work has been executed during the past year by Mr. Norfor. This gentleman has also, we understand, completed the foundations and raised the piers of a bridge over the Poeniar river, north of Cuddalore. This bridge will have twenty-one arches of forty-five feet span. Eight miles north of this there is another large bridge in progress by the French Government; and both these bridges are expected to be completed next year, when the whole line of road will be open from Madras, via Tindevanum, Pondicherry, and Cuddalore, as far as the Tanjore district, which will be connected by the fine bridge of thirty-nine arches over the Coleroon, to be open, it is said, about May next.—Athenæum.

CONFLAGRATION OF THE SHIP "ROYAL FAMILY."

Intelligence of the complete destruction by fire of the fine ship Royal Family, Capt Harrison, on the 18th October, in lat. 11° N., long. 85°, while on a voyage from Calcutta, is announced. The Royal Family was nearly a new ship, between 800 and 1,000 tons burden, the property of Mr. J. R. Watkins, Lime-street. She left London in the early part of last March, with passengers, &c., for Bombay, thence proceeded to Calcutta, and was on her return voyage when the occurrence took place which ended in her total loss. The particulars of the wreck will be found in the subjoined copy, written by her commander, Captain Harrison:—

"We sailed from Calcutta on Oct. 21, with a general cargo of sugar, gunny bales, &c., for Bombay. On the 30th the second officer observed smoke issuing from the fore-hatchway, and instantly reported the discovery to me. We took off the fore-cuttle hatch, when a quantity of smoke rushed up. No fire, however, could be discovered at that place. The hatch was immediately replaced, and we began with the force-pump to pour water down the fore-hatchway, keeping the tarpauling on, except just in one corner, in order to smother as much as possible the fire. Thinking that the fire might have originated about the lascars' galley on the port side, we knocked holes in the floor-planks, but found the main deck underneath it perfectly cool, and without any appearance of fire. At the same time the deck was much heated away of the after-part of the fore-rigging on the opposite side. We bored holes in the deck, and poured immense quantities of water down both with force-pumps and buckets with funnels. At the same time we had a gang of men getting the boats all out, with some wine and biscuit and the water that remained on deck. Having a number of hands on board, we were enabled to do everything that was possible to save the ship and get boats out at the same time. At 10 A.M. the boats were ready to leave the ship. People were working at the pumps and buckets with great steadiness. About this time a vessel hove in sight, which proved to be the French ship Rose, Captain Cotineau, from Calcutta for the Mauritius. I requested the captain to stand by us and take our crew on board, as I felt convinced our ship must soon be abandoned. Shortly after noon the flames burst through the main deck and fore-hatch, and in four minutes the foremast was over the side, and all hands were compelled to take refuge on the poop. At 1.45 P.M. the mainmast fell over aft into the mizenmast-head. Seeing the perilous condition we were becoming in, I ordered the lascars to make for the French ship, which they lost no time in doing, most of the men taking with them their effects. In the course of an hour afterwards the officers and all hands had also taken to the boats, for the ill-fated ship was by that time in flames from end to end. Nothing, indeed, was standing but the wreck of the mizenmast and the embers of the stanchions. The crew all saved their clothes, &c., excepting the carpenter, who lost his tool-chest, and myself, who lost everything both of my own and my wife's, except one small trunk, a bundle of dirty clothes, and some bedding; 500*l.* will not cover my loss. Mrs. Harrison before going into the boat thought of the ship's chronometer, which was consequently saved. There is not the slightest doubt but the fire originated from spontaneous combustion of the cargo.

"W. HARRISON."

THE LARGEST TREE IN THE WORLD.

In our issue of February 9th we spoke of a very large tree, an Adansonia, seventy feet in circumference, that we had discovered in a village about a mile to the south of Oombergaum, in the Northern Concan. This tree may have been noticed by others but we have never seen any reference to it. It is a little to the west of the ordinary road pursued by travellers in going from Tarapoor to Oombergaum. It is not impossible that trees of still larger size may be found in the neighbourhood. We found a number measuring each about forty feet in circumference.

Appended to one of the supplementary notes of Pye Smith's "Geology and Scripture," we find the following notices:—

"The babboo (Adansonia Digitata) is called by Dr. Lindley 'the largest tree in the world; the trunk has been found with a diameter of 30 feet.' M. Russegir in the interior of Africa, 10° N. lat., saw Adansonia measuring 56 feet in circumference, 'exciting the astonishment of the beholder.' The first account of this tree occurs in Cadamosto's travels. This navigator visited the Cape Verd Islands and western coast of Africa in 1486, and there discovered the monstrous baobab, whose trunk was 17 cils (about 30 English feet) in diameter. Sprengel says: 'Of this tree we know only one species, the Adansonia Digitata. It is the stoutest tree in the world, though it has not a very remarkable height. Its diameter is 25 to 27 feet. Adanson saw some which were from 75 to 78 feet in circumference.'

"Barrow saw a specimen at Santiago, 56 feet in circumference and 80 feet high. Adanson calculated that a tree of 3 or 4 feet in diameter would reach a diameter of 6 feet in 200 years; of 10 feet, in 550; of 14 feet, in 1,050; of 20 feet, in 2,800; and of 30 feet, in 5,150 years."

These calculations are somewhat hypothetical. Other computations, of a more scientific nature, have assigned an antiquity of 5,232 years to one of the specimens. But a good deal of doubt has been thrown upon these computations also. Dr. Lindley says, "In many hot countries the difference between the growing season and that of rest, if any occur, is so small that the zones (of a trunk) are, as it were, confounded, and the observer finds himself incapable of distinguishing, with exactness, the formation of one year from that of another. In some plants there is not the slightest trace of annual separation.

The tree in the northern Concan, to which we have referred, is quadrangular in form (as these trees often are), and the diagonal diameter would perhaps be close upon 30 feet. We had no means of taking an exact measurement, but ascertained that at a height of several feet from the ground the minimum circumference was 70 feet. It was a most sublime object. It is very likely older than the Christian era. A man living in a hut at the foot of it said he had lived there all his days, and that the tree was just as large when he was a child as it then was.—Guardian.

FIRE ON THE ESPLANADE.

The range of thatched bungalows on the Esplanade, occupied by the officers of the garrison, was almost entirely consumed by fire on Friday afternoon. It broke out in the cook-room of Captain Cahusac, of the 11th regiment N.I., and in the course of an hour, it destroyed nearly all the officers' houses to the south, in which direction the wind was blowing. The mess-rooms of the 11th and 5th regiments were quite burnt to the ground, and the former so suddenly, that not a single article of any kind was saved from the flames. That of the 5th regiment, however, was not so unfortunate, as the greater part of the mess stores was recovered, as well as the furniture and billiard table. Most of the officers of the 5th and 11th regiments, at present doing duty in the garrison, were burnt out of house and home, and many lost everything they possessed, while some recovered part of their property. Maj. Drummond, Maj. Prescott, Capt. Cahusac, Lieut. Strettell, Lieut. Jardine, Lieut. Hathaway, Ens. Hogg, Ens. Atkinson, and several others,—some of whom are married men with families,—were among the sufferers by this melancholy catastrophe, which has caused great losses to its luckless victims.

The devastation was so complete, that scarcely a vestige of the bungalows was to be seen after the fire had subsided, the ground being covered with the smouldering remains of the burning materials, which it took some time to extinguish. The out-houses of most of the bungalows were likewise consumed in the general conflagration, and carriages and other valuable articles, which it will be difficult to replace, were lost in the flames, in which several horses also perished. The fire-engines arrived too late to be of any service, as the work of desolation was effected in a remarkably short period. The esplanade presented a curious appearance after this unfortunate occurrence, and general sympathy was felt for those who suffered on this occasion. In front of the scene of all this disaster, were groups of domestic servants, who guarded the little that was saved from the bungalows, which, it was evident, was but a small remnant of their masters' property.

Among the hot cinders which were strewn around, the regimental sepoy were to be seen in all directions, picking up what had not been consumed, and removing them to the little depôts collected outside. Others were engaged in pulling down the standing posts, some of which continued burning for a short space. Immense crowds were collected all along the Esplanade-road, who looked on with apparent indifference, and then proceeded onwards. The value of the property lost on this occasion, must, we imagine, amount to about one lac and a half of rupees.—Telegraph and Courier.

THE LONDON MAIL of October 27 arrived at Bombay Nov. 23 (per Ganges).

GEOGRAPHY.—THE PERSIAN GULF EXPEDITION.—Major Barr has addressed a letter to the Geographical Society, offering to undertake any observations the society may intrust him with during the forthcoming Persian expedition. The offer was accepted with gratitude. Major Barr, it is stated, takes with him ample supplies of photographic apparatus and material.

COLONEL LAING.—The Hindu Harbinger, a scurrilous native paper at Bombay, which was some time ago extinguished by an adverse judgment for libel, preferred an accusation, shortly before its decease, of corruption against Colonel Laing, of the Kattiwar Political Agency. The Bombay Government, with praiseworthy promptitude, determined at once to institute an investigation, even although the accuser was notoriously disreputable, and although, as we understand, the charge was laughed to scorn by those who were acquainted with the gallant colonel. We are glad to observe that the investigation has resulted in the charges being pronounced false and malignant. We presume from this that the accuser, at the time of preferring his accusation, had no reason to suppose that it had any foundation in truth. Moral assassins of this sort deserve to be shunned by all honest men, as a plague-spot in the community.

AN ARMY of 5,000 men has for some time past been advancing by the hills of Kohat in the direction of Cabul, so quietly that we hardly knew anything of the proceedings, till a letter from an officer with the force, made us aware that they had got within fifty miles of the capital of the Ameer, without knowing the object or destination of their despatch. Sir John Lawrence was about to proceed to meet Dost Mahomed in person.—Bombay Times.

CENTRAL MUSEUM.—We (Telegraph and Courier) understand that Dr. Haines has been nominated by Government to be a member of the Central Museum Committee, in the room of Mr. W. F. Hunter, resigned. No one has yet been appointed to succeed Dr. Buist, who was removed a short time ago.

EXPENSES OF THE WAR.—The sum of 20 lacs of rupees, the Morning Chronicle hears, has already been sent to the authorities at Bombay for the Persian expedition, and another sum of like amount will be forwarded next mail.

THE REV. ALEX. MILLER has been appointed to officiate as chaplain of Colaba, during the absence of the Rev. P. Anderson.

CIVIL.—On the resignation of Mr. H. Liddell, which takes place on the 3rd instant, Mr. G. Inverarity will be appointed to succeed him as collector and magistrate of Surat, and Mr. C. J. Davies, first assistant to the collector of Surat, will, we hear, be appointed collector and magistrate of Broach, in the room of Mr. G. Inverarity. Mr. Jonathan Inverarity, lately arrived from England, is, we hear, to be appointed extra judge of the Sudder, to clear off the arrears.

COURT-MARTIAL ON MR. RUTHERFORD.—A court-martial has been held on board the Acbar, for the trial of Midshipman Mr. John Rutherford. Captain Powell, president; members—Captain Kempthorne, Captain Frushard, Commander Young, Commander Daniell, Commander Gardiner, and Commander Rennie; Lieutenant Fergusson, officiating judge advocate; Captain Jenkins, prosecutor. Mr. Rutherford was charged with highly insubordinate conduct to his commanding officer, Lieut. Lloyd, in having insolently refused to obey the legal orders of his superior, this being subversive of all naval discipline, and contrary to the spirit and intent of the articles of war. The Court having maturely and carefully weighed all the prisoner had to urge in his defence, acquitted him on the ground urged by his counsel, Mr. Barton, that the Court was illegally constituted, by not having a sufficiency of lieutenants sitting on it when there were not thirteen captains or commanders present, as also on the ground that the charges were so indifferently worded and so inexplicit as not to be maintainable. The trial seems to have been about as singular as any we remember, the Court having literally broke down under the bewilderment of its position. It assembled on the 13th and was dissolved on the 17th, after five days' sitting; Mr. Rutherford having escaped on the ground of technical objections, ably urged by his counsel, Mr. Barton, the merits of the case not having been reached at all. He had better hereafter keep a watch on the door of his mouth, lest he offend the first lieutenant with his tongue, or martial law may reach him, even through the seven-fold buckler of form.—Bombay Times.

FORMATION OF A RESERVE BRIGADE AT POONA.—We are informed, on excellent authority, that a reserve brigade is to be formed immediately at Poona, to be held in readiness to march on field service to Persia, or in any direction that its services may be required, at a moment's notice. This brigade is, we hear, to consist of the 1st or Leslie's troop of horse artillery, H.M.'s 14th light dragoons, and the 78th Highlanders, already stationed at Poona; the 1st company 2nd battalion European foot artillery, from Sholapore; the 26th N.I. from Sattara, directed to march to Poona immediately; and three Native Infantry regiments from the Madras Presidency. Camp equipage for the 26th regiment N.I. has already been despatched from Poona to Sattara, and the corps may therefore be expected here very shortly. The 26th will be relieved by a wing of the 27th regiment N.I. from Kolapore. The 28th N.I. from Dharwar move to Belgaum, and the former station will be garrisoned by the 47th regiment Madras N.I. from Jaulna. Orders have also, we hear, been despatched for the march to Poona, on an early date, of the battery of foot artillery from Sholapore. A number of horses were purchased at this station a few days since to complete the complement of this battery. The reserve brigade will, it is understood, be brought under the immediate personal control of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, who purposes returning to Poona shortly from Madabuleswar, where he is at present staying.—Observer, Nov. 22.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

THE HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE ARMY.

Head-quarters, Bombay, Nov. 18, 1856.—1. The head-quarters of the army will be removed to the Deccan, on the 20th inst.

FREIGHTS.

Our quotations are, to London and Liverpool, 3l. to 3l. 5s. per ton.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Dec. 3).—Cotton Piece Goods.—The market in this commodity has been steady, and prices on most descriptions have advanced slightly. The holders begin to show firmness. Business has been done to a fair extent. The prospective commencement of a war with Persia has caused no material change in the transaction of business, and has only affected Grey Domestics that were being purchased in that country. Grey Shirtings, 40 inches, 4 to 4½ lbs., and 10 lbs., are dull; 6 and 7 lbs. are in very good demand; and 5 and 8 lbs. are in fair inquiry; 45 inches, 10 lbs. are dull, and 7 to 7½ lbs. are in very good demand. Grey Madapollams, 2: 10 16th to 21bs. are in fair inquiry; 3½ lbs. are in moderate inquiry, and 3 lbs. are in great demand. Grey Jacquets of all descriptions are in fair request. Grey Domestics have become dull, especially those that were suited to the wants of the Persian market. Grey T Cloths up to 5 lbs. are dull; while 5½ to 7 lbs. are in good demand. Grey Long Cloths are rather dull, as also 10 lbs. and upwards.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Dec. 3).—Cotton Wool.—There are no stocks of any kind gathering, owing to heavy purchases made, which are being delivered as they arrive. Since the arrival of the last English Mail, prices have advanced, and the market has been very active during the course of the fortnight. We quote Dhollera at Rs. 120, Oomeravuttee R. 111 12, Compta Rs. 114, Broach and Surat Rs. 110, Mangalore Rs. 105 8, and Sawginned Rs. 125 per candy.

CEYLON.

THE LONDON MAIL of October 27 left Galle Nov. 25, en route to Madras and Bengal (per Alma).

EXPORT TRADE.—The Ceylon Examiner has published a supplement showing the export trade of Ceylon, and our contemporary remarks that,—"The result, turned into money value, is large. The 331,518 cwt. of plantation coffee may be valued at 750,000l.; the 114,680 cwt. native, at 215,000l.; the 956,960 galls. of coconut-oil, at 90,000l.; the 1,156,382 lbs. of Cinnamon, at 55,000l.; the rope, junk, yarn, fibre, ebony, horns, and arrack, at say 40,000l.: so that, at the least, our exports were, during the past year, of the value of one million and fifty thousand pounds sterling. Our coffee was despatched to all the five great divisions of the world; that is, if Mauritius be considered as part of Africa. In Europe, the following countries were purchasers: England, France, Spain, Italy, and Holland; which countries also, with the exception of Spain, took cinnamon from Ceylon. America was a purchaser of coffee, cinnamon, plumbago, and junk; Australia of coffee, oil, cinnamon, rope, yarn, fibre, and ebony."

BURMAH.

RANGOON, Nov. 10.—The rainy season here has at length fairly broken up, and the north-east monsoon has set in regularly. The change in the climate is most grateful. The new deputy commissioner, Captain Grant, has arrived from Henzadah, and Major Fytche has proceeded to Bassein. The commissioner projects a visit to Tounghoo shortly via Meeaday, that is to say, across the mountains and along the boundary. The superintendent surgeon has just returned from his trip to Tounghoo, whither he went in a country boat; having narrowly escaped being swamped by the bore in the Sitang river, and destruction by mosquitoes in the creeks.

There cannot be a doubt as to this country being at present in a very uncivilised state. A gentleman lately arrived from Tounghoo, where he had resided more than two years, praised the soil, the climate and scenery, but found that his health began to fail, simply from want of variety of food. Symptoms of scurvy began to show themselves for want of vegetables. The crying want is labour, then why not give every facility to the importation of labourers. Some two or three thousand coolies and carpenters are about to be brought from China to start "Dalhousie" with.

The situation of superintendent of the line of electric telegraph has been conferred on Lieut. Muckenzie, of the 2nd M. European regiment, and Lieut. Rowlandson, of the 10th M. N.I. has been appointed to the same work. He has to erect posts between Pegu and Shoa-green. These gentlemen will simply have to work in the line surveyed by Major Duvernet.

Steamers and flats will leave this so as to bring down a wing of H.M.'s 29th from Theyet-myo by the 3rd or 4th of next month, a wing of the 53rd being expected about the same time from Calcutta. The want of a travellers' bungalow is greatly felt here. Strangers arriving have literally nowhere to go to, and if they happen to know no one at the station, have to beg some one to take them in.

CENTRAL INDIA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

CABUL, Nov. 5.—On the 28th October, Dost Mahomed held a durbar, which was attended by great numbers. He settled a difficult dispute that had arisen between two merchants.

Whilst Dost Mahomed was in durbar, a letter arrived from Golam Hyder Khan from Candahar. On receipt of it, he dismissed the durbar, and held a council with Sirdars Mahomed Oosman Khan, Mahomed Azim Khan, Peer Mahomed Khan, and Syud Mahomed Khan. The letter was read in their presence. It confirmed the news previously sent of the fall of Furrah, Subzawur, and Zurrush. Dost Mahomed said that a force must be immediately sent to Candahar; and, turning to Mahomed Oosman Khan, he upbraided him for being dilatory in the organization of troops, and ordered him to be ready to start without fail in three days; and he said he would send some other sirdars with him to arrange affairs at Candahar.

On the 29th October another letter came from Golam Hyder Khan to the effect that Jelalooden Khan, Hakim of Girisk, was oppressing and tyrannizing over the ryots, who had petitioned Golam Hyder Khan for justice. He, in consequence, had recalled Jelalooden Khan, and replaced him by Abdool Gheez Khan.

Two warlike tribes of Kohistan—the "Punj Sher" and "Pukh-roo"—have refused to acknowledge the dost's authority, or to pay the annual tribute to his officers sent to collect it. These tribes are also plundering the neighbouring people, and merchants passing from Toorkistan. Dost Mahomed has directed Mahomed Ameen Khan (who was previously ordered to proceed to Candahar) to go into Kohistan, and try, by gentle means, to reduce the two tribes to submission, taking from them two years' tribute. Should fair measures fail, then the instructions are to attack the tribes and reduce them to submission by force.

In compliance with the orders received, Mahomed Ameen Khan immediately made preparations to march.

Dost Mahomed has issued a proclamation calling upon all men, from the age of twenty to twenty-four years capable of bearing arms, to come at once and enrol themselves in the new regiments now being raised. He has issued orders to his officers to seize, by force, those who do not come willingly. The people are very unwilling to serve.

The coin sent to Dost Mahomed by the English is being turned into Cabul currency.

Sirdar Rahmidil Khan, brother of Dost Mahomed, is very ill, and is not expected to live. Sickness is breaking out in Cabul. Wheat flour is selling at 2½ seers per rupee (Cabul money); and barley flour at 4½ seers, and Bhoosa at Rs. 3 per kurwar.

Yesterday (the 4th) news came from Candahar, that the Zumeendars and other people in the country about Candahar have rebelled against the Government, and prevent supplies being taken into the place. Grain cannot be purchased even at 4 seers per rupee. The inhabitants are, in consequence, in great distress. Herat news shall be sent the moment my messenger returns.—Lahore Chronicle, Nov. 15.

The following reached us just as we were "locking up."

CABUL, Nov. 7.—There is a discussion in the councils of the Ameer whether he should send an agent to Peshawur to confer with the Commissioner on the three very important subjects, which I have already enumerated to you. Two of them, as Sirdar Gholam Hyder Khan writes from Candahar, and many other noblemen in Cabul say, will meet a ready compliance from the British: these are a sufficient pecuniary aid, and assistance in keeping down tumult on the departure of the Ameer to Herat. But as to the acquisition of the third object, the restoration of Peshawur, great fears are entertained. All the people of Kho-rassan and Afghanistan place great importance on the chance of the latter event. I have said, that a watercarrier has arrived from Herat at Candahar, who says that about 20,000 more troops have joined the besiegers of Herat, but it is still held by Esa Khan. There was a talk that the Russian Government has written to the Shah of Persia. If it be necessary, the Emperor will be happy to send him skillful engineers and officers for the defence of "Aboo Shahye," and to superintend the operations against Herat and Candahar, adding, that in case money and force were required, both would be furnished by Russia to his Majesty for the reduction of the places sought to be annexed in Toorkistan.

The Persians do not bombard Herat, as they say it is the order of the Shah not to molest the inhabitants, but to secure and punish Esa Khan. Provisions are getting dearer; and this only can compel the garrison to surrender the place, and deliver over Esa Khan.

Sirdar Gholam Hyder Khan has reported to the Ameer that Sooltan Jan, with many other members of the family who had deserted the Ameer, have come with some Persians, and the Shah-zadah Yussul's force, in the direction of the Khash road, and commenced hostilities against the son of the Ameer at Girishk. This report has given much concern to the Ameer.

There is a report that Futeh Mahomed Khan, son of the late Akhbar Khan, has gone over to the Shah of Persia; but it requires confirmation. The Ameer is daily engaged in enlisting troops, who are dispatched towards Candahar. We hear that there is great sickness prevalent at Peshawur, and the price of grain is very high. The commissioner has gone towards Kohat to build a fort to coerce some refractory tribes.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 18.

MAURITIUS.

BURNING OF THE "CANUTE."

At about half-past five o'clock on the evening of the 13th instant, it was reported at the Port office that the bark Canute, an English vessel, 619 tons, H. Philips, master, from Calcutta on 27th July, on her way to London, put in here for repairs, was on fire. On the arrival of Captain Wales it was soon found, after examination, that there was no chance of saving the Canute, as the fire was spreading in the hold, and flames were beginning to appear. She was then taken on shore at Fort William, but was not abandoned until every effort had been made to save her. About ten o'clock the fire burst through the deck, and the volumes of flame were seen as if struggling to reach the rigging.

The cargo of the Canute consisted of jute, rice, indigo, saltpetre, &c., and the loss of vessel and cargo cannot be estimated at less than £50,000.

Since the above was written we have learnt that only about ten cases of indigo and shellac have been saved.

The burnt hull, and all the rigging and spars saved, were sold by auction for spds. 2,935.—Commercial Gazette, October 20.

CHINA:

THE LONDON MAIL of Sept. 10 arrived at Hong Kong Nov. 2 (per Singapore).

"A LIVE TIGER," full grown, from Singapore, is advertised in the China Mail to be exhibited to sight-seers for one week, in a mat shed, in Caine's Road, Hong-Kong, admission 50 cents, and sixpence extra at feeding-time." Tigers are no novelties at Singapore, but they appear to be so at Hong-Kong, no great way off.

CAPTURE of trading boats by pirates in the Chinese waters is so much on the increase, that nearly every number of the China Mail records cases.

THREE CORONERS' INQUESTS have been held at Hong-Kong on men-of-war's men accidentally drowned in the harbour. Mr. Ellis, of the Minden, was drowned in attempting to land from his boat at Pedder's wharf. The landing-place at Pedder's wharf has been long pronounced unsafe.

SUICIDE OF A SEAMAN.—A seaman named Frank Williams, a prisoner in the gaol of Hong-Kong, on the charge of stabbing an American at Whampoa, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, which he had been permitted to retain on his person by the negligence of the gaol authorities.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON.

FRIDAY, January 2, 1857.

THE QUEEN'S AND THE COMPANY'S MILITARY SERVICES.

WE understand that a reciprocity treaty is about to be concluded between the authorities at the Horse Guards and the Court of Directors of the East-India Company. Under its provisions, youths who have passed the prescribed examinations at Sandhurst for commissions in the Royal army, will be deemed qualified for direct cadetships to India without undergoing a like ordeal at Addiscombe. On the other hand, those who first proceed to the latter institution will, in like manner, on receiving nominations for the Company's army, be considered eligible for a Royal commission. Many a well-qualified youth will thus be spared the harassing anxiety always incident to a trial of this nature, which a second examination would involve.

OUDE RAILWAY.

THE new year opens with a proposal for the establishment of a railway to connect the newly-conquered province of Oude with the trunk line of the Gangetic valley. Of all the branch lines which have been proposed, this is by far one of the most important, whether it be considered in a commercial, social, or political point of view. The country is one of the most fertile in India, though, owing to the insecurity of life and property, it has hitherto contributed little to the commercial resources of India. The western section of this principality was ceded more than half a century ago to the British government, and under the influence of a just and mild administration, Rohilcund has become the "garden" of the North-West Provinces. The other districts which are now brought under the same auspicious influences, will rapidly acquire the same character. The projected rail will connect the old and the new districts with the line of communication which will transport their exuberant produce to the port of Calcutta. Oude is, moreover, the chief recruiting field of the Bengal army; the number of Oude soldiers in its ranks is seldom less than thirty thousand, and there is a constant stream of intercourse between Oude and the various military stations at the Presidency. The monthly remittances of the Oude soldiery to their families at home constitute one main source of the wealth of the province, which even the oppressions of the late government could not neutralize. The military and political advantages of a rail to the security of our position in this new province, must be too obvious to every one versed in Indian history, to require explanation. The old Romans considered no province completely under their control, till they had run a high military road through it. The modern Romans are enabled to reduce their new acquisitions to a state of more complete subjection, by the introduction of railways and the electric telegraph. No line that could be projected at the Bengal Presidency, appears, therefore, to present a more inviting prospect for the application of capital than the proposed line through Oude.

The present railway project was commenced in the month of May last, when it was brought by the present company under the notice of the public authorities at the India House, and provisionally registered. The Honourable Court, while fully appreciating the importance of the proposal, was not, however, prepared to extend the principle of the guarantee to branch lines until the trunk lines had been sufficiently advanced. The acquisition of the guarantee, on which the further prosecution of the line is suspended, would thus appear to be only a question of time. As the different sections of the main line are successively completed, and begin to make a return sufficient to cover the subvention of the State, it is to be hoped that the East-India Company will be able to abridge the time required for extending the guarantee to other undertakings. The rail from Calcutta to the collieries will pay its own interest in a few months. Before the close of the present year, the line from Allahabad to Cawnpore will be opened, and it is to be hoped transferred to the category of lines which furnish their own dividend. Thus the demand for interest on a sum little short of three millions will cease to be chargeable on the resources either of the Government of India or the railway company, and the field will be open for the extension of public patronage to other plans of kindred usefulness. Meanwhile, the surveys will be prosecuted with vigour, and the Oude Railway Company will be prepared to enter on the actual construction of the line as soon as the Indian authorities are prepared to encourage it by the usual guarantee.

We are happy to perceive that the Board of Direction is so strong in names advantageously known to the community in India, and there can be little doubt that they will be able to secure the confidence of those who feel an interest in the success of the undertaking. Sir R. M. Stephenson, to whose indomitable energy India is indebted for the inestimable boon of the rail, has happily been appointed the chairman; and this will be accepted as the most satisfactory guarantee for the early and successful completion of the work.

THE RETROSPECT OF 1856.

THE publication of the present number of our paper presents a fitting opportunity for offering to our readers a brief notice of the principal events and improvements which have taken place in India within the year just drawn to its close. The transactions of the period are not confined to domestic occurrences. At the commencement of 1856 we had already entered into an alliance with Dost Mahomed, the ruler of Afghanistan. The stipulations of the treaty with that chief, it will be recollected, were not reciprocal. While the Dost engaged to be the friend of the friends and the enemy of the enemies of the British Government, the latter simply promised to respect the territories of Afghanistan, and not to interfere in their administration. We are not, therefore, bound to defend those territories in the event of attack, nor does it necessarily follow that the enemies of Dost Mahomed are to be regarded as the enemies of Great Britain. Nevertheless, no sooner was Afghanistan menaced by Persia than preparations were set on foot for the organization of a British armament, which is now engaged in protecting the remotest frontiers of the dominions of our ally. Such policy is, doubtless, in accordance with the interests of India. War with Persia being declared by Great Britain, Dost Mahomed, under the conditions of the treaty, becomes the enemy of that country, and is consequently bound to resist the forces of the Shah whenever his assistance may be required for that purpose. Such a requisition, however, may probably never be made. Bushire, when captured by the British, will doubtless be retained, and the command of this entrance into Persia, coupled with its easy communication with Bombay, will probably do more to paralyze the aggressive spirit of both Persia and Russia in the East, than the hostile array of the whole Affghan army between Herat and the outlets of the Bolan and Khyber Passes.

From the only foreign expedition of the year we pass to events which have transpired on the continent of India. Among these the most important are those resulting from our political relations with native states. The kingdom of Oude, it is well known, had been distracted during a long series of years by unparalleled misgovernment. By a treaty concluded in 1801, the British Government were bound to protect the sovereigns of that country against both foreign and domestic enemies, and unhappily for the people of Oude, this obligation had been but too faithfully observed. On the other hand, the sovereigns of Oude had engaged to establish a system of administration which should be conducive to the prosperity of their subjects; and this chief and vital stipulation of the treaty had been deliberately and systematically violated by every successive ruler. For more than half a century the people were represented as being the victims of incompetency, corruption, and tyranny, without remedy or hope of relief. During the whole of this long period the British Government had not failed to labour earnestly and perseveringly for the deliverance of the population from the cruel oppression under which they suffered. Reforms in the internal government had been assiduously pressed by Lord Minto and Lord Amherst. In 1831, Lord William Bentinck, perceiving that every endeavour to ameliorate the condition of the country had been thwarted or evaded, made a formal declaration to the ruling sovereign, that it was his fixed purpose to advise the Home Authorities forthwith to assume the direct management of the Oude dominions. The Home Government justified the proceedings of the Governor-General, and vested him with full authority to adopt the extreme measures called for by the crying necessity of the case. One more trial, however, was allowed to the government of this unhappy country—one more warning given, upon the distinct understanding that it should be the last. This took place in 1847. At that period Lord Hardinge reiterated the menace previously employed by Lord William Bentinck. The King was then distinctly informed by the Governor-General in person, that unless, within two years from that time, the miserable condition of the people of Oude had been much improved, and unless the oppression under which they had long groaned was at least in the way of being removed, it would be the duty of the British Government to have recourse to those extreme measures which, sixteen years before, Lord William Bentinck had declared must be enforced for the protection of the people of Oude. This friendly and timely warning was wholly disregarded, and at the close of 1855 the affairs of the country appeared to have reached their final crisis. Law and justice were totally ignored; armed violence and bloodshed had become events of daily occurrence, and life and property were nowhere secure. Lord Dalhousie, at length convinced that the friendly intentions of the British Government had been totally defeated by the apathy and obstinacy of the kings of Oude, and that the hopes in which the treaty of 1801 had been founded, of the sovereigns of Oude being able and willing to establish a just and benevolent system of administration, had proved utterly fallacious, resolved that the British Government could no longer tolerate the evils and abuses which its position under the treaty served indirectly to sustain. It was accordingly declared that the treaty of 1801, which had been violated by each succeeding sovereign, was thenceforth wholly null and void. This step having been taken, the reigning king, Wajid Allee Shah, was invited to enter into a new engagement, whereby the administration of his territories should, upon certain conditions, be vested exclusively in the British Government. Wajid, however, refused to enter into such an agreement. There was, then, but one alternative. The British Government, it was felt, must either abandon the subjects of Oude to oppression and tyranny, or it must put forth its power in favour of a people on whose behalf it, more than fifty years before, had engaged to interpose, and must at once assume the exclusive administration of the territories of Oude. The latter branch of the alternative was adopted, and a proclamation issued, declaring that the government of Oude was thenceforward vested in the East-India Company. The document bears date the 7th February, 1856. Its promulgation may be regarded as the closing act of Lord Dalhousie's long and brilliant administration, his lordship having, a few days later, quitted India, leaving his successor, Lord Canning, in the discharge of the duties of Governor-General.

In addition to the extinction of the dynasty of Oude, the dignities of two more of the ancient houses of India have perished by the decease of their representatives,—the Rajah of Tanjore and the Nawaub of the Carnatic. Both those princes died at the close of the year 1855. The Nawaub of the Carnatic, a Mussulman, left no successor. The Rajah of Tanjore, a Hindoo, had no male issue, and had, moreover, failed to secure an heir by adoption. He left two daughters, but as the Hindoo law recognizes no right on the part of a daughter to succeed to a raj, the home authorities, to whom the question was submitted, very properly refused to create such a right for the sole purpose of perpetuating a titular principality at an enormous sacrifice of public revenue. The title was accordingly declared to be extinct. The territorial possessions of the two princes, it will be recollected, were made over half a century since to the East-India Company, in consideration of princely stipends, which have now lapsed.

Under the provisions of a legislative Act passed at Calcutta in 1843, slavery became extinct in British India. It continued, however, to exist in Travancore and Cochin, two of the native states in southern India, where the slaves were described as in the lowest possible state of degradation. The attention of the British Government being directed to this subject, strenuous efforts were first made to procure some amelioration of the condition of the existing slaves. In consequence of this pressure, a proclamation was issued in Travancore in 1853, declaring free the children of slaves of the State who might be subsequently born, recognizing the right of all slaves to possess property, and prescribing regulations intended to preserve this unhappy class from oppression. A recognition of the right of slaves to be treated as human beings being thus obtained, the British Government continued to labour unremittingly for the entire abolition of slavery in these states. It is gratifying to know that the results have been most successful. In both Travancore and Cochin the law respecting slavery is at length placed on precisely the same footing as that on which it stands in British India. There is now consequently no compulsory service, the courts of justice no longer recognize the status of slavery, nor can anything be lawfully done to any person on the ground that he is a slave, which cannot lawfully be done to a free man.

Among the administrative reforms of the year is one of no small importance. Orders, we understand, have been despatched from home for the new organization of the police of India. A deep conviction had long existed, both at home and in India, that this force had signally failed in accomplishing the ends for which it was established—that in fact it was almost useless for the prevention of crime and grossly inefficient for its detection. The causes of failure have been ascribed partly to the enormous size of the districts committed to the hands of the European magistrate, who moreover discharged other miscellaneous duties, and to the inadequate pay of the native police. The remedies proposed are to raise the allowances of this latter class of functionaries, and to transfer the management of the police of each district from the hands of the magistrate to the charge of an European officer having no other duties to perform, and responsible to a general superintendent of police for the whole Presidency. Under the new system, the police force of India will be distributed into two separate bodies, the preventive and the detective, each having its own functions, and each constituted upon the most efficient model. The force of each Presidency will be organized upon a common plan for all India; it will be composed of both horse and foot; its larger divisions will be superintended by European subalterns well versed in the languages of India, and the whole is to be made subordinate to one single control.

Some progress has also been made during the current year to improve the material condition of the mass of the people. Until a very recent period, a great diversity of weights and measures prevailed in India. There were not only differences of standard according to locality, but there were also differences of standard varying with the article weighed or measured. Such diversities were productive of great inconvenience and confusion in trade, and led to serious loss on the part of the poorer classes, who were grossly imposed upon. Instructions, we understand, have been recently forwarded from this country, directing the necessary steps to be taken, in view to the establishment throughout the whole of our Indian possessions of one uniform system of weights and measures.

Authority has also been given for the abolition of the last remnant of the tax on professions, trades, and artificers, designated the moturpha tax. This burden upon the working classes exists only within the Madras presidency, having been abolished in Bengal so long since as 1793, and in Bombay in 1844. Its abolition might be justly advocated even upon financial considerations, its pressure being chiefly felt by humble industry and by the poorest of the people. But it is moreover obnoxious in giving unbounded scope to the petty oppression of a low class of native officials; and its extinction may be regarded as one of the greatest boons that could be conferred upon the operatives of Madras.

With regard to railways, no great addition has been made to the length of line which was ready for traffic at the commencement of the year. At Madras a section of seventy miles has been opened for the first time, and at Bombay the length of railroad upon which traffic now runs has been increased from fifty-one to eighty-eight miles. But, while little, comparatively speaking, has been absolutely completed, much progress has been made on the lines in course of construction. All the companies have been active in carrying on operations. In India, earth-works, bridges, tunnels, and viaducts have been constructed for many hundred miles of line; and in England capital has been raised, and European agency and materials have been provided and sent to their destination. During the year, too, several important decisions affecting railway works have been passed. The line for connecting Bombay with Calcutta via Jubbulpore and Mirzapore has been sanctioned; the line between Madras and Bombay by Cuddapa and Bellary has been fixed upon; and a most important commercial line has been undertaken, which will bring to the port of Bombay the inexhaustible supplies of cotton from the districts of Candeish and Berar. One of the most satisfactory features in the railway proceedings of the year is the gratifying proof that has been afforded of the remunerative character of the sections of line which have been opened, and the unexpected extent to which the people of the country, especially the lower grades, have availed themselves of this means of transit. The working expenses of the Calcutta line have been greatly reduced by the substitution of native coal for coke, as fuel; and it is understood that the net profits of the line to Raneegunge exceed the rate of guaranteed interest, viz., five per cent. per annum, and that the receipts are still steadily increasing.

The electric telegraph has worked satisfactorily, and has maintained its efficiency. Its use by the mercantile community and by the natives has greatly extended, and the receipts have increased steadily and progressively. An improved method is about to be introduced, and in future the lines will be worked by means of the Morse instrument, which is now generally used throughout Europe. The new method will be carried out through the instrumentality of a staff of young European officers, who have been trained and instructed for the purpose by Sir William O'Shaughnessy. Upwards of two thousand miles are to be added to the length of the present lines. The most interesting point connected with the Indian telegraph is that relating to the line from Europe to India through Asiatic Turkey. It is understood that the measures which are to be taken for carrying out this important work are under the consideration of the Home Authorities, and that satisfactory arrangements will shortly be made for the purpose.

Most of our readers are aware that the Public Works departments have been withdrawn from the management of the military boards, and placed under the superintendence of one responsible officer at each Presidency. A new element has at the same time been introduced into the Indian system of finance, and the funds required for the construction of works of this description, in lieu of being dependent upon surplus revenue, are now derived from Government loans contracted expressly for the improvement of the country. The principle of individual responsibility has been found to work well. Since the reorganization of these departments, new vigour has been infused into their administration; and within the current year a sum exceeding two millions sterling will have been expended in the construction of roads, bridges, canals, and other useful works calculated to advance the prosperity of the people.

In consequence of the enormous expansion of British territory, and the large withdrawals of military officers for staff and civil employment, it has been found necessary to make a considerable augmentation to the number of European officers in the Indian army. Under the arrangement, which took effect from the 23rd November last, one additional captain and one additional lieutenant have been appointed to every regiment of light cavalry and native infantry of the regular army in the three presidencies, and two additional captains and two additional lieutenants to each European regiment. Among the notable events of the year connected with military arrangements we must not omit to mention that it was during Mr. Vernon Smith's administration at the India Board, that the first occasion occurred of the elevation of a Company's officer to the position of Commander-in-Chief at one of the presidencies.

EAST-INDIA HOUSE.

A Quarterly General Court of the East-India Company was held at their house in Leadenhall-street, on Wednesday, Dec. 17, 1856, Col. Sykes, Chairman of the Court of Directors, in the chair.

The minutes of the last Court were read and confirmed.

The Chairman informed the Court that the warrants for the half-yearly dividends on the Company's stock would be ready for delivery on the 6th of January next.

THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

The Chairman.—Notice has been given by a proprietor of a motion, which the Secretary will now read:—

The Secretary then read the following notice:—

"That under the new law, by which the Government appoints six Directors on the Court, there is no longer any necessity for the services of the six heads of departments, with their attendant clerks, who practically constitute the Board of Control. That the abolition of these officers will yield a saving to the people of India of nearly 20,000*l.* per annum, and relieve the Home Government from the injury of delay in the despatch of business, unrecompensed by any superiority of wisdom in its decisions."

The Chairman.—Before that subject is discussed I wish to say a word.

Mr. Lewin.—I rise to order. I wish to point out to the Court that the notice of motion given by me has not been advertised as required by the By-laws of the Court.

The Chairman.—The substance of the notice was advertised, which was all that was required.

Mr. Serjeant Gazelee was of opinion that every proprietor had a right to have the full terms of his motion published in the newspapers. To compress the words of a motion was a power which ought not to be entrusted to the Court of Directors, or to any of their officials, because the whole effect of a motion might be omitted.

Mr. Jones.—I request that the By-law be read.

The Clerk.—Chapter 8, section 5:—"It is ordered that all notices of motions for consideration in the General Court shall be advertised in two or more of the London morning papers at least three days before the day of the meeting at which the motion is to be taken into consideration."

Mr. Mangles.—I beg leave to observe, that it has been over and over again ruled in the House of Commons that no party has a right to publish a notice of motion containing matter in the shape of an argument; but that notice of the substance only of the motion should be given.

The Chairman.—I wish to submit to the consideration of the Court whether they are of opinion that the motion of which the hon. proprietor has given notice is one which ought to be discussed at this Court? Whether, indeed, it would be right or proper to raise a discussion on a subject which has been already determined by the Legislature?

Mr. Jones.—I presume I am at liberty to proceed with my motion.

Dr. Beattie.—I wish to know whether the hon. proprietor intends by his motion to ask the Court to decide upon the constitution of the Board of Control?

Mr. Mills.—I think this is not a subject to be discussed, especially in so thin a Court. Therefore I move that the Court do adjourn.

Mr. Jones.—I beg to make one observation on that motion. When the case of the pension to Lord Dalhousie was before the Court there was as thin an attendance as there is now; but I did not avail myself of it, although I was opposed to the proposition then before the Court. I do, therefore, consider that the course now taken is a very shabby proceeding.

Mr. Serjeant Gazelee.—This conduct is enough to make a man move that the Court be abolished, and I have a great mind to give notice of a motion to that effect.

The Chairman.—There being only fifteen proprietors present (twenty constituting a quorum), I declare the Court to be adjourned.

BEATTIE v. CARMICHAEL.

Mr. Bovill and Mr. Wordsworth appeared for the plaintiff, Mr. Wilde and Mr. Lush for the defendant.

The plaintiff is a retired medical officer of the East-India Company's service, and this was an action to recover 1,948*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.* from the defendant, a Calcutta merchant, as money entrusted to him by the plaintiff while in India for investment in "exchange operations." These operations were conducted through the agency of Mr. Low, in London, and that gentleman having failed, the question arose whether he was to be considered as the agent to the plaintiff or the defendant. By the consent of the learned counsel on both sides, a verdict was taken for the plaintiff for the full amount of his claim, subject to the opinion of the Court upon a special case.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY. DECEMBER 29.

(Before Mr. Commissioner Goulburn.)

IN RE SYERS, WALKER, AND SYERS.

The bankrupts were merchants in Bell-alley, Lombard-street. Debts to the amount of 80,000*l.* were now proved against their estate, and Mr. James Broad, iron merchant, of Drury-lane, and Mr. W. Solley Grey, of Cullum-street, were chosen assignees.

Mr. Linklater, for the assigness, said the total amount of debts and liabilities was 170,000*l.*, and the assets 34,000*l.*

His Honour thought the assets rather shadowy, and granted an allowance of 3*l.* per week, to be increased to 5*l.* per week should the bankrupts' accounts be duly filed at the examination meeting.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, DECEMBER 19.

MICHAEL V. GILLESPIE.

This was an action to recover freight on a time policy effected on the ship, Charles Kerr, chartered with a cargo of coals, from Shields to Aden, which was alleged to be lost by the perils of the seas. The defendant pleaded that the cargo was not lost by the perils of the seas, that the ship was unseaworthy within the knowledge of the plaintiff when the policy was effected, that she was overlaiden, and that the plaintiff had concealed the fact that the ship had sprung a leak in the Tyne when she was insured.

The plaintiff is a shipowner in London, and the owner of the Charles Kerr, which he purchased in 1851 for 1,050*l.* Early in 1852, he entered a charter to convey a cargo of coals to Aden from the Tyne. While in the Tyne the ship was found to be leaky, and measures were taken to stop the leak.

Having taken on board a cargo of coals, the plaintiff insured the ship, in a time policy, in the Whitby Insurance Association for 300*l.*, to cover the freight. The ship, having sailed on the 25th of January, 1852, encountered a frightful storm for about fourteen days, and put into Cuxhaven, where she struck on a bank, with 15 feet water in her hold. She was dragged over the mud into the harbour, and her cargo there taken out of her, and the ship was pumped dry and repaired. The coals, however, were very wet with sea-water, and the captain was advised that it was dangerous to reshipe them in that condition, as they were likely to ignite from spontaneous combustion; and it being deemed impossible to wash the salt out of them, or dry them, the cargo was not reshipped, and the plaintiff sought to recover, on his policy of insurance, as for a total loss of freight. The defendant is a member of the Whitby Insurance Association, and it was sought to recover this sum from him. The defendant's case was, that the plaintiff knew of the leaky state of the ship, and had directed his Captain (Sergeant) in case anything should happen to the ship, to let her go down rather than have a general average; that the ship was a weak vessel and badly caulked; and it was also contended that the coals might well have been reshipped; that it was quite possible that the ship might have earned freight in their carriage to their destination; that the coals, if washed with fresh water and dried, would not be in danger of spontaneous ignition; and that they had in fact become dry. On all these points there was much conflicting evidence. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff on all the issues, and that the ship was seaworthy.

GOVERNOR STEPHENSON, of British Honduras, has been appointed to the Mauritius.

THE IMAUM OF MUSCAT has refused tribute to Persia, declaring that the sultan is his sole Suzerain, and to him he owes fealty and allegiance.

PASSPORTS.—By a recent decision of the French Government, travellers coming from England, and proceeding direct to Belgium or Germany by Boulogne and Calais, or vice versa, are not required to have their passport visé by the French consul. A similar facility is afforded in Belgium.

THE SUZ CANAL.—Orders have been given to collect, on the banks of the Nile, all the materials necessary for the execution of the fresh-water canal. The works are to commence when the waters are sufficiently low to permit them,—that is, towards the month of February.

OPIMUM FOR HOME CONSUMPTION.—From an official document, just published, it appears that in the eleven months ended the 30th ult., the quantity of opium imported was 62,054 lbs., of which 39,997 lbs. were entered for home consumption.

MAILS FOR INDIA. ALTERED REGULATIONS.—The mails for India, &c., via Marseilles, which are at present forwarded from London on the morning of the following day (Monday), whenever the 10th or 26th of the month falls on a Sunday, will in future, on such occasions, be made up at the General Post-office, and despatched on the evening of Monday, when the 20th or 26th falls on a Sunday.

THE FRENCH IN CHINA.—M. de Concy, French consul general in China, has received orders to demand reparation from the Emperor of China for the death by violence of the Abbé Chappelsaine, who fell a martyr to his religion. This demand will be supported by the French squadron, charged to compel the Emperor of China to allow a representative of France to reside at Peking, a privilege which Russia alone has hitherto enjoyed (?).—Courrier de Lyon.

APPOINTMENTS.—Downing-street, Dec. 17.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Stephenson Villiers Surtees, Esq., to be Chief Judge, and J. E. Remono, Esq., to be First Puisne Judge, of the Supreme Court of the Island of Mauritius. Her Majesty has also been pleased to appoint Giovanni Conti, LL.D., to be one of the judges for the Island of Malta. Her Majesty has been further pleased to appoint Charles Ambrose Lorenz, Esq., to be a member of the Legislative Council of Ceylon; and Hugh Low, Esq., to be a member of the Legislative Council of Labuan. The Queen has been also pleased to approve of Mr. Gideon S. Holmes as Consul at the Cape of Good Hope for the United States of America.

MRS. REVELL, the wife of a retired officer of the East-India Company's service, residing at Jersey, whilst making some purchases some time since, was accused by the shopkeeper of taking a necktie, value 2s. 6d., without paying for it, the same having been found upon her person. The case was taken before the court, and the lady admitted to bail in 100l. After continued adjournments for the last 18 months (in which there were 29 sittings), the case was again called for on the 10th December, when it was discovered that Mrs. Revell had left the island in the mail packet of the 8th. The Attorney-General has declared the bail forfeited, and issued a writ of prise de corps against Mrs. Revell. This process will justify any one arresting the accused party. In addition to the obloquy cast upon the family, costs have been entailed upon them amounting to nearly 400l.—Grindlay's Home News for India.

THE SUGAR DUTIES are to be reduced in April. Last year they produced 5,227,066l.

THE WILL OF VISCOUNT HARDINGE has been proved in London: the property is sworn under 80,000l.

STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS.—Her Majesty has presented this institution with a donation of 200l., to which H.R.H. Prince Albert has added 100l. The Goldsmiths' Company has also presented the above institution with a liberal donation.

CAPT. A. J. KELSO.—We have the pleasure to state that this officer has reported his arrival at the India House. It will be remembered that some months since the Madras papers reported the death of Captain Kelso, 3rd Light Cavalry, on board the Barham, on the 4th April last.

EGYPT.—The King of Prussia recently sent some fine porcelain vases to the Viceroy of Egypt: in return, Said Pasha is about to present four Arabian horses to the king—steeds of unrivalled beauty and excellence.

INVALID ESTABLISHMENTS.—Some anxiety appears to exist among invalid officers that their position may in some degree be effected by the proposed alterations in the constitution of the invalid establishments. We are enabled to state positively that, whatever changes may be ultimately decided on, should they even amount to the abolition of those establishments, which is by no means probable, the allowances and privileges of present incumbents will remain untouched. Any other course of proceeding would be contrary to the invariable practice of the Honourable Court.—Grindlay's Home News.

POWER TO ATTACH PAY AT THE INDIA HOUSE.—It will be recollected that some time since a judgment creditor attempted to attach the pension of a retired civilian, and failed, the judge having, without calling upon the Company to argue the question, dismissed the summons. A similar course has recently been adopted to secure for a creditor the pay of an officer at home on sick certificate; and although it was generally considered that the proceeding could not be supported, it was expected the case would be tried. The creditor having, however, also arrested the officer, was prevented settling the question, which still remains open; but little doubt, however, is felt, should any creditor be disposed to incur the expense, that the attempt will fail.—Ibid.

IRISHMEN IN INDIA.—The following narrative is condensed from the Freeman's Journal:—"Sir William Brooke O'Shaughnessy, our distinguished countryman, on whom her Majesty has just conferred the honour of knighthood, is a native of Limerick, and obtained the appointment of assistant-surgeon in the East-India Company's service in 1830; nearly at the same time he became physician to Sir Charles (afterwards Lord) Metcalfe, Governor of Agra. A medical college having been established in Calcutta for the education of natives, he was appointed its professor of chemistry. His taste and genius being directed to scientific pursuits, he acquired a distinction that at once pointed him out as the fittest person to superintend the laying down the electric telegraph, when it was decided to extend to India the advantages of that discovery. Accordingly, in 1850, a line was laid under his directions from Calcutta to Diamond Harbour, at the mouth of the Ganges, from which the mercantile body of that city derived so much benefit, that they presented him with a sum of 2,000l., and, as he was then proceeding to London, requested he would sit for his portrait to one of the first artists at their expense; it is now in their council-chamber. Under the direction of the Governor-General, he has since completed telegraph lines from the seat of Government to all the presidencies. Sir William Brooke O'Shaughnessy is a descendant of one of the most ancient and illustrious of the old Irish families, who possessed a large territory in the counties of Clare and Galway up to the time of William III., but were held to have forfeited them in consequence of their fidelity to King James. Sir Roger O'Shaughnessy, who held a commission in the army of James, and whose portrait is exhibited among their family portraits in the gallery of the Ormonds at Kilkenny, was the last possessor of the Loughcooter estates near Gort, having left Ireland for France after the treaty of Limerick with the army of James, and died there. The estates were held by the crown for some years, until an occasion arose on which it was necessary to bestow a suitable reward. There was a conspiracy to assassinate William at Kensington, called the Kensington Plot, which was discovered, and, perhaps, William's life saved, by a Mr. Prendergast, whom Macaulay describes to be a Roman Catholic gentleman of good family in the south of England. He was rewarded with a grant of the O'Shaughnessy estates. His son, who was created a baronet, Sir Thomas Prendergast, having died without male issue, they descended to Lord Gort through the female line. These estates have recently passed from that family through the Encumbered Estates Court to Lord Gough. We understand Sir William is now engaged in carrying out, by direction of the East-India Company, a direct line of communication from London to Calcutta."

THE COURT-MARTIAL ON LIEUT. H. A. MURRAY DEANE, 22nd Foot (for a report of the particulars of which see Indian Mail, No. 301, Oct. 6) has resulted in the acquittal of that officer on the several charges upon which he was brought to trial, by direction of H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief.

THE "RAJASTHAN" SALVAGE.—The Admiralty Court (Dec. 19) have awarded 500*l.* salvage to the Formosa, bound from Hull to Singapore, for services rendered the Rajasthan, from Singapore to London, in getting her off the Sumatra bank. The value of the property salvaged was 40,000*l.*—Times, Dec. 20.

LOSS OF THE "STAG" EAST-INDIAMAN.—Marseilles, Dec. 26.—The English ship Stag, Captain Clark, coming from Bombay, has struck on the southern point of the rock of St. Estève, near the Château d'If. The water rushed into the hold with such violence, that the captain was forced to abandon the ship. The boats were launched, and the entire crew were landed on the island of the Château d'If. The boats had scarcely quitted the ship, when she sank, leaving only her topmasts above water. The Stag was laden with a valuable cargo of oleaginous seeds, copper, and coppers.

BOOKS.

The Life and Correspondence of Major-General Sir John Malcolm, G.C.B., &c. By J. W. Kaye, Author of "Life of Lord Metcalfe," "The History of the Wars in Afghanistan," &c. In 2 vols. London: Smith, Elder, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

Indian statesmen hold a place peculiar to themselves in their country's history. Introduced upon the stage of public life at an early age, thrust into positions of responsibility and obliged to rely upon their own unaided resources in times of emergency, their mental qualities become soon developed; and, while their contemporaries in England are pursuing their studies and familiarizing themselves with professional duties, they are already actors in the scenes of Indian politics, displaying an energy and decision which have so often carried them, with credit and renown, through seasons of danger and difficulty. This training has produced a class of great men—men of genius and of action—statesmen and warriors—through whose instrumentality the foundations of our Indian empire have been laid and its stability maintained. In the foremost rank of such men the subject of these memoirs takes a place. At the tender age of thirteen he first placed his foot upon those shores which he afterwards quitted with so much honour and distinction. The year after his arrival, 1784, witnessed the conclusion of the treaty with Tippoo. The English prisoners who were liberated on that occasion were placed under the charge of Major Dallas, who had commanded the escort of the commissioners appointed to negotiate the peace with Tippoo. At the same time, a detachment of two companies of sepoy was sent out to meet Dallas' escort on its way from Seringapatam. "When the detachment met the prisoners' escort, a bright-faced, healthy English boy was seen by Dallas riding up to them on a rough pony. Dallas inquired for the commanding officer. 'I am the commanding officer,' said young Malcolm, who then held an ensign's commission." This was his first service. The next four years of the young soldier's life appear to have been spent more in gaiety and in the sports of the field than in professional pursuits; but the turning-point of his career arrives, and we find that a short visit at the British residency at Hyderabad inflames his youthful ambition. "He burned to be a diplomatist." To attain his object he applied with all the assiduity of a young and ardent disposition to render himself qualified for that branch of the service. Having mastered the languages and studied the history and constitution of the native states, he thought his time was come; and seeing, as he considered, an eligible opening, he applied for the vacant post. But he had been anticipated. "He was told that if he had called a little sooner, the assistantship should have been his. Thus he lost it: and so bitter was his disappointment, that on returning to his tent he threw himself down and wept with grief and vexation. But the loss, though he knew it not, was gain to him. It was nothing less than the gain of his life. The officer who had anticipated him had no sooner proceeded to the scene of his new duties, than he was murdered in open court. It was not the man, but the office-bearer—the representative of the English conqueror—who had been marked out as the victim: so Malcolm, had he been suffered, in this instance, to shape his own course, and to succeed in his own way, would have perished instantly at the very threshold of his diplomatic career."

In 1794, Malcolm was compelled, by ill-health, to return to England, and during his furlough took an active part in bringing to the notice of the authorities the necessity of improving the constitution of the Indian army. In May of the following year he went back to India in the capacity of secretary to Sir Alured Clarke, who had been appointed commander-in-chief at Madras. But during his tenure of this office he never lost sight of the object of his ambition, and having matured his knowledge of the political relations of the native states of India, he took the opportunity, when Lord Wellesley landed at Madras, on his way to Calcutta, to place in that nobleman's hands a paper which he had drawn up upon the subject. Lord Wellesley's quick discernment at once gave him an insight into the character of the writer, and at an early opportunity he placed him the high position of assistant to the resident at Hyderabad, the very place where his ambition for diplomatic distinction had been first fanned. He soon proved, under trying circumstances, that the Governor-General's confidence had not been misplaced, and he was held in great esteem by that high-minded statesman. In subsequent operations in the field and in discussions at the durbar he was the associate of the Duke of Wellington, then Colonel Wellesley. Esteem and admiration for each other soon ripened into a cordial friendship which lasted through life. The first political mission in which Malcolm was the chief actor was that despatched to Persia in 1800, when diplomatic relations with that country, which had been suspended since the days of Elizabeth, were reopened by Great Britain. His service on this occasion was warmly applauded by the Governor-General. Eight years afterwards he was appointed to a second mission to the same country by Lord Minto, and in the words of his biographer, "performed his appointed work with vigour and address." Malcolm was, however, the first to acknowledge the unprofitable nature of this measure. Upon leaving the country, he says: "I have now turned my back, and I hope for ever, on deceit, falsehood, and intrigue, and am bending my willing steps and still more willing heart towards rectitude, truth, and sincerity." After an interval of five years, which he spent in literary labours at Bombay, he came to England. Here he sojourned for some months; and after making a tour of the continent of Europe, and visiting Paris after the battle of Waterloo, where he received a welcome from his old friend the "Sepoy General," and then the conqueror of England's deadly foe, he returned to India in 1817, and took an important part in the Pindarree war, which ended in the surrender of the Peishwah and the tranquil settlement of Central and Western India. In 1822 he again visited his native country, and in 1827 he was intrusted with the government of Bombay. His administration of that presidency is correctly described by Mr. Kaye:—

"It was not," he says, "in the circumstances of the times that Malcolm's administration of Bombay should be a brilliant administration. It was permitted only that it should be a useful one. And that it was so he had an assured conviction. He had laboured, though at the age of threescore, with the same unabating activity that had distinguished his early efforts in the public service; the same energy, the same courage, the same integrity, the same steady persistence in right through evil report and good report, characterised all his proceedings; but no man knew better than Malcolm himself how small a place in history is made for the best acts of the peaceful administrator, in proportion to that which is reserved for the achievements of the diplomatist and the soldier."

And now he had done his work in India. He quitted it for the last time, and "he did not lay down the reins of office without the utterance, by all classes, of expressions of sincere regret at his departure, and many earnest prayers for his continued happiness and prosperity." It was not, however, permitted to him to enjoy a long retirement. He lived only two years after his return to his native land, and died in 1833.

The outline which we have given of the career of this distinguished man is sufficient to show that his name is connected with almost every important event in Indian history for the first quarter of the present century. His life was a stirring one, and perhaps there is none which affords a more useful study or more instructive lesson. He was successful as a diplomatist, a soldier, and an administrator. He shone most, however, in the first capacity, and for this he was peculiarly fitted by his presence and frank intelligence. "Quick in his movements, vivacious in discourse, glowing with the fire of enterprise, eager for action, he was just the man to encourage the faint, to stimulate the apathetic, to breathe confidence into all." He owed his elevation to the right direction of these qualities, aided by the thorough knowledge of his duties, and by a devoted zeal for the public service. He was ambitious, and allowed no scruples of modesty to prevent him from endeavouring to advance his own interests. But this was not blameworthy, and never did he desire his own promotion except upon fair and honourable grounds.

The book is one which will not only interest the Indian student, but the general reader; and the various missions to Persia, of which it gives lively accounts, will insure particular attention at the present moment. Mr. Kaye has maintained his high reputation as an eloquent historian, and his readers will find the same clear and lucid statements, the same forcible reasoning, and the same picturesque sketches in which they took such delight in the pages of the "Affghan Campaign" and the "Life of Metcalfe."

Our Eastern Empire: or Stories from the History of British India. By the Author of "The Martyr Land," "Sunlight through the Mists," &c. London: Grant and Farran.

It is a sign of the growing interest which is now being taken in subjects connected with our eastern possessions to see a child's history of India. The authoress of this little book has already gained a reputation for useful publications for children. We are glad she has turned her thoughts to India, and has encouraged her young admirers to do the same by bringing to their notice, in an attractive shape, the chief incidents that have occurred in that country during the last two centuries. The following account of the fall of Seringapatam will furnish a specimen of her style:—

"Seeing the imminence of his danger, Tippoo sent for the principal officers. 'We have arrived,' he said, 'at the last struggle. What will you do?' 'Die with you,' was the firm reply. With perfect calmness the Sultan appointed to each his post, and then quietly waited the result. He had not long to wait. Hardly had the day dawned, when Sir David Baird placed himself at the head of the battalion, consisting of about 4,000 men, all of whom were actuated by the same spirit, which made their general say, 'I conquer, or I never return.' They needed all their courage, for it was a perilous enterprise, to which they had pledged themselves. They were obliged to cross a rapid river before the breach could be attained: and this, in front of the enemy's artillery, was an exploit to make the stoutest heart tremble. But Baird had implicit reliance on the soldiers whom he led. 'Now, my lads, follow me,' he exclaimed; and, dashing into the river amidst the thunder of opposing guns, in less time than had seemed possible, he and his little army had safely gained the opposite shore. Then followed a few moments of intense anxiety. The British column were entirely enveloped in smoke, and were only known still to exist by the cheers which rose even above the roar of the artillery. But the smoke cleared off, and the English flag was seen to wave upon the walls of Seringapatam."

"And Tippoo," said Edward—

"Had met a soldier's death," replied Mrs. Leslie: "surrounded by a small band of devoted followers, at the head of whom he had for some time checked the advance of the left wing of the victorious army, he at length fell, pierced with balls."

Handbook to the Maps of India. By MAJOR H. V. STEPHENS, late of the Bengal army. W. H. Allen and Co.

This little volume is a very useful compilation, and one that was much wanted. It is truly what its title explains, being nothing less than an index of all the places marked in Walker's latest excellent map of India, with their latitudes and longitudes. Major Stephens has taken the wise precaution of giving the various modes of spelling the same place, such as Chanchoor, Sanchori; Minpuri, Mynpooree; Ramnad, Ramnathpuram; Makthal, Mukthul: so that no person, with whom the orthography of oriental names is unfamiliar, will have any difficulty in finding the position of any place that may come under his notice. Every person connected with India, or who has a map of the country, should possess this cheap auxiliary to geographical research.

The History and Conquest of the Saracens, by E. A. FREEMAN, M.A. J. H. & J. Parker, 377, Strand.

This volume consists of a course of lectures delivered before the Philosophical Institution, at Edinburgh, and contains a succinct account of the origin, rise, and decline of Mahomedanism. The concluding lecture is devoted to the later dynasties of Persia and India. Alluding to the form in which Mahomedanism has been established in the latter country, the author remarks,—

"From the very beginning, Mahomedanism lost something of its intolerance. The Moslems have always been a small minority in the country, far smaller, indeed, even than the Ottomans in Europe. But the Hindoo was subjected to a far lighter yoke than the Greek or the Servian. The jégia or capitation-tax had indeed to be paid: but, further than this, the idolaters were commonly not disturbed. It is only in one or two regions that we hear of anything like persecution, while in others we find Hindoos filling high offices, and a Hindoo influence actually paramount in the state. One explanation, doubtless, is to be found in the passiveness of the Hindoo character and the extreme tolerance of the Hindoo creed."

The book contains much interesting information, and the opinions of Mr. Freeman have not been formed without much research and consideration.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE CANDIDATES for ASSISTANT-SURGEON-CIES in the EAST-INDIA COMPANY'S SERVICE, are required to attend for the FIRST EXAMINATION at the East-India House, on MONDAY morning, the 12th JANUARY, at 10 o'clock precisely.
East-India House, 24th December, 1856.

East-India House, 24th December, 1856.

THE COURT of DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby give notice,

That the Finance and Home Committee will be ready, on or before WEDNESDAY, the 7th JANUARY, 1857, to receive proposals in writing, sealed up, from such persons as may be willing to supply the Company with

IRONMONGERY;

And that the conditions of the said Contract may be had on application at the Secretary's Office, where the proposals are to be left, any time before 11 o'clock in the forenoon of the said 7th day of January, 1856, after which hour no Tender will be received.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

AGRA AND UNITED SERVICE BANK.—The Government of India having signified its intention to dissolve its connection with the Government Agency, the AGRA and UNITED SERVICE BANK will, on being furnished with the necessary powers, receive charge of Government Paper, Bank Shares, and other local Stocks, and realize the Interest when due, and Dividends as declared. The Bank will also sell or invest other Securities for constituents.

Forms of Letters and Powers of Attorney may be obtained on application to the London Agent, 9, OLD JEWRY.

When the proceeds of Government Paper or Shares sold, or of Interest and Dividends realized, are remitted by the Bank's drafts on England, or on its Indian Branches, no commission will be charged.

If otherwise paid, or when the Paper or Shares are delivered over, the charge for commission will be ½ per cent.

It has been ascertained from the Government Agent at Fort William that no withdrawal-fee will be charged on the withdrawal of Government Securities in cases where constituents declare the abolition of the Agency to be the cause of their taking that step.

F. R. NEILSON, Secretary, Calcutta.

The object of the Oude Railway Company may be very briefly defined—to introduce into the newly-acquired territories of Oude the benefit of railway communication.

The Kingdom of Oude has recently been incorporated into the dominions of the Hon. the East-India Company, and the advantages of British supremacy will be most generally appreciated by the improved means of communication which, among the other changes, will be introduced.

The late Governor-General of India, in a minute dated 18th June, 1855, states, with reference to Oude becoming a part of the British territory,—“I entertain a confident belief that they (the Hon. Court) will at length see specially accomplished those happy results which Lord Wellesley too sanguinely anticipated from the operation of the treaty of 1801; and that the British Government will then, indeed, become the instrument of restoring to affluence and prosperity one of the most fertile regions of the globe.”

The country lies contiguous to the upper portion of the East-Indian Railway Company's line, which runs parallel with, and at no great distance from, the capital of Oude for about 200 miles, and into which the entire traffic conveyed upon the proposed lines in Oude would flow, at Cawnpore and Benares.

The following extract from a communication received from General Sir James Outram, K.C.B., the English Resident at Oude, upon the subject, fully confirms the accuracy of the foregoing statement:—

“I do not hesitate to say that the early introduction of a railway into that country will do more to secure its prosperity than any other measure that could be devised.

“Oude is an extensive and fertile territory, only requiring improved means of communication to develop its great resources. It is perfectly tranquil, and as secure as any other portion of the East-India Company's dominions; and the Railway Company may rely upon my cordial support and assistance, whenever it may be required, towards attaining so important an object, and securing so great a benefit, to both the Government and the people.”

The sketch map shows the proposed lines of railway; their connexion with the East-Indian Railway, and with the lines proposed by Captain Yule for Rohilund; from which it will be seen that they together constitute a comprehensive system of railways, without any conflicting interests, and each contributing to the prosperity of the other, and of the countries traversed.

The country is unusually favourable for railway works. There are no engineering difficulties. The levels are almost uninterrupted throughout.

The lines proposed to be constructed connect Cawnpore, on the East-Indian Railway, with Lucknow, the residence of the Governor-General's Political Agent, whence three lines radiate—one to Fyzabad, another by Fyzabad, Shahabad, and Shahjehanpore, to Bareilly and the Rohilund Railways; and a third by Sultanpore and Jaunpore to Benares, where it again joins the East-Indian Railway.

The entire length of all the proposed lines is about 450 miles, but the Company propose to commence with the section from Cawnpore to Lucknow, about 50 miles.

The desirableness of extending the railway system throughout India as rapidly as possible is acknowledged by all who have given the subject serious consideration; but the imperative necessity for the earliest completion of the great trunk lines renders it a measure of policy to limit any new lines to the construction of the shortest and most important sections at present, and that their further extension should be dependent upon, and that they should be executed in the order of, their relative importance in the great system or network which will before long cover and connect the entire country.

The cost of these lines will not, it is believed, exceed an average of £20,000 per mile, inclusive of carrying stock; and the practicability of working Indian railways at a moderate expenditure has been already fully established by the experience of the East-Indian and Bombay lines.

In compliance with the principle sanctioned by Parliament with regard to the constitution of the East-India Directors in the last India Bill, and with a view to secure the necessary amount of local knowledge and experience, one-third of the Directors must have been resident in Bengal or the north-west provinces of India.

The Directors are in communication with the Hon. East-India Company, with a view to place this Company upon the same basis as the other Indian Railway Companies, under a guarantee of a minimum rate of interest. Should this arrangement, which is regarded by the Directors as an essential and indispensable condition, not be effected, the deposit of 5s. per share will be returned, less the expenses which shall have been incurred.

Applications for shares may be sent to the brokers, Messrs. Scott, Corthorn, and Scotts, 16, Throgmorton Street, or to the Company's Offices, 8, Moorgate Street, in the annexed form; but no application will be considered unless a deposit of 5s. on each share applied for is previously made to Messrs. Glyn and Co., Bankers of the Company. The deposit will be returned if the application is not acceded to.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

[N.B. This must be presented to the Bankers entire. The applicant will retain the receipt at foot, and forward the letter, when marked by the Bankers, to the Company's offices. The Banker's receipt will be exchanged hereafter for the share certificate, and due notice will be given when such certificates are ready.]

To the Directors of the Oude Railway Company.

Gentlemen,—Having paid to Messrs. Glyn, Mills, and Co., to your credit, £ , being 5s. per share on shares in the above Company, I request you to allot me that number of shares, and agree to accept the same, or any less number, and to execute the Subscribers' Agreement; and, on default, I agree to forfeit the deposit now paid, and authorize you to cancel the allotment.

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS, FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

THE First Number of the Overland Newspaper, which is to supersede the CIRCULAR hitherto forwarded to India by Messrs. W. THACKER and CO., will be published and continued upon the day of the departure of each succeeding Overland Mail.

ON THE 10TH OF JANUARY, 1857,

In entering upon the field of competition with established Journals having the same object in view, it will be required of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. that they should explain on what peculiar ground they lay claim to public support.

Their long and intimate connection with the Anglo-Indian community entitles them to believe that every confidence will be placed in their assurance, that they will endeavour to deserve the preference they seek to obtain; but they are aware, that even amongst their oldest and warmest friends, some practical demonstration of an intention to achieve superiority is expected.

Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. beg, therefore, to state that in their OVERLAND NEWS they propose to aim at a more perfect CONDENSATION of General News than has hitherto been attempted, that they may be enabled to devote a greater portion of their space to COMMERCIAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The peculiar constitution of British Society in India, and the immense impulse that has been given of late years to Railway Speculation, Agricultural Improvement, and Commercial Enterprise in that vast Empire, suggest the importance of a close attention to all these matters, which bear particularly on the interests of the great classes concerned.

From several channels of information, hitherto closed or neglected, the fullest details will therefore be sought.

LITERATURE in all its branches, as bearing essentially on the experience of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., will receive, as hitherto, the minutest care; and as they have been able to secure the services of a gentleman who moves much in literary circles, occasional items of pleasant gossip, which do not find their way into the public journals, will embellish the pages of the OVERLAND NEWS.

Upon all subjects connected with Indian politics, the interests of the Services, contemplated Local Changes, the arrival in and departure from this country of Passengers, by Ship or Steamer, the retirement of Officers of all classes, &c., the greatest attention will be bestowed; while the intelligence from Europe, of a general nature, will be presented in a striking form, accompanied by such Commentaries as may be expected from the pen of an experienced Journalist.

In a word, Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. hope that their Paper will be all that the best papers have hitherto been—and SOMETHING MORE.

The Publication will be of the same size as the ordinary English Overland Papers, viz., a folio of Twenty-four pages, with Supplements when necessary, and it will be issued in time for transmission to India by each Fortnightly Mail, via Marseilles. The Price, inclusive of postage, will be Rs. 8 per annum, payable in advance. Orders to be addressed to Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., 87, Newgate Street, London; Messrs. THACKER, SPINK, and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Calcutta; Messrs. THACKER and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Bombay; and Mr. JAMES HILL, Lucknow.

MESSRS. W. THACKER & CO. have the pleasure to announce the publication of a LITHOGRAPH from the large Oil Painting by LIEUT.-COL. H. B. HENDERSON, Bengal Army, of which attracted so much attention when exhibited at the Crystal Palace.

The Copy has been most successfully executed by French Artists, and will form an interesting memento to all who are in any way connected with India.

The subject consists of a pile of Calcutta Fruits, around which are grouped characters illustrative of the following extract from a 'Journal in Calcutta':—'Our pretty Ayah is constantly taking our child among the servants. The child's bearer is very jealous at this, and hints that the attraction is the Consumah.'

THE THEORY of WAR: Illustrated by numerous Examples from History. By Lieut.-Col. P. L. MACDOUGALL, Superintendent of Studies at the Royal Military College.

London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, LONGMANS, and ROBERTS.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN & CO., in addition to their business as Publishers and Booksellers, beg to remind their Friends and Correspondents in India, that they continue to undertake AGENCY of every description, as well as the execution of Orders from Regimental Messes, Book-Clubs, &c.

Messrs. ALLEN & Co., from their long experience in the East-India Trade, and knowledge of the requirements of residents in India, feel confidence in executing all commissions entrusted to them; and as their mode of business is, to give personal attention to all orders, and to charge the same at the lowest remunerative prices, they must request to be favoured with a remittance (or reference for payment in London) from those parties who may desire to avail themselves of their services, and who have not, at present, accounts with the house.

SURVEYING ARMY APPOINTMENTS IN INDIA.
OFFICERS at Home on Furlough, and GENTLEMEN CADETS, desirous of qualifying themselves for the Diplomas in SURVEYING and ENGINEERING, may obtain the requisite information by applying to Mr. HENRY JAMES CASTLE, Associate of the Institute of Civil Engineers, and Lecturer in Surveying and Levelling at King's College, London, who is at all times prepared to give Private Instruction (or to form a class for practical Field-work) in the uses and application of the several instruments required for Surveying and Levelling. If desired, one or two Pupils could reside with the Lecturer.

TO GENTLEMEN WITH TENDER FEET.
J. CHAPPELL, 388, STRAND, LONDON, BOOT-MAKER, and Professor of Fitting; Successor to the celebrated Mr. B. Smith, late of Great Queen Street, begs to call the attention of such to his method of measuring, by which he guarantees to produce a PERFECT FIT AT FIRST TRIAL, combining comfort with a gentlemanly form. J. C. particularly solicits those gentlemen who despair of obtaining comfortable Boots, as from his great success and consequent increase of business, he is confident of their becoming regular customers. The leather used is dressed so as not to draw the feet or become hard in wear, although it requires blacking in the ordinary way. Established 1825.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS a most excellent remedy for Indigestion.—Charles Strong, bricklayer, of the parish of Burghfield, near Reading, Berkshire, with great gratitude informs Professor Holloway that his Pills have cured him of Indigestion, accompanied with all its horrors, after several physicians had been consulted in vain; for three years he was troubled with these terrible symptoms, frequent vomitings and want of rest, until he accidentally heard of Holloway's Pills, and, persevering steadily with the same, in a few weeks he was restored to perfect health.

Sold by all Medicine Vendors, and at PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY'S Establishments, 244, Strand, London, and 80, Maiden Lane, New York; by A. Stampa, Constantinople; A. Guidici, Smyrna; E. Muir, Malta; and by all European and Native Vendors of Medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

PATENT MINERALIZED INDIA-RUBBER WATERPROOFS, in no way affected by either heat or cold.—WILLIAM WARNE and Co.'s Patent Mineralized India-Rubber Waterproof Cloths, Coats, Cloaks, Ground Sheets, &c., are warranted to stand the extremes of heat or cold without injury, always entirely free from tackiness, and retaining in all seasons the suppleness which is the peculiar characteristic of the patent process. The Patent Mineralized and all other descriptions of India-rubber goods manufactured by Messrs. W. Warne and Co., to be obtained of all respectable dealers in waterproofs in town and country; wholesale of the Patentees, at their Warehouse, No. 9, Gresham Street West.—Factory, Tottenham, Middlesex.

TO LATE RESIDENTS IN INDIA.—TRUE MADRAS CURRY, and MULLIGATAWNEY PASTE and CHUTNIES.—Messrs. BARRIE and Co., Vepery, Madras, to enable their old correspondents returning from India to continue the use of the celebrated Condiments, have made arrangements to forward regular supplies of the above, packed in glass jars for family use, at 1s. 9d. and upwards, which may be had of CROSSIE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, 21, Soho Square; FORTNUM, MASON, and Co., Piccadilly; and of the principal Sauce Vendors throughout the kingdom. Each bottle is labelled, and BARRIE and Co., Madras, stamped on the glass.

SEASONABLE PRESENTS.—The exuberance of the feelings amid scenes of gaiety induces the fair and youthful to shine to advantage under the gaze of many friends, and therefore to devote increased attention to the duties of the toilet. It is at this festive season that ROWLANDS' AUXILIARIES OF HEALTH and BEAUTY are more than usually essential. The patronage of royalty throughout Europe, their general use by rank and fashion, and the universally-known efficacy of these articles, give them a celebrity unparalleled, and render them peculiarly Elegant and Seasonable Presents.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, for the growth, and for improving and beautifying the Hair, imparting a transcendent lustre, and sustaining it in decorative charm.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR imparts a radiant bloom to the Cheek, and a delicacy and softness to the Hands and Arms, and eradicates cutaneous defects.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or Pearl Dentifrice, bestows on the Teeth a pearly whiteness, strengthens the Gums, and renders the breath sweet and pure. Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton Garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers. BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS!!!

W. B. E. N. S. O. N.

J. MANUFACTURER of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES of every description, construction, and pattern, invites attention to his magnificent and unprecedented display of Watches, which is admitted to be the largest and best selected Stock in London. It consists of Chronometer, Duplex, Patent Detached Lever, Horizontal, and Vertical Movements, Jewelled, &c., with all the latest improvements, mounted in superbly-finished engine-turned and engraved Gold and Silver Cases. The designs engraved upon many of the cases are by eminent artists, and can only be obtained at this manufactory. If the important requisites, superiority of finish, combined with accuracy of performance, elegance, durability, and reasonableness of price, are wished for, the intending purchaser should visit this Manufactory, or send for the ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, published by J. W. BENSON (and sent post-free on application), which contains sketches, prices, and directions as to what Watch to buy, where to buy it, and how to use it. Several hundred letters have been received from persons who have bought Watches at this Manufactory, bearing testimony to the correct performance of the same. The following extracts from the opinions of the Press will, it is hoped, be a sufficient guarantee to the public that they may secure at this House a good Watch at a reasonable price:—

NEW GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

On the 1st of February will be published, in one vol. 8vo., with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER

OF

AND OF THE

NATIVE STATES ON THE CONTINENT OF INDIA.

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq., Author of the "History of the British Empire in India."

The work has been compiled by the authority of the Court of Directors, and though comprised within a single volume, it will be found to contain the great mass of information comprehended in the four volumes of the "Gazetteer of India," published by the same author in 1854. This result has been obtained by retrenching some few redundancies, and by adopting an enlarged page and distributing the matter into two separate columns. By these means space has been also acquired for the insertion of much new matter, rendered necessary by the political and territorial changes which have more recently taken place within our Eastern Possessions.

On the character of the work a few remarks will be sufficient. Its chief objects are,—

1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and

2ndly. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these will be added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the Reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which could not otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The volume, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has yet been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India. Its merits have been frequently discussed in the General Courts of the East-India Company, where successive Chairmen have borne ample testimony to the utility of the publication, and where it has been characterized by the best-informed among the Proprietors as "a complete history of India, untainted in any degree by political bias."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THIS Mail may be said to add nothing to the stock of information previously possessed respecting the expedition to the Persian Gulf. Little, indeed, was looked for by the Government of Bombay until the result of the attack upon Bushire could be communicated; but we are informed that intelligence of the fall of this place was daily expected. The last division of the naval force left Bombay on the 13th November, and anchored off Muscat on the 20th. The strength of the expedition, it will be recollected, amounted to 5,670 fighting men, of whom 2,270 were Europeans. The fleet consisted of forty-five sail, including eight war-steamers of the Indian navy. Vague rumours were afloat of preparations on the part of the enemy; one giving currency to a statement that a considerable force had assembled at Bushire for the purpose of resisting the British troops, and that defensive works were being extensively planned and vigorously executed all along the Persian coast; and another representing that very formidable batteries had been erected on a small island in front of Bushire, named Halliday, on which, moreover, a fort had been constructed, which was well manned with both guns and men. Adverting to these rumours, a Bombay journal observes, "Of course a considerable allowance must be made for exaggeration; but this news, taken in conjunction with the contents of a private letter which we have just seen from a member of the embassy at Bagdad, in which it is stated that the war in which we have engaged will be of much longer duration than is generally believed, leads us to believe that the Persians are prepared for a stout resistance."

The only incident of moment connected with the recent rupture with Persia is the capture of Herat by the forces of the Shah; the rumour of its fall, noticed in our last, having been subsequently fully confirmed. The place appears to have surrendered on the 25th October, the Herattee chief, Esa Khan, obtaining terms favourable to himself and family, and a stipulation for the most honourable treatment to the inhabitants generally, the conditions being ratified under the royal authority. Khan, accompanied by his principal chiefs, has since the Persian camp, where they were received.

ARRIVAL OF MAILS.

The Hindustan, with a mail, left Calcutta Dec. 9th, Sand Heads 10th, Madras 14th, Point de Galle 17th, Aden 27th, and arrived at Suez Jan. 2nd. The Singapore, with a mail, left Bombay Dec. 18th, arrived at Aden Dec. 23th, and Suez Dec. 30th. The mails thus brought were taken on to Alexandria; they arrived at Malta Jan. 9th, and Marseilles Jan. 14th (per Vectis). The Indus, with the remainder, may be expected at Southampton Jan. 21st.

with the customary testimonials of esteem, and subsequently despatched to Teheran under an escort of horse. Persia has thus given the finishing stroke to the violation of its treaty with England.

From the North-west we learn that the body of troops under Brigadier Chamberlain, to which we adverted in our last as advancing from Kohat in the direction of Caubul, appears to have marched through the Meerazie valley to Thull, whence, moving onwards and crossing the river Koorum and entering the valley of that name, it had arrived within five marches of Caubul. The force consisted of about five thousand men. Other motives besides the ostensible one are assigned for the march of this force, and among them that of ascertaining the fact whether a route might be found into Caubul by any other direction than the Khyber Pass. News from Peshawur of a late date speaks with some degree of certainty of the intended interview between Dost Mahomed and Sir John Lawrence, the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab, and fixes the 10th December as the probable date of the arrival of the ruler of Caubul. The Friend of India is inclined to believe that indications are observable of the coming occupation of Afghanistan by a British force. The Bombay Telegraph and Courier confirms the intelligence that Brigadier Chamberlain was close to Caubul with a large force prepared to co-operate with the Afghans, and that Jacobs' Horse were gradually pushing forward in the direction of Candahar. "So quietly," observes this journal, "have matters been managed, that the world hardly realizes the fact, that we have close up to Caubul a force as large as that which captured it under Lord Keane in 1839, or surrendered it under General Elphinstone to Akbar Khan in 1842."

From China the accounts are brought down to the 25th November, being about ten days later than those received by the last Indian Mail. These are so far unsatisfactory as showing that hostilities still prevailed, and that trade had been brought to a complete stand-still. The Americans had taken part in the quarrel; one of the reasons assigned for this course being that some American heads had been sent in by mistake, consequent upon the Chinese notification offering a reward of thirty dollars for the head of every Englishman. A more probable cause for their participation in the strife was the attack of the Chinese upon the boats of the United States ships of war. The insane act was followed by well-merited punishment. The following particulars are extracted from the Overland Friend of China.—"Directly Commodore Armstrong heard of another insult to the stars and stripes, he lost not a moment in determining to avenge it, and made arrangements with steamers Willamette and Cumfa to tow the Portsmouth and Lecant up to the forts whence the firing proceeded, viz. the round fort at the head of Fidler's Reach, and the opposite square fort. Drawing seventeen feet of water, there was some difficulty in getting a ship of the Portsmouth's size into position; and the San Jacinto's fourth cutter, with Lieutenant Williamson and Mr. Pilot Ayer, was sent ahead to take soundings. No sooner were they perceived by the Chinese, about nine o'clock on Sunday morning, within four hundred yards of the forts, than they sent three shots at them with fatal precision; one taking the head off the leadsmen in the bow, and the second and third within an oar's length either side. The sounding work was done, however, and at 2 p.m. the vessels got under weigh. The Lerant unfortunately took the rocks, and could not get within range. But the Portsmouth got near enough, and at about 4 p.m. opened a brisk fire, which she kept up till darkness precluded further operations. The Chinese were not silent either, and hulled the Portsmouth ten times, one of the first shots badly wounding a marine. During the night the Portsmouth and Lerant both grounded, and had much difficulty on Monday in getting into such a position that their broadsides could be brought to bear upon the now crowded forts, anxious, apparently, for Brother Jonathan to come on." At this juncture the Commodore was induced to desist from firing until communication could be had with Governor Yeh. A letter was accordingly despatched to the viceroy, demanding an explanation, and twenty-four hours given for a suitable reply. None having arrived within the prescribed time, the Americans commenced with a brisk cannonade on Napier Fort. "This continued for an hour and a half or two hours, until the Chinese were driven out, when the U.S. marines and small-arm men landed with a field-piece at a hamlet a little distance in rear of the fort; two American seamen being shot dead as they were getting out of the boat, by the accidental discharge of a comrade's rifle. Here they were met by some thousands of 'braves'—hardly with what might be called resistance, however, as none of the Americans were hurt. The havoc among the Chinese, on the contrary, is said to have been something awful. Flags had been prepared by the men before landing, on which were inscribed the words 'Remember Mullins' (the leadsmen first shot), and there was no quarter from the hands of his infuriated messmates. With the taking of this fort the day's work ended. Yeh's reply was sent to the American factories a little before noon. In its tone it is said to be most conciliatory and respectful. The Americans, Yeh says, were told some weeks ago they had better go away from Canton, and he, Yeh, was under the impression that they had left: in any way, their boats had no business under the forts—and in short, it served them right to be shot at. Yeh had no apology. Yesterday morning the attack was made on Howqua's Fort. Firing continued for about half an hour only, and was promptly returned by the Chinese defenders, one shot killing two and wounding eight in one of the Portsmouth's boats. It was believed, when the postal steamer passed Whampoa last evening, that the work was completed; the three forts were captured, and American revenge satiated."

The various promotions consequent on the recent augmentation of the number of officers in the Indian army, will be found fully particularized in another portion of our paper.

BENGAL.

TORTURE IN BENGAL.

Dr. Chevers, the secretary to the Medical Board, Calcutta, has published a work under the sanction of Government, on Medical Jurisprudence, founded on official documents, which discloses many fearful scenes. We shall make a few extracts on the subject of torture, all showing that crime is closely connected with the state of the people's minds and morals.

On torture, the practice of which has been denied in the House of Commons, Dr. Chevers remarks:—

"A similarity, almost amounting to identity, exists between the modes of torture practised in this and the Madras presidency, a fact which goes far to prove that these atrocities have been prevalent in every part of India from a period at which the laws, or at least the national customs, were the same throughout the country.

"The practice was doubtless introduced by the Mussulmans. We have abundant evidence, however, that this atrocity has now become intimately blended with the customs of all sects and classes of natives throughout India. The poor practice torture upon each other; robbers on their victims, and vice versa; masters upon their servants; zemindars upon their ryots; schoolmasters upon their pupils; husbands upon their wives; and even parents upon their children. We have instances of torture being freely practised in every relation of domestic life. Servants are thus treated by their masters and fellow-servants, children by their parents and schoolmasters, for the most trifling offences; the very plays of the populace (and the point of a rude people's drama is in its satire) excite the laughter of many a rural audience, by the exhibition of revenue squeezed out of a defaulter coin by coin through the appliance of familiar 'provocatives,' under the superintendence of a caricatured Tehsildar; it seems a time-honoured institution, and we cannot be astonished if the practice is still widely prevalent among the ignorant, uneducated class of native public servants."—Madras Commissioners' Report, p. 50.

THE CHIEF MODES OF TORTURE IN BENGAL.

Scorching various parts of the body.—1st. burning by the heated chillum of a pipe, or kalika. 2nd. by red-hot charcoal. 3rd. by a lighted torch. 4th. by red-hot iron. 5th. by heated oil, or pouring hot oil.

Confinement in a Cell filled with Lime Chunam, is also mentioned by Baboo Grishunder Ghose. In a case tried at Backergunge, in 1847, it was alleged that Lime had been put into the eyes of a man who was supposed to have met with his death by unfair means.

Rubbing the Face upon the Ground.—This is also spoken of as a mode of torture. I, not long since, had a child sent to me whose face had evidently undergone this severe discipline. The fatal case of a man,—in whom Dr. Murry, of Beerbhoom, found the nose wounded, the lips much torn, the upper jaw fractured, a quantity of mud about the mouth, and two contused wounds on the back of the head,—was probably of this kind.

"A common punishment in Bengal is placing spiders, or a kind of beetle called by the natives goorghoora pooka, on the navel, covered with a shell or earthen pot.

"Sticking pins or thorns under the nails is practised equally in this Presidency and in Madras.

"Filling the mouth with pebbles and striking the chin upwards with sufficient force to break the teeth, is spoken of as a Bengali punishment.

"Pulling the hair on both sides (chooldhara tana).—In Bengal this is generally practised upon females. In Madras there are several contrivances of this kind; such as tying two persons closely together by the top-knots, and tying the hair of the head to a donkey's or buffalo's tail. Plucking out the beard (reckoned by the natives a great disgrace) is a common torture in both presidencies. Twisting the ears, striking two offenders' heads together, placing a person in the sun with his hair loose, and compelling him to turn his head rapidly to and fro."

As an illustration of the torture by a lighted torch:—

"In 1845, a well-known housebreaker, of Poorneah, was arrested in the act of committing a burglary, and the brother of the owner of the house, being determined to discover where the rest of the gang had secreted the property, tied up the robber with his feet to one post and his hand to another immediately opposite; and then, with the assistance of the chowkedar and another servant, lit a good-sized torch and burnt him from head to foot. The police concealed this atrocity. A few days afterwards, the magistrate received a report from the Darogah and Mohurir, who sent in the thief in a cart, saying that he was ill with fever. The magistrate, going to see him, found 'his flesh literally burnt off his bones.' He died that night, refusing to say how or by whom he had been thus treated. The Darogah and Mohurir were sentenced to five years' imprisonment for endeavouring to conceal this atrocity by false report.

"The flames of a torch or the oil which drops from it is the manner of torture commonly used by Dacoits to compel persons to give up concealed property."

Of Kishnagur district Dr. Chevers states:—

"In his report for 1848, Mr. Dampier mentions that, in the district of Nuddeah alone, 174 persons were entered within the year as having been engaged in dacoities with torture. In some instances this barbarity has been carried to fatal lengths, as in the case of an old man of Dinajpore, who was so severely burnt with torches by dacoits, to make him give up his money, that he died nine days afterwards; and in that of another aged man, who was similarly tortured in Nuddeah, with so much cruelty, that he died from lockjaw four days subsequently. The only instance I find in which any other mode of torture was employed by dacoits, was one in which the woman of the house had her thigh compressed between two pieces of bamboo, called a cheap, to enforce her to discover her husband's property. This, however, occurred in Assam (Kamroop).

"There is a case in Macnaghten's Reports, in which a Mussulman slave girl, between eight and nine years of age, accused her mistress of tying her with a cord, heating some oil, and pouring it on her. The correctness of this statement appears to have been confirmed by the civil surgeon.

"In 1842, Mr. Kean, of Moorsshedabad, reported the case of a Hindu in whom both hands and one foot were so much burned that mortification ensued. The injured toes, the fingers of both hands, and a large portion of the right hand were thrown off. Mr. Kean considered that the injury must have resulted from the immersion of the parts in some boiling liquid.

"In the same year, the body of a Mussulman girl was sent in for inspection to Mr. J. Macrea, at Monghyr. All that could be discovered was, 'that the hands and lower parts of the arms were burnt almost to cinders.'"

A case by the police:—

"In this Report for the first six months of 1842, Mr. Dampier mentions a case in which the police of Thannah Mirzapore, in the Moorsshedabad district, tied together the fingers and toes of a man suspected of dacoity, and drove wedges between them to the greatest extent of tension. He was then laid out on his back in the sun; this not producing the desired effect, his hands and feet were dipped into boiling water, then the ligatures were unloosened, and bandages, dipped in oil, tied round the fingers of both hands and the toes of the left foot, and lighted. Failing to obtain a confession, they kept him in the Thannah, without any remedies being applied, until the fingers and toes became gangrenous. These parts ultimately dropped off.

"A horrible case of murder by torture, in which this barbarity was used, was brought to light in March last. Some idols and other property, belonging to the Raja of Pergunnah Jaldia in the Maanbhoom district, having been stolen, several suspected persons were apprehended by the Raja's people and brought to his guruh, or petty fortress. They were, one and all, tortured to extort confession. All were beaten and kept in restraint for about three days, being at night all fastened by the feet to one rope. Two, however, being the most suspected, were the most severely treated. Their fingers were tied together and shivers of bamboo were driven between them. This was also done to the toes; boiling oil was then poured on their hands and feet. Upon the body of this unfortunate man being examined by the Civil Surgeon, it was found that the hands were fearfully lacerated as if by stakes or pieces of iron driven through them; besides which he had marks of having been scalded with boiling oil or water. The medical officer considered that the injuries inflicted on the hands and feet of the deceased, were sufficient to cause, and did cause death."

Dr. Chevers further remarks: "The masses have over them a police drawn from their own ranks, and therefore marked with all the features of the national character; they are uneducated." The conclusion Dr. Chevers gives from this is:—

"In their Report of 1838, the Committee on Prison Discipline remark—"The general morals of the people may possibly be bad enough, but an Indian criminal is probably a better man than any other criminal of the same store. His general character certainly differs less from that of the mass of his countrymen than would be the case in more civilized and moral countries. A large proportion of the crimes in this country are committed by persons whose tribe have done the same time out of mind, and they are almost as naturally the result of birth as another man's honest trade. Many more are committed as it were professionally, by the members of the immense confederations, who are not much worse off than other people in matters unconnected with their profession. Owing to feelings and principles there is little or no consciousness of moral guilt amongst these classes, on account of the exercise of what they regard as their proper business."

FEMALE EDUCATION. I

Young Bengal in japanned pumps, flourishing an ivory-headed cane, and whiffing at a first-rate Manilla, looks like a mark of the schoolmaster being abroad. But where's his wife? To see whether there has been any real advance in knowledge and civilization, look for the effect on the condition of woman. Are her customs changed, her position improved, her mind cultivated? The hope that we should reach the females through the men, that the education of the college would tell upon the zenana, has not yet been realized. The enlightened portion of the native community still regard barbarous ignorance the proper lot of their wives, of those who have the first care of their children. Such men will do nothing for the female members of their families, and when a noble effort is made in their behalf by such a friend as the late Mr. Bethune, their influence is thrown in to frustrate success! The missionaries, too, have everywhere, each in a small way, endeavoured to establish schools for the instruction of native girls, and generally confess that little has yet been accomplished. They get mostly the children of the very lowest and poorest classes, who see no advantage whatever in book-knowledge, but yield to the influence of masters or the temptation of pice; and the girls learn to knit and sew a little, and read a little, till in a short time they have to go to their husbands, and then generally all that has been acquired has been forgotten.

Female education seems, indeed, to have made no real beginning hitherto in India. We have not hit upon the right method. We have not secured the concurrence of the people in our views, nor their confidence in our philanthropy.

All at once an experiment is made, at a point where there seemed to be no particular encouragement, and results of a highly encouraging character have at once been secured. The old wall of prejudice suddenly gives way at that point; not because it is weakest there, but because it has been attacked by means very different from those previously tried.

We allude to what has been effected by Gopaul Sing, Visitor of Government Schools in Zillah Agra. On the 30th July last, he reported that fourteen female schools were established, comprising 207 girls, of whom 64 were of the Brahmin, 42 of the Chutree, 45 of the Beynia, and 53 of other castes, including some Mahomedans.

"It would," he observes, "perhaps appear strange that so many persons of high caste and respectability, who have so often obstinately refused to allow their daughters to be educated, though urged by many a noble-minded, influential, European philanthropist, do now send their girls to schools. But those best acquainted with the native character will readily admit that the failure of the influential European in his benevolent efforts for the reform is more or less attributable to the suspicion with which everything coming from a foreigner is received by the natives, and to the want of co-operation of the educated portion of the natives, who alone can understand the value of the reforms intended. If the enlightened natives had shown a little more courage (not in words merely, as is often unfortunately the case), and explained to their brethren the nature and object of any proposed reform, at the same time proving their disinterestedness and devotedness by good example, the condition of India would, I presume to say, have been much better by this time."

It would have been satisfactory to know how Gopaul Sing accounts for this want of confidence and courage. His sketch of his countrymen would have lost none of its interest by being made more complete. It must be mortifying to their British friends to find their efforts and intentions still misunderstood, and those whom they have benefitted still so incapable or unwilling in the cause of civilization. He describes his own measures in this way:—

"The difficulties I had to contend with at first were very great indeed; but I am happy to say that my persevering exertions have greatly removed them now, and that the prospect is very encouraging. The establishment of a little school, in which my own daughters and those of my immediate friends and relations attended at first, like a charm, in a great measure, dispelled the prejudices of my neighbours, and induced many to send their girls also. This example, and my constant persuasion and reasoning, have at last succeeded in inducing many respectable inhabitants of other villages to yield, and somewhat to understand the advantages likely to be derived from such institutions. The statement accompanying shows the result of these humble efforts."

We were surprised to find that all the teachers in these schools were males,—a very novel feature, and one which we should have thought a deformity on the very face of the project. But there is no anticipating native notions. Here is what Gopaul Sing himself says on the subject:—

"Want of female teachers was one great obstacle in the way; but the guardians of the girls composing the respective schools pointed out men of approved character, in whom they have full confidence, and I have appointed such persons only as teachers, and the result is very satisfactory. I also beg to bring to your notice that I have written to several of my influential relatives in the neighbouring districts (viz. Allyghur, Muttra, Mynpooree), and have hopes that they also will exert themselves to establish similar schools for their daughters."

All this is zealous and judicious. Rapid extension was the result. It was reported to Government at the close of September that thirty-two more female schools had been established in the district of Agra alone within the period of two months, and contained 612 Hindoo and 15 Mussulman pupils; the expenditure for each school being a fraction above Rs. 7 per mensem. Lieut. Fuller, the inspector of the 2nd Educational Circle, having inspected a detailed list of these schools and scholars, reported that the girls "belong to the most respectable classes of the native community."

About one-tenth of the number, he remarks, are above twenty years of age, and the remainder vary from six years up to that limit. He also mentions that Gopaul Sing had reported the establishment of a female school in the city of Agra—the lead having been taken by wealthy bankers and merchants; but no male inspector, not even a Brahmin, would be allowed to come upon the premises. Gopaul Sing hoped to find suitable visitors among the more advanced pupils of the other schools. The number of these schools, Lieut. Fuller adds, is still increasing in the district of Agra, and he hoped soon to be able to report the establishment of a few in the adjoining zillah of Muttra.

These reports are highly satisfactory. Government should relieve Gopaul Sing of his ordinary duties as the visitor of a single district, and let him go steadily through the North-Western Provinces as the apostle of native female education. Back him up to establish native girls' schools everywhere as fast as possible: only do not spoil him! Let him have a good reward in prospect. Every native in the education department should also be encouraged to go and do likewise; and those who will not educate the females of their own families will begin to feel, as one of Galileo's inquisitors might (if resuscitated), if he were politely asked to-day to take the chair of astronomy at Cambridge. He would find himself swallowing his errors before he was aware what he was about.—Delhi Gazette.

A BAND OF PERSIAN VAGRANTS.

We find in the Lahore Chronicle a correspondence (obtained from the editor's room of that province), relative to the large party of Persians who made their appearance some months ago in Southern India. The correspondence is extremely lengthy; but as it is not without some interest, we shall compress its substance into a brief narrative.

In December last a party of Persians, consisting of 41 men, 41 women, and 50 children—132 in all—with 75 ponies, entered North Canara, in the Madras presidency, from the direction of Dharwar, in the Bombay presidency. As they had passports from the Bombay local authorities, and were understood to be on their way to the coast for the purpose of obtaining shipping for Mecca, the joint magistrate allowed them to proceed onwards under an escort of his peons. Shipping for Mecca could not, however, be obtained; and as it was doubtful whether the party really intended to embark for Mecca, Mr. Fisher, the magistrate of Canara, arranged to send them forward under escort by the most direct road towards Calcutta, whither, under the above circumstances, they wished to proceed on their return to their own country. They are next heard of in the Chittledroog division of Mysore. There, on the 18th February, a crowd of bazaar people and villagers complained to the superintendent, Lieutenant Dobbs, of having been plundered of food and money by a large gang of Iranee robbers. Lieutenant Dobbs proceeded to their encampment to inquire into the matter.

The Persians had the impudence to assert that they had obtained passports from Government authorizing them to beg, and that, consequently, they had a right to be fed by the villagers, and that they could not exist without each man receiving daily a seer of rice, a seer of wheat, and a seer of ghee, besides a sheep for every four men. The amildar, by the superintendent's orders, proceeded to search the baggage of the individuals accused of robbery, whereupon the band loaded ten or fifteen matchlocks, which had been previously concealed, with powder and ball, and marched off in a threatening manner. But on their arrival at Bangalore, they were, by the direction of General Cubbon, disarmed of their matchlocks, knives, and daggers; and the superintendent of police there reported that, if their ponies were sold, they would have sufficient to pay their own expenses. They arrived at Salem in the beginning of March under a strong escort. Mr. Brett, the magistrate of Salem, brought the circumstance immediately to the notice of the Madras Government, who now for the first time heard of this Iranee irruption.

On the arrival of the party in the neighbourhood of Madras, an inquiry was instituted into their previous proceedings. Their story was, that about four years previously they had been driven by famine from their native districts of Sheeraz and Kirman in Persia, and that they resolved to come to India to beg. They accordingly proceeded to Cabul, where they separated, the Sheerazes entering India by way of Peshawur, and the Kirmanees by way of Candahar. The former went through the Punjab to Delhi and Lucknow, at which last place they remained six months. On leaving it they were attacked by robbers, who plundered them, and shot two of their number. Somewhere in the Deccan they were joined by the other party, who had gone by way of Delhi and Gwalior. Thus united, they appear to have felt strong enough to combine a little plundering with their begging, and thus got themselves brought to the notice of the authorities. A feud had broken out between the Sheerazes and the Kirmanees of the party, and on being mustered for inspection at Poonamallee, they engaged in a general action, with fists, bamboos, stones, and brickbats, the lady portion of the belligerents particularly distinguishing themselves by their fury and violence. They were separated with difficulty. At length, in April, the Madras Government directed that they should be forwarded in detachments through the northern districts of the Bombay presidency, on to Scinde and Afghanistan, whence they might reach their own country. And so ends the history of this band of Persian vagrants.

It is rather singular that they should not have attracted notice during their long wanderings through Northern and Central India. We thought the Punjab authorities were stricter than to allow such a thing in their province. Indeed it appears that a somewhat similar party, who made their appearance there in 1854, were detained and afterwards sent back by way of Scinde. The Madras party, however, seem to have eluded the vigilance even of Sir John Lawrence. Orders have now been issued that all similar bodies of foreign vagrants be at once apprehended and sent back to their own country. Mr. Montgomery, the judicial commissioner of the Punjab, alludes to the sumptuous manner in which the Madras party were fed by the authorities there, and he has no doubt that money and valuables would have been found upon the party, if they had been properly searched. Finally, the magistrate of Canara gets a rap over the knuckles for not having at once detained the Persians, and reported the matter to Government for their instructions. We do not see that he deserves censure, considering that the party had passports from Bombay officials, that no complaints had been made to him against them, and that he sent an escort with them into the next zillah to prevent their doing mischief on the road.

BENGAL CAVALRY BONUS FUND.

The following prospectus of a Bengal Cavalry Bonus Fund has appeared in the Delhi Gazette:—

1st. That it will be advantageous to establish a fund, from which all regimental field-officers of the Bengal Light Cavalry desirous of retiring may claim a bonus, according to the scale hereinafter detailed.

2nd. That this fund shall be called

“THE BENGAL CAVALRY BONUS FUND.”

3rd. That the bonus which regimental field-officers may claim shall be as follows:—

Colonel..... Rs. 70,000.

Rs.	Rs.
1st Lieut.-col..... 68,000	1st Major 48,500
2nd do. 66,000	2nd do. 47,000
3rd do. 64,000	3rd do. 45,500
4th do. 62,000	4th do. 44,000
5th do. 60,000	5th do. 42,500
6th do. 58,000	6th do. 41,000
7th do. 56,000	7th do. 39,500
8th do. 54,000	8th do. 38,000
9th do. 52,000	9th do. 36,500
10th do. 50,000	10th do. 35,000

4th. That the bonus for the different grades shall be raised as follows; viz., Rs. 2,000 from each lieutenant-colonel, Rs. 1,500 from each major, and Rs. 3,500 from each regiment benefiting by the retirement of the officer receiving the bonus.

5th. That no lieutenant-colonel, major, or regiment shall be required to contribute to any officer's retirement, that does not advance him or it a step in the Gradation List.

6th. That any officer being supernumerary of his rank, or whose retirement would merely cause the absorption of a supernumerary, shall have no claim, while so situated, to a bonus.

7th. That any lieutenant-colonel, major, or regiment, gaining more than one step in the Gradation List by the purchase of any officer's retirement, shall pay respectively an additional Rs. 2,000, 1,500, or 3,500 for every additional step so gained; thus, in the event of a major wishing to retire when 5th on the list of majors, he would be entitled to Rs. 42,500, viz., Rs. 17,500 from his own regiment, as well as an aggregate of Rs. 25,000, or Rs. 1,500 from each major, and Rs. 3,500 from each regiment junior to him in the Gradation List.

8th. That lieutenant-colonels or majors failing to join the fund, or to pay their respective quotas for any steps purchased, shall not, if afterwards desirous of retiring, be entitled to any pecuniary benefit from any steps gained by the fund, but shall, as claimants for bonus, be held to occupy such position only as they would have arrived at without the operation of the Bonus Fund.

9th. That the sum of Rs. 3,500 be made up in regiments according to the following scale:—

1st Captain	1,100	1st Lieutenant....	250
2nd do.	350	2nd do.	150
3rd do.	250	3rd do.	110
4th do.	200	4th do.	100
5th do.	160	5th do.	90
6th do.	120	6th do.	80
7th do.	200	7th do.	70
Total	2,380	8th do.	60
		9th do.	50

Total 960

1st Cornet.....	80	3rd Cornet	30
2nd do.	50	4th do.	30

Grand Total..... 3,530

Thus a lieutenant-colonel would have to pay Rs. 20,000 for his regiment; a major Rs. 15,000 for his lieutenant-colonelcy; a senior captain Rs. 11,000 for his majority; a junior captain Rs. 2,000 for his troop. A senior lieutenant Rs. 2,500 for his captaincy; and a senior cornet Rs. 800 for his lieutenantancy, if unassisted by death steps.

10th. That as the object of the Cavalry Bonus Fund is to accelerate promotion, nothing contained in it shall preclude officers or regiments from giving larger sums than those above decided on for the retirement of colonels, lieutenant-colonels, or majors, provided such appear to them necessary or advisable to secure any particular step or steps that may so offer themselves.

11th. That regiments shall be held responsible for their quotas of Rs. 3,500 each, and that in the event of any officer below the rank of regimental major failing from absence or other cause promptly to pay his individual quota, such shall be made good by per centage rates from the other officers of the corps.

12th. That it will be advisable to establish a Subsidiary Fund for the payment of contingencies connected with the Bengal Cavalry Bonus Fund, and that for this purpose a sum of Rs. 200 extra be paid by the officer immediately getting command of a regiment through any retirement secured by the Bengal Cavalry Bonus Fund, and also Rs. 100 by any officer getting charge of a troop in a similar manner.

13th. That the Subsidiary Fund may at any time be appropriated in any way that may be deemed advisable, and sanctioned by the votes of a majority of subscribers to the B. C. B. F.

14th. That for the purpose of bringing the Bengal Cavalry Bonus Fund into operation, a regimental secretary be elected in each corps, and a general committee be appointed by the subscribers at large, to consist of a president and two members. The president and members not necessarily to be of the same regiment, but selected as those most likely to effect the objects and further the interests of the Bengal Cavalry Bonus Fund.

15th. That it shall be the duty of regimental secretaries to collect and transmit the money, ascertain the votes, and be the medium of communication between their own officers and the general committee, on all points connected with the B. C. B. F.

16th. That it shall be the duty of the General Committee to see that the Fund Rules are strictly adhered to, to submit for the decision of the service any points on which doubts or difference of opinion may arise, to receive all applications for bonus and immediately forward them through regimental secretaries to their different regiments.

17th. That the Agra Bank, in Calcutta, be the place of deposit for all sums paid on account of the Bengal Cavalry Bonus Fund, and that these sums be paid to credit of the General Committee, to enable them duly to settle with any officer whose retirement may have been effected.

18th. That all sums duly claimed for any officer's retirement shall be paid into the Agra Bank, Calcutta, within three months of the date on which such claim shall reach the General Committee.

19th. That in the event of any sum or sums not being paid as required by Rule 18, the General Committee shall have, and hereby has authority in the name and on the behalf of all those benefitting by any proposed retirement to borrow any sum or sums that may be so deficient, provided always that the sum so borrowed shall not exceed one-half the amount of bonus claimed, and shall in no case, or aggregate of cases, exceed the sum of Rs. 35,000.

20th. That any sum or sums so borrowed shall, with interest and all contingent expenses, be claimable respectively from those who, by omitting to pay promptly their individual quotas, rendered such borrowing necessary.

21st. That the General Committee shall be, and hereby is guaranteed against any loss on account of any sums borrowed under Rule 19, and if ultimate loss should in any instance accrue, such shall be made good by a percentage on all those benefitting by the step gained.

22nd. That the General Committee shall have power to reimburse themselves from the Subsidiary Fund for all expenses actually incurred by them on account of the Bombay Cavalry Bonus Fund.

23rd. That any officer claiming a bonus and subsequently declining it, shall pay a fine or forfeit of Rs. 5,000, such sum to be carried to credit of the Subsidiary Fund.

24th. That officers entering the service after the establishment of the fund, shall, on first joining their regiments, be invited to subscribe to it, and their names to be enrolled on its lists or not, according to their decisions.

25th. That no officer joining the fund shall be permitted to secede from it, until it may be dissolved by the votes of a majority of the subscribers.

THE LONDON MAIL of Oct. 26 arrived at Calcutta Dec. 1 (per Alma).

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. R. DUNMORE, 31st N.I., is shortly expected at Calcutta from Landour to appear before the Medical Board. The gullant officer intends to proceed to England early in January for the benefit of his health.—Hurkaru.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC.—During the month of September, 68,485 maunds of goods were carried upwards on the East-Indian Railway, and 91,234 maunds downwards. Of the former, the chief articles were salt (16,312 maunds); iron rails (12,405 maunds), and timber (9,592 maunds); and of the goods downwards, the chief articles were coal (72,429 maunds), rice (6,663 maunds), and kunkur (3,300 maunds).

FAILURES.—The Morning Chronicle has announced the failure of Messrs. Watson and Co. and Messrs. Spence, the two old mercantile houses in Calcutta.

THE KING OF DELHI AND MR. FRASER.—A private letter from Delhi, dated the 2nd November, mentions that a difference of opinion had arisen between the king and Mr. Fraser, the Governor-General's agent, about the appointment of Mr. Fenwick as agent at Calcutta. Mr. Fraser observed, that sending a petition to the Governor-General through such a person was an unusual course. The king replied that he had full authority to do so, and ordered Mr. Fraser to leave the palace instantly, who has reported the matter to the Governor-General. Eight of the king's begums, whose stipends have been stopped by Zenat Mehal Nægum, are about to petition the Governor-General. Mirza Koyel's petition is still waiting the decision of Government.—Englishman.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—The gentlemen who opposed the grant of the seventh annuity of the Medical Retiring Fund are, we hear, Messrs. Webb, Cantor, Chevers, and Scriven.

THE REVENUE COMMISSIONER of the 18th division has been directed to station his head quarters for the future at Nuddea. Allipore is too close to Calcutta. The change was once threatened by Mr. Pattle, when an energetic commissioner drove up to the Sudder to argue cases in person on their being sent back to him.

ROADS—A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION.—Twenty-three thousand rupees have been sanctioned by Government for the repairs of the road between Lucknow and Cawnpore—"albeit after the work has been done!" That is, Government having told the officers to do their spitting, as the matter was indispensable, coute qu'il coute, has done that which was to be done, instead of proceeding on the old plan of estimates, reports, reports on reports, and remands for explanations. Grievance-hunters are robbed of a reason for a growl, and therefore throw in one gratis. Clive's hint, "Fight them, and I'll send you authority afterwards," is, we are glad to see, once more recovering a position in India. The Lord High Admiral's "Go it, Ned!" won Navarino.

ESTATE OF D. C. MACKAY AND CO.—The second dividend at Co.'s Rs. Three per Cent. was announced (Nov.) to be payable at the office of the official assignee, at Calcutta.

THE RECENT INUNDATIONS.—The Governor-General has been pleased to sanction that sums not exceeding Rs. 50,000 for each district, or a total amount of two and a half lacs, shall be placed at the disposal of the local authorities in Patna, Nuddeah, Rajshai, Moorshedabad, and Maldah, in order that it may be distributed among the victims of the recent inundations according to their several necessities.

MILITARY CHANGES.—By the retirement of Brevet Lieut.-Colonel Ormsby, senior major of the 3rd European regiment, announced in The Gazette, Brevet Major J. H. Wakefield obtains a regimental majority; and with the augmentation, Lieutenants Bacon, Reid, and Chamberlain will become regimental captains, and Ensigns Roberts, McPherson, Stevenson, and Maclean be promoted to the superior grade. These new captains will have to resign their civil employments and return to regimental duty, for six captains are already absent from the regiment in staff or civil appointments, besides two being on sick certificate in Europe. Two assistant-commissionerships in the Punjab, and an assistantship in the Thuggee department, will thus become vacant; and it may not be long, perhaps, before the same cause operates to create vacancies in the 6th Gwalior infantry, and the 17th irregular cavalry.

DR. FAITHFULL.—The Central Star has learnt, on good authority, that Dr. Faithfull, officiating medical storekeeper, has been appointed pukka medical storekeeper of the Umballa division.

WITCHCRAFT AND TORTURE.—A short time ago a child, ten years of age, was taken ill, and his sickness was attributed to witchcraft. The relatives were advised to consult a witchfinder (daoo); they complied with this suggestion, and after a diligent search, the daoo fixed upon an old woman, the boy's aunt, as the witch (daen) who had by her sorceries caused the illness of the child. The hill chief in whose territory this occurrence took place ordered the woman into his presence, and inquired of her whether it was true that she was a witch. He received a decided reply in the negative. On this the chief directed that she should be made to pass through the customary ordeal of immersion in water, to prove whether she was or was not in the possession of the power ascribed her. She was accordingly bound with ropes, and flung into a deep pool formed in the Ishuu river, a few miles distant from Simla (one of the feeders of this stream supplies the Commander-in-Chief's "bowlee" on our Mall). The unfortunate floated, and thereby substantiated the belief of her being endowed with the power of necromancy. On her mersion the poor old creature reiterated her assertion of innocence. The chief now ordered her to be conveyed to her village, and to be further dealt with as the daoo might direct, who had her beaten in a most cruel manner, and afterwards scared from head to foot with a red-hot iron, which had the effect of obtaining from her a forced and murmured confession that she was a witch. Notwithstanding this severe treatment, the wretched being managed to make her way to her father's house in the vicinity, and so soon as she was sufficiently recovered, came to Simla, and lodged her complaint before the civil authorities against the perpetrator of this frightful outrage. Her case was speedily taken into consideration by our kind-hearted and energetic deputy commissioner, who reported the entire circumstances to the chief commissioner, suggesting as a punishment the imposition of a fine on the ranah. This meeting the approval of the higher Court, report says the chieftain is to be mulcted to the extent of Rs. 6,000. This chief, the first in rank of the hill ranahs, possesses a large income, but through mismanagement his finances are in an impoverished state; hence we suppose the smallness of the fine, which must be considered as lenient indeed when it is known that this ranah's capital is within seven miles of Simla, he a frequent visitor to the station, having consequently an immense advantage over the more distant chiefs of becoming cognizant of our utter abhorrence of any act of torture, of our entire disbelief in witchcraft, and last, though not least, of the stringent orders of the Indian Government on this point.

THE BRIG "MULLAH."—On the 1st November a bottle was thrown overboard from the pilot brig Mullah, at the Sandheads, and on the 24th was picked up at Pulicat a few miles north of Madras, having thus drifted about 650 miles in twenty-four days, or supposing the bottle to have been discovered on the very day it came ashore, it had travelled with the current at the rate of nearly 1½ knot an hour from north to south. The bottle contained a paper on which the following words were written:—"On the morning of the 31st October, 1856, about one A.M., the Mullah pilot vessel slipped from an anchor in Eastern Channel, starboard bulwark drove in. Had a gale from E.N.E. to east, at four A.M., five feet water in the hold, bilge pumps not worth a pin, no midship ones, although recommended about five months before, hands bailing, no boat, the only one allowed went overboard. R.H." "Passengers, Mrs. G. Lord, young child and young sister."

THE CRIMINAL SESSIONS AT CALCUTTA commenced on the 4th December.

ORDERS have been given for the immediate completion of the road between Lucknow and Fyzabad. The chief commissioner of Oude has also been requested to state his views regarding the substitution of the navigable channel of the Gogra for the present channel of the Ganges. This question may have an important bearing upon the military as well as civil arrangements in Oude.

THE NEW POST-OFFICE RULES have now had a trial, and are thought to be working far more satisfactorily than was at first expected. They do not, perhaps, pay as yet for the expenditure, but there is much reason to hope that a favourable balance will be struck within the next twelve or eighteen months. A contemporary presses for the abolition of bearing letters, which lead to the maintenance of separate sets of accounts and papers, and establishment. He believes that the saving in salaries, wages, and stationery, could not be less than Rs. 20 per mensem for each office, or about two lacs per annum on the whole.

SICKNESS AT ALLYPURH.—A letter from Allypurh states that:—"Towards Khyr and Chundosee, where the canal waters have been thrown through an escape into a natural watercourse, the country is said to be almost depopulated—in Chundosee only seventy people remaining, half of them hardly able to walk, and Khyr is said to be worse! The moonsiff and all the umlah are sick and absent on leave. In one part near Chundosee the bodies are said to have remained unburnt and unburied, so that the stench prevented travellers remaining near. The malady is fever and ague, or fever alone. Most of the epidemics (even the cholera) this year, among the natives in these parts, have had a tendency to affect the head. I earnestly trust that the delightful weather we are now enjoying will put a stop to the frightful disease, and that measures will be adopted by the local government to ascertain the real cause of it, and to prevent a recurrence (if traced to the canal) whenever a new branch or cut of the canal is opened. If the supply of water was, in the first instance, sufficiently abundant and continued, the decaying leaves and other decomposed vegetable matter would be carried away."

TROOPS RETURNING TO ENGLAND.—We understand that the lowest tender submitted to the marine authorities for the conveyance of troops to England has been made by the Barham, her terms being Rs. 208 for each healthy man, and Rs. 218 for invalids. The Octavia has tendered at Rs. 220 and 250 respectively, but notwithstanding these sums exceed the Barham's offer, yet the Octavia will, it is said, probably be the successful candidate, not because she is the better ship or can accommodate the troops in a superior manner, for in both particulars the Barham is undoubtedly the vessel best adapted for the purpose, but because the officer in command prefers a poop cabin, and the Barham has none available. The hardship of placing a military officer in an after cabin on the 'tween decks of one of Mr. Green's vessels can only be properly appreciated by those who have endured hardships in the Crimea, and certainly it would be cruel in Government to subject our gallant (commissioned) defenders unnecessarily to so severe affliction.

BURNING AN IDOL.—A circumstance, regarded as terribly ominous by the orthodox Hindoos, has occurred at Howrah. The idol Juggerhatree, while being paraded in the streets of Howrah in the evening, some lights being held a little too near it, its garments caught fire, and the god was at once enveloped in flames! The physical light of these flames threw a spiritual darkness on the crowd of worshippers, and it was felt amongst them that no Hindoo who witnessed the dreadful spectacle would enjoy an hour's happiness during the ensuing year.

DACCA AND ARRACAN ROADS.—We learn from the Probhaker, that the construction of a new public road from Dacca to Arracan by government, which had been postponed on account of the scarcity of coolies, has now been recommended, and that a number of men of the Chooar tribe has been sent thither by the orders of the Commissioner of Chota Nagpore. The road when completed will be productive of immense good to the traffic in the eastern part of Bengal.

A SKILFUL THIEF.—A person, apparently well dressed, selected sixteen umbrellas in a shop at Armeniantollah, and requested the shopkeeper to send with him one of his men to receive the value at his house. On their way together, the umbrella purchaser stopped at a silk shop, and selecting two pieces, prevailed upon the master of the shop to allow him to take them for his employer's approval, as he agreed to leave the man with the umbrellas as security for his return. This latter unsuspecting man agreed to do as requested, giving him, moreover, an umbrella for its being shown, as he thought, to the actual would-be purchaser. But, alas! both of them reckoned without their host, for the clever rogue was no more heard of. Notice was immediately given to the Humam-lare thannah, the officers of which are making strenuous exertions to apprehend the rascal.

OUDE.—The Commander-in-Chief visited Lucknow on the 20th Nov. for the purpose of inspecting the troops and fixing upon a site for a Cantonment.

MR. BARCKLEY, superintendent of Light House, at False Point was seriously injured, it is reported, by the explosion of a cannon whilst firing a salute.

JAILS & EDUCATION.—The Hurkaru mentions that while Government expended nine lakhs of rupees last year on jails in Bengal Proper, it only gave Rs. 18,000 during the same period in aid for educational purposes.

DR. KONIGSBERGER, a medical practitioner in Calcutta, says that by some remedy, known only to himself, cholera can be effectually cured by the inoculation of a certain counter-poison.

MR. C. F. PITTAR and MR. C. B. de Verine have been admitted attorneys of the Supreme Court.

PURTAUB CHUND.—The death of the celebrated Purtaub Chund, who some years ago claimed to be Rajah of Burdwan, is announced.

EXECUTION.—Patrick Grant, the murderer of Serjeant-major Sadlier, H.M. 53rd regt., was executed on the 23rd Nov.

A MURDER of brutal character has been committed at Chandernagore. Mrs. Moss, an old Frenchwoman of sixty, was found in bed on the 20th Nov. with her throat cut, and the upper part of her head dashed in with a hatchet. The commissary of police at Chandernagore has been arrested on the charge of being the murderer.

BODIES IN THE WATER.—The Hurkaru mentions, that the bodies of two men and a woman, respectfully attired in the European garb, were seen floating down the Maitabaug, on the 15th November.

THE MAGISTRATE OF POONAB, MR. DUNCAN DAVID-ON, has issued a proclamation forbidding Hindoos within his district to swing on hooks, or torture themselves, whether in consequence of religious vows or not; and declares he will punish any person doing so according to law.

THE HEAD QUARTERS OF THE 6TH DRAGON GUARDS, had arrived at Calcutta, in the Blenheim, Aganemmon, and Sutlej.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE have referred to a Committee of its Members a proposition for establishing a Tribunal of Commerce.

ADHESIVE ENVELOPES, stamped with one Anna each, have been received from England and are to be procured of the Superintendent of Stamps in quantities of one ream. It is supposed that these stamped envelopes will be retailed at five pice each.

THE BURMESE PAGODA in the Eden Garden is nearly completed.

A PRIZE OF FIVE HUNDRED RUPEES was offered some time ago for the best essay on the "Condition of the Bengal Ryot, on the model of Uncle Tom's Cabin," but as they did not come up to the required standard, it was resolved to publish a series of tracts on the same subject.

MR. PEACOCK'S LIMITED LIABILITY BILL is to be read a second time on the 6th of December.

IT IS RUMOURED that Sir Henry Lawrence is to succeed to the military seat in the Council of India, and that Sir James Outram will be governor of Bombay on Lord Elphinstone's retirement.

MAJOR HERBERT, commandant of the Calcutta Militia, has been appointed by the Governor-General to be the sole channel of communication between the king of Oude and the Government of India.

CAPT. SHERWILL has commenced a course of lectures on Surveying at the College of Civil Engineering.

MR. BLANDFORD has taken charge of the officiating appointment of Professor of Geology and Natural History at the Presidency College, in room of Dr. Liebeg.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF was expected at Meerut on the 4th December.

MR. H. E. BRADDOCK is to be the Sheriff of Calcutta for the ensuing year, with R. M. Thomas for deputy.

THE RAILWAY ARBITRATION CASE between Messrs. Hunt and Thursby, has been decided with an award generally unfavourable to the contractors.

THE CALCUTTA AND BURMAH STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY are about to place two screw-steamers on the line between Calcutta and Moulmein, calling at Akyab, Bassein, and Rangoon.

MAJOR CHAMBERLAIN'S FORCE.—The Hurkaru has authentic information that the force under Brigadier Chamberlain, instead of being intended for the Meerungail valley, was in reality organized for service in Afghanistan, and that a considerable portion of the troops, when last heard of, were within four marches of Cabul.

THE REV. ARTHUR KINLOCK has made a representation to the Governor-General, complaining of the vexatious conduct of Mr. Plowden, commissioner of Nagpore.

DETACHMENT DUTY.—An order has been issued sanctioning captains, who have been promoted by the augmentation order of November 23, holding detachment employment, though there may previously have been the limited number of captains absent from their regiments, until such time as they would have been promoted in the ordinary way.

PASSPORTS.—It has been brought to the notice of the Government of India, that magistrates and other authorities, civil and political, are in the habit of granting passports, or certificates and other documents in the nature of passports, to persons travelling, or intending to travel, from one part of India to another. This practice, being quite unnecessary and liable to much abuse, is strictly prohibited by Government General Orders. Hereafter no passports or documents of any kind will be granted to any persons travelling, or intending to travel in India, either in the territories subject to the government of the East-India Company or in native states. Persons intending to travel from India to foreign countries can, as heretofore, obtain passports on application to government in the proper department.

SAUGOR AND JUBBULPORE.—The Governor-General has directed that the stations of Saugor and Jubbulpore shall be included in the Benares circle of payment, and those of Mhow and Nagode in the Cawnpore circle of payment.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN SPENS.—We deeply regret to hear of a very sudden death. Captain Spens of the engineers dropped lifeless at Umballa, while speaking to his wife. He left Ferozepore about eighteen months ago upon sick leave for Simla. There he derived no benefit. When he came back thence, he was evidently worse. The doctors appeared to make nothing of his case. Upon examination it was found that he laboured under disease of the heart.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 2.

DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF ASSAM.—We learn that the appointment of Major Vetch to be commissioner of Chota Nagpore, will occasion the oft-mooted abolition of deputy commissioner of Assam. A late D.C. used to repeat, that he could manage all Assam with five assistants on salaries of Rs. 500 a month. It is a satire on English Protestantism to hear officials and wives threaten corruption without high pay. This surpasses young Bengal professing fitness to rule, but not to fight. The present commissioner, so long as he continues there, will either be allowed another deputy, or else be relieved of Upper Assam, and a junior commissioner appointed on a salary similar to that of the former deputy, the head-quarters being at Hishnath. A correspondent remarks that "the people of Assam are so few and feeble, that the district was termed by a friend of India 'over officered.' Assam mountains bring forth mice, Assam mares build nests, and Assam geese are swans."—Delhi Gazette.

WRECK AT THE CHANNEL BUOY.—Mr. S. Ransom, of the cruising station, has addressed a report to Mr. Sutherland, the master attendant, Calcutta, regarding a wreck lying a little to the eastward of the South Channel buoy. Mr. Ransom reports as follows:—"On the morning of the 15th November, I ran over into the south channel, and after some difficulty succeeded in finding the wreck—I mention difficulty because it was (after much search) by mere chance I did find it, as it is only a short time above water during slack tide, the mast disappearing as the tide increased in strength. At 12-15 I anchored within a cable's length with following bearings, South Channel buoy W.N.W., distance 4½ miles, Eastern Light Vessel N.E., distance 9 to 10 miles, depth of water 15½ fathoms, ebb third day after full moon. I have examined the wreck in my boat, and find from the size of her topmasts (15 inches in diameter), as the distance between her masts, that she must be a vessel of considerable burthen, say from 1,000 to 1,200 tons. At the most favourable time of her lifting the topmast cross trees are just level with water, but they remain so only a short time; the hull is lying with her head S.W., and she appears to have gone down on the port tack all standing. I have endeavoured to obtain every article I can from her, let it be ever so trifling, as they may in a variety of ways serve to identify the unfortunate ship. I obtained 2 topgallant yards, 42 and 43 feet square, with a wooden rolling-chocks and a piece of curb-chain for the back part of the barrels fitted with iron sheaves, and side-pieces for chain; royal-sheet, painted flesh-colour,—in fact, so were the topmast head cross-trees, and all the yards and masts that we could see. I have the hull of a topgallant-mast (eleven inches in diameter) scooped out at the lower part, to fit close to the topmast-head, and with two sheaves in the extreme, and four topsail buntlings. I have also several iron-bound blocks, all painted same colour, two topgallant left, with cliff-hooks, and a short piece of chain attached to hook at the yard-arm, and a lashing-eye for the mast-head. I have one topsail left, fitted in the same fashion from some remnant of canvas; I have got the sail-makers' stamp on it, 'Hutchinson and Jarvie. Rope and Sail-makers, Liverpool.' The above is, I am sorry to say, all that I have been able to obtain. If she is a vessel that has recently left the port of Calcutta, there may be seamen still in town who could recognize some of these articles, and the ship's agents might know if the owners dealt with the sailmakers mentioned in the stamp. The topsail-ties are chain double before the mast, with a sheave in the topmast, which is rather unusual for a vessel of her size; the whole of the rigging, iron-work, and wood of vessel proclaimed her to be British colonial built and manufacture. In conclusion, I beg to state the wreck has now completely disappeared, and I think it will not appear again."

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

REGIMENTAL COMMANDS.

Bengal, Fort William, Dec. 5, 1856.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to direct a reduction, prospectively, of regimental command money in the corps noted in the margin,* from company's rupees four hundred to company's rupees two hundred per mensem, and of the established allowance of the adjutant, from company's rupees two hundred and twelve and seven annas to company's rupees one hundred and seventy and fourteen annas per month, or the rate allowed, in ordinary local corps, to an adjutant and quarter-master.

2. The appointment of quarter-master in each of the corps will be discontinued on the next vacancy.

3. In future the Khelat-i-Ghilzie regiment will be restricted to its established complement of European officers, viz. a commandant, second in command, adjutant, and medical officer. Extra officers will not be ordered to do duty with the sanction of government, nor shall the command of companies be held by other than the commandant, after the emoluments for regimental command shall have been reduced to two hundred rupees per mensem, with an additional sum of twenty-five rupees per company for stationery, repair of arms, accoutrements, &c.

4. Simultaneously with the reduction of regimental command-money in each of the corps, an English writer, or sircar, will be added to its establishment, on the usual pay of fifteen rupees per month.

The commandant of the Shekawattee battalion will, prospectively, be restricted to the command and other allowances now authorized for the commandants of the regiments of Khelat-i-Ghilzie, Ferozepore, and Loodianah.

6. Present incumbents are not affected by any part of this order.

NO DEMAND CERTIFICATES.

Fort William, Dec. 5, 1856.—No. 1507 of 1856.—The following paragraph of a letter from the Honourable the Court of Directors to the Government of India, in the Financial Department, No. 57, dated 2nd July, 1856, is published in general orders:—

12. We desire that, in all cases, whether of civil servants or military servants holding civil appointments, in which a certificate of "No demands" cannot be given before the departure of the servant, such a certificate may be forwarded to us at the earliest practicable period, in order to prevent the personal inconvenience which may otherwise be occasioned in the event of the servant requesting permission to resign our service in this country, at or before the termination of his leave.†

With reference to the foregoing, and to Government General Orders, noted in the margin,‡ the Right Honourable the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to direct that the "No demand" certificate from military officers holding civil, military, staff, or other detached appointments, shall be forwarded from the offices of accounts and audit, to which the absentee may be responsible.

LIEUTENANTS ON DETACHMENT DUTY.

Fort William, Nov. 24, 1856.—With reference to General Order No. 1454 of this date, the Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council is pleased to determine, that the lieutenants on detached employment, who have become captains from the 23rd instant, for the augmentation, and from whose regiments the allotted number of captains has already been taken, shall be exempted from the operation of rule 8 of the Government General Order No. 489, dated the 10th day of June, 1853, which, under ordinary circumstances, would require their return to their regiments.

This exemption, however, is temporary, and will continue only till the date on which each officer concerned would have attained

* Regt. of Khelat-i-Ghilzie; regt. of Ferozepore; regt. of Loodianah.

† Letter from, dated 18th January, 1850, No. 18.—Report having resolved that the rules laid down on the 14th November last, dispensing with the taking of security from civil servants on leave under medical certificate or on private affairs, retaining their appointments, shall equally apply to military officers holding civil appointments.

‡ G. G. Nos. 195 of the 4th February, and 779 of the 27th May, 1856.

the rank of captain in the ordinary course of promotion, had the augmentation not taken place.

This order is applicable to the three presidencies.

FIELD OFFICERS.

Head Quarters, Camp, Allahabad, Nov. 11, 1856.—Article 2, Section XLII. of the Military Regulations, is to be expunged.

The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct that officers who obtained the rank of colonel on the 20th of June, 1854, or subsequent to that date, shall be included in the roster of field officers for garrison and other duties, until after five years from the date of their commissions as colonels.

INSURRECTION IN KIMEDY.

The hill tribe of Kimedy are again upon the move. We hear that disturbances are apprehended, or have actually occurred, which necessitate the immediate despatch of troops to the place direct. Who the offending chief or other persons is in the present instance, we are unable at this moment to say.

In the latter part of last year and the early part of the present, one Chokra Bissye, a chieftain, who was attainted during the Goomsoor rebellion, created a disturbance in the Upper Goomsoor and the Board Maliah. He endeavoured to rouse the Khonds to arms, by holding out to them the promise of the revival of the Meriah, or human sacrifices; but the attempt failed, and the threatened danger for the time passed away. About the month of April another insurrectionary outbreak occurred in the Western Division of the Purla Kimedy country, but it does not appear to have been connected with the movement immediately preceding it.

The Khonds do not appear to have had anything to do with it. The man who made himself notorious in this last outbreak by the outrages he for some time committed in Kimedy, was named Radhakristna Dundasena of Garbah Goomah, a village occupied by the tribe of Sowrahs. He had been the servant of a hill chief, with whom he quarrelled, and in whose company he had already made himself noted for disturbing the country in 1853. Both the master and servant on that occasion were convicted and sentenced at Ganjam for their outrageous acts of dacoity. Dundasena fled to the hills and associated himself with the Sowrahs, a race of savages occupying the hill-tract, which extends from from Purla Kimedy to Berhampore. It is bounded on the east by the narrow belt which separates the hill-tracts from the sea, and on the west by the Khond clans, and Chinnna Kimedy, and Jeypore.

During the months of April and May, this man Dundasena, having roused to action some thousands of these barbarian Sowrahs, proceeded to commit numerous enormities. Setting himself against the government, he attacked the manager of Purla Kimedy, who managed to escape, but seven peons were killed in the contest. Dundasena then burnt several villages, and plundered the peaceful inhabitants. Active measures were adopted by the Madras Government, and the 31st Regiment N.I., was sent directly to Vizagapatam. Other Regiments were held in readiness to afford assistance; and troops were sent to the Western frontier of Nagpore. By the end of May, the Sowrahs had returned to their agricultural occupations, and everything was again tranquil. We recall these circumstances to mind, as, in case the present disturbance should become serious, they may prove useful in discussion, although we are, as we have said, quite unaware at present of the parties who are now in a state of discontent and insurrection.—Spectator, Dec. 1.

MR. JOHN FINLAY MCKENNIE has been appointed sheriff of Madras for the ensuing year.

MEDICAL CERTIFICATES.—With the sanction of Government the Commander-in-Chief directs that all officers who proceed to the Presidency for the purpose of embarking for Europe or places beyond sea on medical certificate, shall appear before the Medical Board, in view to having their medical certificates confirmed or otherwise disposed of.

GOVERNMENT has authorized the establishment of schools of rifle-musketry at Bangalore, Secunderabad, and Rangoon; and has also appointed a committee to revise the General Regulations of the army; acceptable items of intelligence to our military readers, especially the latter, as the want of an intelligible work has been long felt.

A FOREST CONSERVATORY.—The sanction of the Court of Directors has been received for the creation of a Forest Conservancy department. It is to extend to the whole of the forests in this presidency, and Dr. Cleghorn is to be its chief; no better selection, it is generally thought, could have been made.

THE SHIPS CELESTE AND SEA-PARK.—From a letter which Capt. Biden has written to the Athenaeum, we learn that the barque Celeste has greatly suffered during the late gale. The wind and sea were so strong that the vessel was sent on to her beam-ends, and at one time it was feared she was settling. By cutting away the mainmast, however, such a catastrophe was prevented. The Celeste has put into Pondicherry completely disabled; and very great credit is due to her chief officer, Mr. T. E. Marshall, for managing to arrive there, as the Lascar crew appear to have been perfectly useless, huddling themselves during the storm into the side cabins.—No information has yet been received of the ship Sea-Park, and we hear that it is the intention of Capt. Biden to submit a suggestion to Government to send out their steamer Coromandel in search of her.

ACCIDENT TO MR. MALTRY, December 6.—The Athenaeum says:—"At Hyderabad (Deccan), on the night of the 20th, there was a fall of no less than three inches of rain. Mr. F. Maltry, commissioner of the assigned districts, had met with an accident. He was coming from Bolarum with Mr. Bushby. They had stopped on the way at Dr. Macfarlane's, and in starting again, one of the horses got his leg over the splinter-bar. Mr. Maltry, endeavouring to extricate it, received a blow on the cap of the knee from the splinter-bar as it broke under the weight of the horse. This happened two days before the exhibition opened, and of course prevented his attendance. It will most likely prevent, as it has certainly postponed, Mr. M.'s projected tour through the assigned districts; he is doing well, but the injury was very serious."

CURIOUS FACT CONCERNING BULLS OF NELLORE.—The Tanjore Committee notices the ill success which has hitherto attended the attempt to improve the cattle of the country by distributing throughout the district bulls of the fine breed of Nellore. These animals take no notice of the country cows, so that the experiment has hitherto failed. Should the same want of success be experienced during a second season, the Board propose that bulls of the Mysore breed should be chosen for this experiment; this breed of cattle, though smaller, is far more useful for agricultural purposes and for draught than that of Nellore, and the cows are as good or better milkers. There is also less disparity in size between this breed and the Tanjore cattle, and it is more suited for stock breeding, as the bulls are not sluggish or capricious, as those of the Nellore breed are sometimes found to be.—Athenaeum.

THE MADRAS EXHIBITION.—In addition to the specimens which will be furnished by the Presidency, there will be a large contribution from the Nizam's dominions, in all probability consisting of many of the articles recently exhibited at Hyderabad. In the mineral kingdom were exhibited iron ore, lead in grains and ore, salt, steel, materials for glass-making, and an immense quantity of the inferior gems, such as amethysts, sapphires, topazes, cornelians, &c. &c. The cereals, dry grains and millets from Hyderabad, Neermull, Oomeakhair, and Berar, were largely represented, as also were the spices and condiments; the oils, the gums, the attars, the number of dyeing and tanning substances would have done no discredit to the Great Exhibition itself. There seems to have been a large display of valuable timber, but the display of the animal kingdom was comparatively inferior. The manufactures in flax, hemp, cotton, and silk were rich and varied, many of them being of very considerable value: a silk saree was priced at Rs. 173. The mixed fabrics, and gold and silver embroideries took a prominent place at the exposition. The numerous fringes of various kinds, and laces of gold and silver, must have greatly increased the splendour of the collection. Among the books, Dr. Murphy exhibited the Lord's Prayer in two hundred and eleven languages.

COLONEL GRAME has written the following letter to the Athenaeum, from Kamptee, Nov. 17:—"In your issue of Nov. 4, is an extract from the 'Law Times Reports of May 30th,' intitled Court of Exchequer, 'Grame versus Wroughton.' This is the first intimation I have had of the pleadings and the opinions of the judges; I deem it a duty I owe myself in the eyes of the officers of the Indian army to state the simple facts of the case, and at the same time tender them my advice, that should they ever have occasion to engage in any suit in an English law-court, they should themselves be present to enlighten their attorneys. The question on which I instituted proceedings was a simple demand for payment of a debt of Rs. 4,000, for which the security of a bond was forced on me almost by the borrower, but the admission 'for a certain consideration' or purpose, was not admitted by me. On this, however, the question was argued and judgment given. It would be ridiculous to say I was not cognizant of the reason for which the money was borrowed. But that the transaction in itself was nothing more or less than that Captain A. lends Lieutenant B. Rs. 4,000, payment secured by a bond; that such a contract on the part of the borrower was a debt of honour, and on that of the lender an act of favour, is clear. After, however, waiting 11 years, during which period Capt. Wroughton had himself received a consideration of Rs. 30,000 on invaliding, and 30,000 more of his patrimony, out of which enormous sum he neither offered me a farthing, nor would reply to letters, I had no course left but to sue him for payment in a court of law. The debt was repudiated, on the plea of its having been contracted for an illegal purpose. Had the following state of the case been laid before the court, the real question would have assumed another phase, independent of the creditor-and-debtor one, and run thus:—Captain Grant, senior captain of the 5th cavalry, obtains a certificate from the medical officer that he is unfit for further effective service. On condition of furnishing this certificate, the officers agree to give him a sum of money. Had he been unable to furnish it (and it is unreasonable to suppose that the medical officer was influenced by aught beyond his own conviction), there would have been no purchase; hence it is obvious that the medical certificate was the cause, the basis, of his leaving the regiment, and the money tendered an accessory after the fact, which amounts to nothing. Much as I regret my inability to subscribe on this occasion to the charitable doctrine, 'De mortuis nil nisi bonum,' I must be content to forfeit my money, which I lent in good faith, and, as Captain Wroughton has been summoned before a higher tribunal, leave his ashes to the silent grave. 'Requiescat in pace.'"

OVERCROWDING OF A NATIVE VESSEL.—Recently certain natives petitioned the Madras Government respecting the overcrowding of the brig Karby Heyne from the port of Coolasayaram to Ceylon. The brig is of 72 tons burthen, and the petitioners found on board about 3,000 persons, 200 goats, and 4 cart bullocks. They represent that they requested the tindal to put them ashore, and that the tindal refused. At night the vessel began to sink, four men fell overboard, one of whom died, as did also two of the bullocks. The petitioners prayed that the owners of the vessel might be directed to assist the parents of the drowned man, and to pay the value of the two bullocks. This petition was referred to the collector of Tinnevely, who referred it to Mr. Swinton, the officer in charge of the Sea Custom Department, who referred it to the tasildar. Mr. Silver states that the result of the tasildar's report and depositions is unsatisfactory, that there is no evidence to implicate the Sea Custom's officers in aiding or abetting in the shipment of a larger number of Coolies than the regulated number. The owners of course deny all knowledge of the matter, and the tindal and crew cannot be found. The brig's license has been suspended for twelve months.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

RIFLE MUSKETRY.

Head Quarters, Choultry Plain, Dec. 1, 1856.—No. 96.—The Commander-in-Chief directs it to be notified in General Orders that depots of instruction in rifle musketry as below specified, have been authorized by Government for this Presidency.

2. Depots are to be established at the following stations, viz.

Bangalore,
Secunderabad, and Rangoon;

and the establishment for each will be as follows—

First.—A commandant on a salary rupees 200 per mensem.

Second.—An officer instructor who has been instructed at Hythe and reported qualified:—to be selected indiscriminately, from the Royal and Company's services—on a salary of rupees 100 per mensem.

Third.—An officer to perform the duties of adjutant and quartermaster during the practice season, on a salary of rupees 100 per mensem.

3. Each regiment of European infantry is to furnish 1 officer, 5 non-commissioned officers, or rank and file; and each regiment of Native infantry 1 European officer, 1 native officer, and 5 non-commissioned officers, or rank and file, for instruction.

4. Each dépôt is to be provided with 200 musket-rifles, percussion pattern 1853, and the necessary quantity of ammunition.

5. His Excellency is pleased to appoint the following officers to the depôts now sanctioned.

Bangalore.—Brevet Major J. L. Stevenson, 1st Madras Fusiliers, commandant, and to act as instructor until further orders.

Secunderabad.—Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel C. G. Ottelley, 3rd European regiment, commandant.

Secunderabad.—Captain W. J. Tweedie, 35th regiment native infantry, instructor.

Rangoon.—An officer of her Majesty's service, commandant.

Rangoon.—Captain A. N. Rich, 33rd regiment native infantry, instructor.

6. The officers commanding the Mysore and Pegu divisions, and Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, will nominate officers for the performance of the duties of adjutant and quartermaster of the depôts under their respective commands, forwarding copies of their division orders for his Excellency's confirmation.

7. With reference to para 3, the details from the Northern division, Nagpore force, and Ceded Districts, will join the dépôt at Secunderabad; those from the Southern division, Malabar and Canara, and Centre division, including (with the sanction of the Right Honourable the Governor) those from the garrison of Fort St. George, will proceed to Bangalore; and the regiment in the Pegu division (including the Tenasserim provinces), and those in the Straits settlements, will send their details to Rangoon.

MOVEMENTS OF CORPS.

Fort St. George, Dec. 2, 1856.—The following movements of corps are ordered, such part of G.O.G. 12th August, 1856, No. 246, as had reference to these corps being cancelled.

6th regiment light cavalry from Mhow to Jaulnah.

2nd regiment light cavalry from Jaulnah to Sholapore.

SERVICE OF ARTILLERY.

Head Quarters, Choultry Plain, Dec. 3, 1856.—The Commander-in-Chief finds it necessary most strictly to prohibit the practice of detaching a single gun on service, and to desire that, when the services of artillery are required, not less than two guns are ever to be sent, and always under the command of a European commissioned officer when available.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.

Fort St. George, Dec. 3, 1856.—So much of G.O.G. 12th August, 1856, No. 264, as had reference to the movements of the 7th and 18th regiments native infantry is cancelled, and the following movements are ordered instead.

7th regiment native infantry, from Moulmein to Masulipatam.

18th regiment native infantry, from Tonghou to Madras.

The movement of the head-quarters of the 2nd native veteran battalion from Arcot to Vellore, directed in G.O.G. 26th August, 1856, No. 26, is also cancelled.

FURLOUGH REGULATIONS.

Head-quarters, Choultry Plain, Dec. 10, 1856.—Consequent on frequent application from officers who have made election of furlough regulations, to be permitted to reconsider their choice, the Commander-in-Chief directs it to be notified that changes from one regulation to another will not under any circumstances be allowed. A choice of furlough regulations having been once made, is final.

BOMBAY.

THE LONDON MAIL of Nov. 10 arrived at Bombay Dec. 7 (per Cadiz).

MR. R. B. BARTON, of the Bar, is going to Mooltan, to defend Mr. Raverty before a court-martial.

MISSION TO KELAT.—It is stated, on reliable authority, that Captain Green, assistant political superintendent of the Scinde frontier, has proceeded on a mission to Kelat, carrying with him money and costly presents for the khan. The mission is supposed to have a political character with reference to the Persian war.

GOA.—The Portuguese have, it is said, agreed to relinquish Goa to the British.

THE RELIEFS and movements of the infantry regiments of the Bombay army, announced in General Orders of July 24 last, to take place in the cold season, have been suspended.

MAJOR PARKINSON has been appointed Sheriff of Bombay for the ensuing year.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF arrived at Poona on Dec. 12 from Mahabulshwur, accompanied by Capt. Armstrong.

RAJPOOTANA.—It is said that Government contemplates the annexation of the states of Rajpootana, which have long been governed by independent chiefs, the flower of India's chivalry. There have been rumours for some time in Agra, that the State of the Ulwar, one of the Rajpoot principalities, was to be immediately annexed. These seem to receive confirmation from the fact that a considerable force has been ordered to assemble there and at Gwalior. Captain Hungerford's battery and the 23rd N.I. have been ordered to halt at Gwalior, and H.M.'s 32nd regiment and the 1st cavalry are to halt at Agra. The 7th cavalry formerly received orders to halt at the same place, and we are now informed that these two regiments are to form part of the force against Ulwar. The 3rd Europeans may also be employed, but this is not probable. Colonel Murray Mackenzie's troop of horse artillery is already here, so that a large force will shortly be assembled, but it is believed that no camp will remain in the station.—Telegraph and Courier.

MR. J. C. MYLOTT has been appointed Assistant to the Resident Engineer of the Vehar Water Works.

THE REV. DR. GLASGOW has been appointed Guzerathee Translator in the educational department, in the room of Mr. Graham resigned.

THE following promotions from the second to the first class, in the civil service, are to have effect from the 10th of June last:—MR. P. W. LE GEY, MR. J. W. MUSPRATT, MR. GREGOR GRANT.

MR. J. W. HADOW's promotion from the third to the second class, is to date from the 29th August, 1856.

MR. WILLIAM MAIDMENT has been appointed officiating secretary to the Military Board, on a salary of Rs.500 per month.

MR. J. MULLALLY has been appointed naval store-keeper at Bombay, on a salary of Rs.880 per month.

THE Oriental Bank Corporation have declared a dividend of Rs.12 and As.8 per share, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on the stock of the corporation for the half-year ending 30th June last: payable to Indian shareholders on and after the 1st January next. Transfer-books will be closed from the 20th December.

THE FIRE ON THE ESPLANADE.—The decision of the Court of Inquiry appointed to ascertain the origin of the conflagration on the Esplanade, was to the effect that the fire broke out in Captain Cahusac's Dhubie's hut, but that no blame whatever could be attached to that officer. It did not appear that the fire originated from carelessness, and the court could not attach blame to any person in particular.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

RETRENCHMENTS.

Bombay Castle, Dec. 6, 1856.—The Right Honourable the Governor in Council is pleased to make the following paragraphs 8 and 9 Sec. Correspondence pages 106 and 107 Bengal Military Regulations applicable to this Presidency, with reference to all Retrenchments, or to sums disallowed on the pre-audit of bills by the Military Auditor General.

8. An Officer, the whole or any portion of whose bills may be retrenched or disallowed by the Military Auditor General, is invariably to finish, through the Pay Department, such reply or explanation as may have been called for, or as may seem calculated to induce the Military Auditor General to pass the sums retrenched or disallowed; and no Officer is to submit an appeal until after consideration of the explanation afforded, the Military Auditor General shall have refused either to pass the claim, or to refer the question for the decision of Government.

9. The authorities who may forward for the consideration of Government, appeals against decisions of the Military Auditor General, are in all cases to satisfy themselves that such explanations or replies have been afforded by Officers, on disallowances or retrenchment, and that the Military Auditor General has subsequently declined either to pass the items, or to refer the case himself to the Government, a distinct notice to which effect must invariably be entered in every letter forwarding an appeal.

RELIEFS AND MOVEMENTS.

Head Quarters, Poona, Dec. 8, 1856.—The reliefs and movements of the Infantry Regiments announced in G. O. C. No. 1, dated the 24th July last, to take place during the ensuing cold season have been suspended.

CEYLON.

THE LONDON MAIL of Nov. 10 arrived at Point de Galle Nov. 8, and left the same day for Calcutta (per Nubia).

Sir Henry Ward closed a protracted session of the Legislative Council in December. There is still the same tale of financial prosperity to tell. In the first nine months of 1856, the excess of revenue over expenditure was, in round numbers, £50,000, and this in the face of an expenditure on public works as liberal as the appliances available would permit. For 1857 the prospects are equally good. The estimates point to a total revenue of £492,000, including £15,900 expected from the Pearl Fishery. The expenditure on the other hand is calculated at £489,000, leaving a surplus of £2,000.

JAVA.

MURDER OF LIEUT. SACHSE.—According to accounts from Sintang (a place in the interior of Pontianak, situated on the Kapuas river), the 2nd-lieut. of infantry, I. E. Sachse, and his Javanese servant, were murdered on the night of the 5th October. Mr. Sachse had just gone to bed when he heard something broken in the outer verandah of his house, which is situated about 500 paces from the barracks. He told his servant to see what was the matter, who went out and immediately called for assistance. Mr. Sachse then followed, and found himself surrounded by ten or twelve Dyaks, who attacked him with spears. He tried to cut his way through them with his sword, and made for the barracks; but before he had gone far he received a number of severe wounds in the breast and thighs. In a fainting state from loss of blood he fell into the arms of Sergeant Wiers, who was coming with some soldiers to his assistance, and died on the morning of the 6th from the effects of the wounds he had received.

CHINA:

LAWLESS MEETINGS AT HONG-KONG.

PROCLAMATION.

By the Honourable Lieutenant-Colonel William Caine, Lieutenant-Governor, administering the Government of Hong-Kong.

In order that lawless meetings may be suppressed, and confidence restored to the well-disposed Chinese inhabitants of the colony,—

It is hereby notified to the residents of this colony, that her Majesty's Government having reason to believe that the large influx of suspicious characters from the Chinese main which has taken place during the last few weeks, and the seditious and treasonable demonstration of this date in the streets of this city have been occasioned by the direct agency of secret emissaries from the persons carrying on a lawless war against her Majesty's forces in the neighbouring province of Kwang-tung,—it is the determination of her Majesty's Government within this colony to take instant measures for putting in force the provisions of the Registration Ordinance, No. 7 of 1846; and so soon as the said Ordinance shall be brought into full operation, all unregistered Chinese will be required to depart from the colony.

Whilst the Colonial authorities are always ready, on proper occasions, to hear the complaints of her Majesty's Chinese subjects, and, if well founded, to redress them, it is nevertheless further notified that no complaints whatever will be attended to so long as they are urged in an improper manner.

The Lieutenant-Governor will willingly receive and give every attention to any representation of grievances that may be laid before him.

Her Majesty's Government, therefore, require her Majesty's said subjects to abstain from all part in the aforesaid demonstrations, to return to their several duties, and to re-open their shops.

Tumultuous movements taking place after publication of this Proclamation will be immediately suppressed by the military authorities.—Hong Kong Government Gazette, Nov. 22.

DR. PARKER and COMMODORE ARMSTRONG paid a short visit to Sir John Bowring and Admiral Seymour at the Factories yesterday, and returned in the evening in the Lily to Whampoa.—Friend of China Nov. 22.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON.

SATURDAY, January 17, 1857.

THE OUDE FAMILY.

THE silence which has hitherto been preserved by the Oude family during their residence in this country, was yesterday broken by a visit which was paid to the Chairman, Deputy-Chairman, and Court of Directors of the East-India Company, by the heir-apparent of the ex-king and his uncle. These distinguished visitors had, we understand, previously signified their desire to exchange civilities with the Leadenhall representatives of the paramount power in India, and their proposal having been received in the same spirit in which it was made, this visit was the result. The prince and his uncle arrived at the East-India House about one o'clock, accompanied by their suite and Major Bird as interpreter, and were received at the entrance by an officer of the Court, who conducted them to the state-room, where the Chairman, Deputy-Chairman, several Directors, with Sir James Melvill and a staff of officers, were present. After a few courteous expressions on both sides, the whole party proceeded to view the Library and Museum, and then adjourned to another room, where they partook of an elegant déjeuner. The whole affair was strictly one of courtesy and civility, and free from any political meaning. The list of the visitors will be found in another column.

THE COLLISION IN CHINA.

WHILE India is in the enjoyment of profound internal tranquillity, two kingdoms, to her east and west, are embroiled with us in serious disputes, if not engaged in actual warfare. Already from her left frontier has India sent forth a force to the Persian Gulf, to show that Great Britain will allow no power to violate, by a gross act of aggression, treaties which have been solemnly contracted; and it may be that she will shortly have to stretch out her right hand to aid in chastising barbaric insolence in China. Our last impression contained the accounts of the outbreak of hostilities at Canton, as brought to our notice from various sources. Since that period the official despatches of Admiral Sir Michael Seymour have been given to the world by the Admiralty,* and they serve to clear up much that was vague and unsatisfactory in the reports which first reached this country, and clearly establish the necessity of taking the extreme measures which were finally resorted to. Without any previous notice, and without any reason being given for the act, a British lorch, owned by one of her Majesty's subjects at Hong Kong, is arbitrarily boarded by the Chinese authorities, her crew taken prisoners in spite of the remonstrances of the master, an Englishman, and the British flag hauled down. Upon being called upon, the Chinese officials would afford neither explanation nor redress, but crowned the outrage with insult. As the only means of bringing the affair to a settlement, an interview with the Viceroy of Canton was requested by the Admiral. This proposition met with a similar reception, and Governor Yeh sets the representative of Great Britain at defiance. Would those who now declaim against the demonstration of our power at this juncture, have considered it the duty of a British admiral to have tamely submitted to such insolence and arrogance as this? Do they not know that a lenient course would, under such circumstances, have been regarded as emanating from the inability to enforce our demands? Sir Michael Seymour correctly states that "moderation is considered by the officials only as an evidence of weakness." If, without notice, or without proof that all efforts to obtain a fitting reception to his proposals would fail, he had bombarded the town and destroyed its inhabitants, there would have been just ground for apprehension that the British Admiral had acted with precipitancy and inhumanity; but no such charge can be brought against Admiral Seymour. With firmness and moderation he insisted upon that respect being paid which was due to the British flag; but failing in every endeavour to attain his object by negotiation, he felt bound to show, and he did so with all the humanity and consideration compatible with a state of hostility, that acts of outrage and insult against the British nation cannot be committed with impunity. As a peaceable and high-minded man, who has long submitted to the petty annoyances and attacks of a cross-grained, cantankerous neighbour, is obliged at length to claim the protection of the law from some crowning act of molestation, so is a civilized nation occasionally forced into hostilities with a semi-barbaric power, to maintain its prestige and influence, and to protect its people from indignities and violence. No person can read the accounts given by either side without being impressed with the conviction that for a long period the Chinese authorities have systematically pursued a policy of threats and insult towards the Europeans who have traded at their ports. It is well known that at Canton resistance has been successfully applied to the admission of foreigners to certain privileges to which by treaty they were entitled. At the conclusion of the last war, arrangements were made for obtaining all reasonable facilities for a free intercourse for foreigners at certain Chinese ports and towns. The city of Canton was, at first, excluded from the list; but in 1847 it was agreed that the interdict should be removed within two years. But this has never been carried out, and the authorities have triumphed in their victory over the demands and expectations of foreigners. Matters were in this unsettled state when the collision took place. Each operation of the Admiral was preceded by a representation to the Governor of the consequences of his determination to persist in thwarting the just demands of the British. Fort after fort gave way before the steady fire from the British vessels, and were immediately taken possession of by the marines, who throughout are stated to have acted with great steadiness and forbearance. All unnecessary destruction of private property was guarded against; the bombardment was confined to the public buildings and the Governor's house. Time was given to the inhabitants to remove themselves and their property. These humane efforts of Admiral Seymour are as much deserving of admiration as his moderation and firmness. The exaggerated accounts of the wanton destruction of property which were at first circulated, called forth sentiments of regret and indignation, which have since been completely removed, except where prejudice and animosity have prevented the exercise of a clear judgment. It is easy to talk of forbearance and conciliation; but those who understand Asiatic politics must be aware that these terms are synonymous with weakness and fear in the diplomatic vocabulary of Oriental powers. In the address of the East-India and China Association, which appears in another column, it is aptly observed, in reference to the right established by treaty of free ingress and egress into and out of the city of Canton,—“The enforcement of this stipulation has been indulgently postponed from time to time at the solicitation of the Chinese authorities, and this indulgence, instead of conciliating, has only encouraged the obstinacy and hostility of the provincial Government and populace.” It is gratifying to find that foreigners on the scene of action all concur in the gross provocation to which the British have been subjected on this occasion, and that the Admiral and Consul acted only in accordance with the interests and dignity of their country.

* The great length of the correspondence precludes the possibility of its insertion in our columns. Its omission, however, is the less to be regretted, inasmuch as all the material points have been already prominently set forth in one of our previous Summaries.

The present operations may have terminated hostilities, or, unhappily, they may have assumed still wider dimensions. But whatever be the issue, the opportunity should not be lost of placing our relations with China on a more satisfactory footing than they at present rest. It is manifestly for the interests of China, though she may know it not, as well as for this country, that a more friendly understanding between the two nations should prevail. Whether this may best be effected by the appointment of a plenipotentiary at the court of Peking, as proposed by the East-India and China Association, or by some other means, it will be for her Majesty's Government to decide; and we are glad to find, from Lord Clarendon's answer to the address, that Ministers are fully alive to the point. That some measures should be adopted to prevent the risk of future collisions, and to protect the great interests that are now involved in the foreign trade with China, is absolutely necessary. We trust also that this unexpected rupture will turn out to be the commencement of a new and happy era in the history of this extraordinary and mysterious people, and prove the means of introducing more civilized habits and institutions into the present system of government, from which would infallibly proceed an improvement in its foreign relations.

STAFF AND DETACHED EMPLOYMENT.

WE understand that the regulation limiting the selection of her Majesty's officers to certain staff and detached employments in India has been further relaxed. Under the provisions of the enlarged rule, and during the exigencies of the public service, Queen's officers serving in India will henceforth, if duly qualified, be permitted to participate with the officers of the East-India Company in the undermentioned staff and detached appointments:—

General Commands;
Divisional Commands;
Brigade Commands;

Surveyors;
Revenue Surveyors;
Offices in the Department of Public Works;
Assistant and Deputy-Assistant Adjutants-General of Divisions; Brigade Majors;
Assistant and Deputy-Assistant Quartermasters-General of Divisions; Deputy Judge-Advocate.

Queen's officers possessing special qualifications for such appointments will also be deemed eligible for service with corps of irregular cavalry and infantry, provided the regiments to which they belong be actually on the establishment in India.

MR. LEWIS AND THE CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE appointment of Advocate-General of Bombay, vacant by the retirement of Mr. Le Messurier, has been conferred on Mr. Arthur James Lewis. Mr. Lewis was called to the Bar of the Middle Temple in May, 1828, and has practised chiefly in the Chancery courts, where he has generally been engaged in matters connected with India. As a public speaker, Mr. Lewis is also well known to the East-India proprietors, having for some years past taken a prominent part in the debates of Leadenhall Street; and it appears to be generally admitted that, in his selection for the responsible office he is about to fill, the Court of Directors have exercised a sound discretion. The appointment, moreover, may be turned to account in another point of view. Mr. Lewis, it is well known, is chairman of the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway Company, and his secession from the management of its affairs presents a favourable opportunity for the amalgamation of this Company with another, designated the “Eastern of Bengal,” which proposes to carry a line from Calcutta, in a north-easterly direction, through Jessore to Dacca. All persons are now agreed that the commerce of Calcutta has outgrown the capacities of the Hooghly, and that the only means of maintaining the commercial prosperity of the City of Palaces will be to connect it by rail with the Mutlah. Operations for this purpose have indeed already commenced; a site has been selected for the new port; the river has been buoyed off at a considerable expense; the result of the engineer's survey of the country proposed to be traversed may be shortly expected; and it is officially stated that the mercantile community of Calcutta entertain a strong desire to resort to the Mutlah for trading purposes. There exists little doubt, therefore, that this line will be almost immediately commenced. The company styling themselves the “Eastern of Bengal” found their claim to support chiefly on the facilities which their line will afford for the export of the agricultural produce of Eastern India. Now the distance from Jessore to Calcutta somewhat exceeds that from Jessore to the Mutlah, and as the Hooghly is gradually silting up, and bids fair to become wholly unnavigable, there seems some degree of absurdity in providing a permanent way for the transport of goods to Calcutta, which upon arrival there must be forthwith sent back almost in the same direction to the shipping port—the Mutlah. The obvious course, and certainly the most convenient and economical, would be to construct the line direct from Jessore to the Mutlah. At this point a junction should be effected with the line from Calcutta, and thus an easy communication both with the new port and the capital would be secured to the produce of most of the districts of Eastern India. The union of the two companies would greatly facilitate the formation of one continuous line from Dacca via the Moolah to Calcutta, which in all probability will prove the most profitable of any in India.

THE PUNJAB RAILWAY.

Our advertising columns contain a proposition for the formation of another Indian Railway Company, the object being the introduction of railroads in the Punjab. We shall advert more particularly to this scheme on a future occasion, and will now simply draw the attention of our readers to its great importance. It is virtually an extension of the Sind Railway, which, commencing at Kurrahee, proceeds to the Indus, near Hyderabad, where the river is easily navigable. From thence to Mooltan a line of steamers will be established, and at the last-named place the new line of railway will commence, and be carried to Lahore and Umritsur. By these means will a safe and rapid communication be established from Lahore to the sea by the ancient channel of the valley of the Indus.

COMMERCE WITH CHINA.

East India and China Association, Cowper's-court,
London, January 6, 1857.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Clarendon, K.G., her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, &c.

My Lord,—The members of this association beg leave to address your lordship on the occasion of the present crisis in China, many of us having personal connections, and a large amount of property at stake in that country, and being deeply interested in the uninterrupted maintenance of our commercial intercourse with its people.

2. We therefore hope, if Admiral Seymour should not have succeeded in effectually and permanently establishing our right of free ingress and egress into and out of the city of Canton, conformably with the treaty, her Majesty's Government will adopt prompt and effectual steps to secure that important condition, in order to preclude any future collision with the local government at Canton.

3. Your lordship will be aware that the enforcement of this stipulation of the treaty was indulgently postponed from time to time at the solicitation of the Chinese authorities at Canton, and this indulgence, instead of conciliating, has only encouraged the obstinacy and hostility of the provincial government and populace.

4. If free intercourse were insisted upon and established at Canton, we have no doubt that animosity would gradually subside, and our commercial transactions there be carried on with the same mutual satisfaction as at the northern ports, especially at Shanghai, where the increase of trade exceeds all expectation.

5. It may be necessary to make a conciliatory but powerful appeal to the Emperor at Peking, either by Great Britain singly, or in concert with the other treaty powers.

6. In fact, a new treaty will now be required, and we are quite willing to concur in the same liberality which was voluntarily accorded on the former occasion, by allowing to other Powers all the advantages which we may obtain for our own country.

7. In the arrangement of any new treaty it will be necessary to revise the tariff ad valorem rates for the assessment of duties; and it would be desirable to obtain permission to trade at any other in addition to the five ports, permitting, in return, Chinese vessels from all ports in China to trade with Hong-Kong; and for British subjects to pass into the interior of the country, to which no objection seems to be made by the population in the vicinity of Shanghai.

It would be a great advantage, both to Chinese and all other merchants, to have the free navigation of the large rivers.

If a first-class representative and plenipotentiary from her Majesty could be sent out to negotiate a new treaty, and to be permanently accredited to the court of Peking, the deplorable provincial collisions which have periodically occurred, would in all probability be hereafter avoided.

8. Many members of this association have been resident in China, and would at any time be ready to give local information derived from their own experience.

And when a new treaty is in course of formation, we hope we may be allowed, as on the former occasion, to submit such further suggestions as may occur to us for the maintenance and extension of our commerce with China.

9. We may observe, in conclusion, that our trade with China has become one of the greatest national importance.

The import of tea at the time of the treaty was in 1842, 42,000,000lb.; and has been in 1856, 87,000,000lb.

Of silk in 1842 (yearly average) 3,000 bales; 1856, 56,000 bales.

10. Seeing the magnitude of this trade, we have no doubt your lordship's powerful mind will be anxious to place it permanently, according to the 1st article of the Treaty of Nankin, upon the basis of "Peace, amity, and protection for persons and property."

—I have, &c.,

(Signed) S. GREGSON, M.P., Chairman.

Foreign-office, Jan. 8, 1857.

Sir,—I am directed by the Earl of Clarendon to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 7th instant, with reference to the events which have lately taken place at Canton; and, in thanking you for that communication, I am to assure you that it shall receive from Her Majesty's government all the attention which the importance of the subject demands.

I have further to say that Lord Clarendon will have much satisfaction in receiving from the East India and China Association any suggestions or advice with respect to the new treaty which it is desirable to negotiate with China.

I am, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

(Signed)

E. HAMMOND.

S. Gregson, Esq., M.P.,

East India and China Association, London.

A RAILWAY BRIDGE is about to be constructed, by Mr. Robert Stephenson, engineer, across the Nile at Kafr Laiss.

The following list contains the names of the princes of the Oude family and their suite who yesterday paid a visit of ceremony to the Directors of the East-India Company, in Leadenhall-street:—Meerza Mahomed Hamed Ali Behaudur, heir-apparent of the ex-king; General Meerza Sekundur Hushmut; Juwal Ali Behaudur, uncle of the heir-apparent; Moulvee Musheer Odden Khan Bahadoor; Major R. W. Bird, interpreter; Julees-ood-dowlah Bahadoor; Meer Mahommed Jafur Khan Bahadoor; Hukeem Mahommed Museeh; Moonshee Ooolad Alee; Moonshee Mahommed Hossain; Mahommed Mirza; Moonshee Kumrooddeen; Mirza Mahommed Alee; Newab Mehdi Kollie Khan Bahadoor; Syed Ali Hussein.

APPOINTMENTS (Downing-street, Dec. 24.)—Captain William S. Moorsom, civil engineer, has been appointed, by Mr. Secretary Labouchere, to be chief engineer to the Government of Ceylon, for the purposes of a railway survey. Commander William Hoseason, R.N., has been appointed by the Queen, Superintendent of the ports and quarantine of Malta.

KNIGHTHOOD OF INDIAN OFFICERS, &c.—War Department, Jan. 2.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Most Honourable Order of the Bath:—To be Ordinary Members of the Military Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders of the said Most Honourable Order, viz.:—Lieutenant-Generals George Petre Wymer, C.B., of the Bengal Army; Patrick Grant, C.B. of the Bengal Army. To be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders of the said Most Honourable Order, viz.:—James Macaulay Higginson, Esq., C.B., Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Island of Mauritius and its dependencies. The military distinction of the Bath has also been conferred on the following officers:—Lieut.-Gen. Auchmuty; Col. Straubenzie; Col. M'Murdo; Brev. Lieut.-Col. Daubeny (62nd), and Maude (3rd Buffs).

HER MAJESTY'S FORCES IN INDIA.—H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge has given directions for the whole of the regiments on the Indian establishment to be raised to their war strength as early as possible. The recruits joining the various Indian depôts will undergo a course of instruction in the use of the Enfield rifle. The following regiments have completed their periods of service in India, &c., viz., H.M.'s 10th, 29th, 78th, 84th, and 86th Foot (East-Indies); 37th Foot (Ceylon); 5th Foot (Mauritius); and the 6th, 12th, 45th, and 73rd Foot (Cape of Good Hope).

THE EUROPEAN AND INDIAN JUNCTION TELEGRAPH.—The petition and bill for an act of incorporation for the European and Indian Junction Telegraph Company were lodged on the 1st inst., in the Private Bill-office of the House of Commons.

THE TELEGRAPH.—During the recent gales, the anchor of a vessel damaged the electric telegraph-cable in the Channel. This may cause a delay in the receipt of telegraphic intelligence from India for some time to come.

THE P. AND O. CO.'S STEAMERS TO AMOY, CHINA.—Arrangements have been entered into between the Government and the Peninsular and Oriental Company by which the steamers hitherto running under the mail contract between Hong-Kong and Shanghai will call at the intermediate ports of Amoy, Chow-foo-Choo, and Ningpo, to land and receive mails.

THE CHINA STATION.—The authorities at the War Department have, we understand, determined to increase the force of the Commissariat Officers on the China Station, orders having been issued that a number of persons connected with that branch of the army should hold themselves in immediate readiness to embark for Hong-Kong.

EDMUND H. MONTEFIORE, who rendered himself conspicuous at the Cape and Ceylon by his prodigality, has been brought before the Lord Mayor on the charge of defrauding people at the Cape of Good Hope by means of forged bills of exchange. The prisoner was discharged. The crime is, it is supposed, punishable at the Cape only.

THE MAURITIUS MAILS.—The Government of Mauritius have made arrangements for the conveyance of mails once a month by steam-packets between Aden and that colony, in connection with the Overland Indian Mail, despatched from London via Southampton on the 20th, and via Marseilles on the 26th of each month. The regular mails for Mauritius will accordingly be made up and despatched from London in future on the 20th and 26th of each month; but, in order that advantage may be taken of any intermediate opportunity that may offer of communicating with Mauritius via Aden, supplementary mails will also be made up for conveyance as far as Aden, by the packets leaving Southampton on the 4th of the month, and by the route of Marseilles on the 10th of the month.

PRINTED PAPERS ADDRESSED TO FRANCE, &c.—The Post-office authorities have given the following notice:—"On the 1st of January, and thenceforward, the regulations with respect to printed papers addressed to France or Algeria, or to any of the French offices in Turkey, Syria, or Egypt, will be modified as follows:—The printed papers may be in any binding, mounting, or covering, whether such binding, &c. be loose or attached. In the case of prints or maps, rollers or cases may accompany them; and markers, whether of paper or otherwise, may be sent with books or other printed papers. No packet must, however, exceed the dimensions of eighteen inches in length, width, or depth. All other regulations for the transmission of these printed papers will remain in force, and the privileges above specified will not apply to other foreign countries, the correspondence of which is forwarded through France. The places in Turkey, Syria, and Egypt, at which France maintains post-offices are—Alexandria, Alexandretta, Beyrout, Constantinople, Dardanelles, Gallipoli, Jaffa, Latakia, Messina, Mytclene, Rhodes, Smyrna, Tripoli in Syria."

THE NEW NILE EXPEDITION (says the Athenæum) is in some danger of failure. One of the steamers has been lost in an attempt to ascend the First Cataract. Dissensions have broken out among Count d'Escayrac's followers; the leader himself quarrelling with the men of science, and the Anglo-American part of the expedition with the Gallo-German part. The first desired to push on at once, not dallying at Assouan under fear of the weather—the latter strongly urging rest and caution. Which party was right in such a discussion we cannot hope to decide. Unhappily the English were without their natural chief; for the orders calling Mr. Burton to this extraordinary service had not reached Alexandria in time, and the courageous adventurer had left for Bombay. Letters will doubtless overtake him at Aden, when he will at once proceed to the Nile, where his presence is so much required. We earnestly trust that an expedition so well planned will not be allowed to fail through the petty jealousy of the men employed. Let us add a word of suggestion to our own Foreign Office. Dr. Vogel and Corporal Maguire are in Africa at its disposal—bold, enterprising, and devoted servants of civilization. Why not direct these gentlemen to turn their faces from Lake Chad towards the Indian Ocean? There lies the great field for discovery. Dr. Barthe had proposed this very route,—a route which has often tempted the imaginations of successful travellers, yet one which is still virgin. After Dr. Livingston's labours, such a task as the passage from Lake Chad to the Upper Nile is anything but appalling. Is our Foreign Office disposed to yield all the laurels of discovery to the servants of the missionary societies?

POSTAGE ON NEWSPAPERS, via BELGIUM.—A British rate of 1d. each, and a foreign rate of 1½d. each, must (it is decreed by Post-office notice, dated the 12th instant.) be paid in advance upon every newspaper for Egypt, the Papal States, or Sardinia, when especially addressed to be forwarded via Belgium.

CAPTAIN SEYMOUR, the master of the ship Duke of Portland, appeared on the 4th inst., before the Thames Police magistrate, to answer a demand made upon him by a seaman, named Smith, who claimed a balance of £40 for his services on a voyage from Hong-Kong to Santa Cruz, the Havannah, and London. The case was remarkable, on account of its exposure of slave traffic practised with Chinese subjects. On an examination of the log of the Duke of Portland, it was discovered that the passengers by the ship had been subject to great mortality. There was an entry every day of the Chinese taken on board at Hong-Kong dying of "fever," and "exhaustion." Capt. Seymour admitted that 132 Chinese died on board between Hong-Kong and the Havannah, and that he had had as many as 200 invalids at one time. The Chinese are brought from China to work on the plantations of the Havannah. Mr. Selve, the magistrate who heard the case, animadverted warmly on this slave traffic, which he said was a disgrace to the British flag.

ON DIT that field-marshal's bâtons will be conferred by the Queen on Lords Seaton and Gough.

Memoirs on the Euphrates Valley Route to India, with Official Correspondence and Maps. By W. P. ANDREW, Esq., F.R.G.S. London: W. H. Allen and Co.

The energetic and enterprising chairman of the Sind and the Euphrates Valley Railway is determined that all the features of his scheme for re-establishing the ancient highway between Europe and Asia, shall be understood and appreciated by the public, and he has given to the world a memoir upon the subject, which is composed with great care and ability. It should be studied by every one interested in this important project. They will find in it facts diligently collected, and evidence thoroughly sifted. The political and commercial importance of the work of which it treats can hardly be overrated. "A railway along the Euphrates," says Mr. Andrew, "connected by efficient steamers in the Persian Gulf, with a railway along the Valley of the Indus, would not only open up new worlds for our civilization and our commerce, but the veteran armies of India might then be wielded with a rapidity and force that would be felt in Europe as well as Asia, at St. Petersburg as at Teheran." It is estimated that, by the adoption of the route through Asiatic Turkey, the overland journey to India will be reduced to seventeen days and a half in length. "The transit from London to Kurrachee would become indeed a mere pleasure excursion." And Mr. Andrew supports this text by a glowing description of the beauties of the scenery on the way, and the various places of historical interest on the road. The physical difficulties of the undertaking have diminished to very small dimensions under a fair and patient scrutiny. The moral difficulties, or such as will arise from the predatory character of the tribes which inhabit the territories through which the railway will pass, will be overcome by good management and conciliatory treatment. The evidence which Mr. Andrew has obtained from persons much conversant with the subject is very satisfactory. That great adjunct and condutor to the railway, the telegraph, will also be conducted by the same route; and with such men as Sir William O'Shaughnessy and Mr. Andrew to take part in the direction of the operations, we cannot but be very sanguine that the work will be speedily and satisfactorily accomplished. It seems to us that in this instance the telegraph wire will be the precursor of the iron rail, if, as is represented, the measures for carrying out the work are nearly matured. To conclude, in Mr. Andrew's own words, "The opening to the world the route between Europe and India by the Euphrates Railway, is no ordinary enterprise; it embraces in its scope the well-being and the hopes of nations, the stability of empires, and demands and requires the cordial and active co-operation of the English people, as well as of English statesmen." This we are assured it will secure. The Government and the East-India Company have already given it that "countenance and co-operation" which is essential to insure success; and the public will readily subscribe to a project of such great national importance, which presents so fair a promise of financial success.

A Bonus of Twenty per cent. from realized profits has been declared for the present year to all policy-holders on the profit scale who have paid five years' premium.

The advantages of this Society are as follow:—

Low Rates of Premium, calculated on the best and most recent investigations of mortality in India.

Annual participation in the profits after payment of premium for five years, by parties assured on the profit scale.

Immediate reduction of premium to the English rates in the case of a party assured proceeding to Europe for a permanency, and reduction after one year in the case of the party visiting Europe for a short period.

The civil rate only charged on the lives of parties in the military service, holding civil offices, as long as they continue in such office.

The Society also grants Deferred Annuities and Endowments payable at any given period.

Tables and full information may be had at the Office in Chatham Place; or on application to the Secretaries at Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or to the Agents of the Agra and United Service Bank, at the other Indian Presidencies.

NEW GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

On the 1st of February will be published, in one vol. 8vo., with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER

OF THE

Territories under the Government of the

AND OF THE

NATIVE STATES ON THE CONTINENT OF INDIA.

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.,

Author of the "History of the British Empire in India."

The work has been compiled by the authority of the Court of Directors, and though comprised within a single volume, it will be found to contain the great mass of information comprehended in the four volumes of the "Gazetteer of India," published by the same author in 1854. This result has been obtained by retrenching some few redundancies, and by adopting an enlarged page and distributing the matter into two separate columns. By these means space has been also acquired for the insertion of much new matter, rendered necessary by the political and territorial changes which have more recently taken place within our Eastern Possessions.

On the character of the work a few remarks will be sufficient. Its chief objects are,—

1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and

2ndly. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these will be added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the Reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which could not otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The volume, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has yet been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India. Its merits have been frequently discussed in the General Courts of the East-India Company, where successive Chairmen have borne ample testimony to the utility of the publication, and where it has been characterized by the best-informed among the Proprietors as "a complete history of India, untainted in any degree by political bias."

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS, FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

THE First Number of the Overland Newspaper, which is to supersede the CIRCULAR hitherto forwarded to India by Messrs. W. THACKER and CO., was published and will be continued upon the day of the departure of each succeeding Overland Mail.

ON THE 10TH OF JANUARY, 1857,

In entering upon the field of competition with established Journals having the same object in view, it will be required of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. that they should explain on what peculiar ground they lay claim to public support.

Their long and intimate connection with the Anglo-Indian community entitles them to believe that every confidence will be placed in their assurance, that they will endeavour to deserve the preference they seek to obtain; but they are aware, that even amongst their oldest and warmest friends, some practical demonstration of an intention to achieve superiority is expected.

Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. beg, therefore, to state that in their OVERLAND NEWS they propose to aim at a more perfect CONDENSATION of General News than has hitherto been attempted, that they may be enabled to devote a greater portion of their space to COMMERCIAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The peculiar constitution of British Society in India, and the immense impulse that has been given of late years to Railway Speculation, Agricultural Improvement, and Commercial Enterprise in that vast Empire, suggest the importance of a close attention to all these matters, which bear particularly on the interests of the great classes concerned.

From several channels of information, hitherto closed or neglected, the fullest details will therefore be sought.

LITERATURE in all its branches, as bearing essentially on the experience of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., will receive, as hitherto, the minutest care; and as they have been able to secure the services of a gentleman who moves much in literary circles, occasional items of pleasant gossip, which do not find their way into the public journals, will embellish the pages of the OVERLAND NEWS.

Upon all subjects connected with Indian politics, the interests of the Services, contemplated Local Changes, the arrival in and departure from this country of Passengers, by Ship or Steamer, the retirement of Officers of all classes, &c., the greatest attention will be bestowed; while the intelligence from Europe, of a general nature, will be presented in a striking form, accompanied by such Commentaries as may be expected from the pen of an experienced Journalist.

In a word, Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. hope that their Paper will be all that the best papers have hitherto been—AND SOMETHING MORE.

The Publication will be of the same size as the ordinary English Overland Papers, viz., a folio of Twenty-four pages, with Supplements when necessary, and it will be issued in time for transmission to India by each Fortnightly Mail, via Marseilles. The Price, inclusive of postage, will be Rs. 8 per annum, payable in advance. Orders to be addressed to Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., 87, Newgate Street, London; Messrs. THACKER, SPINK, and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Calcutta; Messrs. THACKER and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Bombay; and Mr. JAMES HILL, Lucknow.

MESSRS. W. THACKER & CO. have the pleasure to announce the publication of a LITHOGRAPH from the large Oil Painting by LIEUT.-COL. H. B. HENDERSON, Bengal Army, of which attracted so much attention when exhibited at the Crystal Palace.

The Copy has been most successfully executed by French Artists, and will form an interesting memento to all who are in any way connected with India.

The subject consists of a pile of Calcutta Fruits, around which are grouped characters illustrative of the following extract from a 'Journal in Calcutta':—"Our pretty Ayah is constantly taking our child among the servants. The child's bearer is very jealous at this, and hints that the attraction is the Consumah."

Price, Plain, 20s. Coloured, 30s.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN & CO., in addition to their business as Publishers and Booksellers, beg to remind their Friends and Correspondents in India, that they continue to undertake AGENCY of every description, as well as the execution of Orders from Regimental Messes, Book Clubs, &c.

Messrs. ALLEN & Co., from their long experience in the East-India Trade, and knowledge of the requirements of residents in India, feel confidence in executing all commissions entrusted to them; and as their mode of business is, to give personal attention to all orders, and to charge the same at the lowest remunerative prices, they must request to be favoured with a remittance (or reference for payment in London) from those parties who may desire to avail themselves of their services, and who have not, at present, accounts with the house.

11, WIGMORE STREET.—ESTABLISHED 1792.

J. CHAPPELL, 388, STRAND, LONDON, BOOT-

MAKER, and Professor of Fitting: Successor to the celebrated Mr. B. Smith, late of Great Queen Street, begs to call the attention of such to his method of measuring, by which he guarantees to produce a PERFECT FIT AT FIRST TRIAL, combining comfort with a gentlemanly form. J. C. particularly solicits those gentlemen who despair of obtaining comfortable Boots, as from his great success and consequent increase of business, he is confident of their becoming regular customers. The leather used is dressed so as not to draw the feet or become hard in wear, although it requires blacking in the ordinary way. Established 1825.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS a most excellent remedy for Indigestion.—Charles Strong, bricklayer, of the parish of Burghfield, near Reading, Berkshire, with great gratitude informs Professor Holloway that his Pills have cured him of Indigestion, accompanied with all its horrors, after several physicians had been consulted in vain; for three years he was troubled with these terrible symptoms, frequent vomitings and want of rest, until he accidentally heard of Holloway's Pills, and, persevering steadily with the same, in a few weeks he was restored to perfect health.

Sold by all Medicine Vendors, and at PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY'S Establishments, 214, Strand, London, and 87, Maiden Lane, New York; by A. Stampa, Constantinople; A. Guidici, Smyrna; E. Muir, Malta; and by all European and Native Vendors of Medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

WATCH, CLOCK, and CHRONOMETER MANUFACTORY,
33 AND 34, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON. ESTABLISHED 1749.
J. W. BENSON,

MANUFACTURER OF GOLD and SILVER WATCHES of every description, construction, and pattern, invites attention to his magnificent and unprecedented display of Watches, which is admitted to be the largest and best selected Stock in London. It consists of Chronometer, Duplex, Patent Detached Lever, Horizontal, and Vertical Movements, Jewelled, &c., with all the latest improvements, mounted in superbly-finished engine-turned and engraved Gold and Silver Cases. The designs engraved upon many of the cases are by eminent artists, and can only be obtained at this manufactory. If the important requisites, superiority of finish, combined with accuracy of performance, elegance, durability, and reasonableness of price, are wished for, the intending purchaser should visit this Manufactory, or send for the ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, published by J. W. BENSON (and sent post-free on application), which contains sketches, prices, and directions as to what Watch to buy, where to buy it, and how to use it. Several hundred letters have been received from persons who have bought Watches at this Manufactory, bearing testimony to the correct performance of the same. The following extracts from the opinions of the Press will, it is hoped, be a sufficient guarantee to the public that they may secure at this House a good Watch at a reasonable price:—

THOMAS BURNELL, Esq.

This Company is established to introduce Railways into the Punjab, commencing at Mooltan and proceeding to Lahore and Umritsir.

The Line will be about 230 miles in length, and will be connected with the Scinde Railway, by an improved system of steam navigation between Hyderabad, the upper terminus of the Scinde Railway, and Mooltan, and will place Lahore, Umritsir, and other important towns, in communication with Kurrachee, the natural port of Scinde, the Punjab, and neighbouring territories.

Lahore, situated on the Ravee, is the capital of the Punjab and the seat of its political administration. The town is very extensive, and carries on a brisk internal trade. The civil station of Anarkullee, and the large military station of Meeran Meer, are likewise attached to it. Umritsir, the commercial capital of the Punjab, distant 35 miles, is at least equal if not superior to Delhi in population and wealth. The intervening country is level, and without even a nullah of any size, and an intercourse of so great an extent is maintained between them, that the road is literally thronged day and night with every description of wheeled vehicle, horses, camels, &c., and foot passengers; in short, more resembling the street of a town than a mere communication between two cities so far apart. Umritsir is the grand entrepôt for the commerce of the cis-Sutlej States—the rich and mountainous region eastward to Kote Kangra—the horses, fruits, and woollens of Cabul and Bokhara, the shawls, and other produce of Cashmere, Yarkhand, and the mountainous country towards the north-east,—in fact, of the whole Punjab and the countries encircling it, are here concentrated. Mooltan is a large town and military station on the Sutlej or Gharra, so termed after its conjunction with the Beas. It is quickly becoming an important emporium, for it is the connecting link of the trade of Northern with South-Western India, or rather Bombay and Europe. Kurrachee, situated at the mouth of the Indus, is fast advancing into prosperity and into notice as a seaport; it will probably soon be known as the first in the empire, being superior to Calcutta, Madras, or even Bombay.—Calcutta Englishman.

Sir Justin Sheil, late British ambassador in Persia, has recently advocated the great political advantages to be derived "from a railway running the whole length of the left bank of the Indus."

For commercial and social, as well as state purposes, the improvement of the transit along this ancient line of communication has become a necessity.

The local authorities, especially Mr. Bartle Frere, the Commissioner in Scinde, and Sir John Lawrence, the Chief Commissioner in the Punjab, concur in the necessity of affording to the provinces drained by the Indus and its tributaries a free access to their port of shipment. The latter of these distinguished gentlemen, in a recent dispatch to the Government of India, makes the following forcible remarks:—

"Indeed, these two essentials, viz., the railroad and the steamers, may be said with truth to be the crying wants of the Punjab in the department of public works. These provided, the commerce and produce of those territories will be turned to their due course, viz., the Indus and its feeders, and to their natural outlet, viz., the Port of Kurrachee."

"For the railroad the face of the Doab offers an unusual equality of surface." "The Chief Commissioner, while deprecating any general extension of the public works department in the Punjab for the present, would yet beg most earnestly to press these cardinal objects on the attention of the Government. He believes that, if carried out, they would effect more for the development of the resources of those territories than any other work, or number of works, that could be devised."

A railway from Mooltan to Lahore and Umritsir would not only afford an outlet to the impeded traffic of the Punjab and neighbouring territories, but would of necessity greatly enhance the importance and value of the line from Kurrachee to Hyderabad. Scinde and the Punjab (including the States under control), cover an area of 130,000 square miles, with a population of nearly twenty-five millions. The flower of the European and native army occupies these provinces, and numbers 70,000 men, more than 15,000 of whom are Europeans.

The Directors having received official information that the views long entertained by them, as to the best mode of introducing improved means of transit along the line of the Indus, had been approved by the local authorities, and permission having been obtained from the Honourable East-India Company for making the necessary surveys of the country between Mooltan, Lahore, and Umritsir, a superintending engineer of ability and experience, with a carefully selected staff of six engineers, left England for India on the 1st of September last.

Such deed as the Directors may consider proper for the regulation of the Company, and for carrying out the objects in view, will be prepared; and if any Shareholder should fail to execute the same for one month after the publication of a notice in the "Times" newspaper, calling on the Proprietors so to do, his Shares, with the Deposit paid thereon, will become forfeited to the use of the Company.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

INTELLIGENCE of exciting interest has been received by the present Mail from the seat of war on each side of India. We learn, on the one hand, that the occupation of Karrack, an island in the Persian Gulf, situated about thirty miles north-west of Bushire, was the first object of the expedition. This was effected on the 4th December, no opposition being offered by the small body of mercenaries who had been located on the island for its protection. The fleet then dropped down to Haillia Bay, twelve miles to the south-east of Bushire. Here the landing of the troops commenced on the 7th, and continued, with little molestation on the part of the enemy, until the 9th, when, the disembarkation being completed, the force advanced upon Bushire. Colonel Stopford, commanding the first brigade, took his position on the right, and Colonel Honner, in command of the second, was posted on the left. Such was the order of march. The steam-frigates moved on the left flank of the army in support. About noon on the day of departure, Sir Henry Leake, in the Assaye, arrived abreast of the old fort of Rusheer, four miles and a half below the town of Bushire. Its position was naturally a strong one; the walls were thick, and protected by a dry ditch forty feet deep. In front was a heavy redoubt, scarped on the sea face, while the remaining sides were well protected. This stronghold was observed to be occupied by a force estimated at from 1,500 to 2,000 men. The Assaye, unable to make a closer approach, opened fire with shot and shell from her eight-inch guns, at the distance of 1,700 yards, and with such effect that the bulk of the enemy had recourse to precipitate flight. About 300 remained, who appear to have been driven back by the advancing columns of the land force, and who thereupon seemed determined to make a vigorous defence. They were without artillery, but defended themselves ably with their matchlocks. The British troops now seemed anxious to make a dash. Brigadier Stopford, mounted to lead his brigade, and was called to the spot, pierced through the heart. The 64th followed the enemy's position, followed by the 20th native which appeared resolved to act in honourable rivalry with the Europeans. Two officers of this regiment, Lieutenants Utterson and Warren, fell in the charge. The struggle for some time was severe; but at length the assailants forced the enemy back, and closed upon the fort, which was now being fast abandoned by its defenders. The escape of the fugitives was, however, cut off by the Poonah horse and a squadron of the 3rd cavalry. In command of the latter was Colonel Malet. This officer had just saved the life of a wounded Arab, as he was about to be cut down by a trooper, when the wretch seized his matchlock, which he had dropped in imploring quarter, and shot his benefactor dead. Captain Wood, of the 20th, was dangerously wounded. Among the native and non-commissioned officers and men the loss amounted to six killed and thirty-five wounded. The town of Bushire surrendered on the following day, after four hours' bombardment, unattended by any casualty on the part of the British. We extract the details from the Bombay Times :—

Captain Jones was deputed into the town with a flag of truce, in a small steamer carrying the summons of surrender, and the terms offered the garrison. The non-combatants and women had permission to withdraw. Private property of all descriptions was to be protected; the fullest toleration in matters of religion secured; the garrison to be suffered to march out with all the honours of war. The Governor was allowed till dawn the following day to give an answer to the terms proposed, but the flag of truce was fired on; and after waiting for some time, on the assumption that this might possibly have occurred from mistake, the envoy returned, his mission unaccomplished. An apology was almost immediately afterwards sent by the Governor on board the fleet, and the declaration of war of the Governor-General, and letter of terms proposed, were transmitted by the messenger. Meanwhile, General Stalker intimated to the Admiral his intention of advancing with all his troops on Bushire the following morning (10th December), and the fleet was immediately disposed in order of battle,—first dismantling the enemy's newly-erected earthworks, and then moving with a view of breaching the south wall of the town. The tide was favourable, and so eager was every one to close in, that every ship was laid aground at high water, and daybreak found them all ready to open on the fort. A second flag of truce, begging for twenty-four hours' further delay, now made its appearance. The request was at once refused; and at eight the signal to engage was hoisted, and a storm of shot and shell at once poured in. The redoubt south of the town, where the enemy had assembled in force to resist our troops, was the chief object of attention; and notwithstanding the enormous distance, it was speedily cleared, the defenders retiring within the walls. As this work commanded the walls, much importance was attached to it by both parties; and General Stalker was advancing upon it when it was abandoned, just as his line was being formed. Though their small guns were useless, the courage and perseverance with which the larger ones were worked surpassed all expectation, and the Semiramis, Feroze, Victoria, and Falkland were repeatedly struck both in hull and rigging; strange to tell, not a man was hurt. By noon the batteries were all silenced, and the troops were preparing for the assault, when the flag-staff was struck down in token of submission. The Governor and his staff immediately came out and surrendered themselves; the garrison, from one thousand five hundred to two thousand in number, laid down their arms, and at four o'clock the British flag was hoisted over the town, the troops appointed to garrison it having marched in at sunset. A large proportion of the Persian army had fled as we approached; numbers were drowned in attempting to escape. About three thousand in all were said to have perished. Sixty-five guns, many of them brass, most of them in good condition, and some of them of large calibre, with vast quantities of warlike stores and small arms, fell into our hands.

Preparations upon a large scale are being made to follow up the blow that has been struck. According to the Bombay Times, a second force, consisting of 25,000 men, is to be despatched to the Gulf from the three presidencies. Of these, 5,000 are to be sent from Bombay, where it appears the 78th Highlanders, the 14th dragoons, and Jacob's Sinde horse, are already under orders. General Ourram had arrived at Bombay, and was about to leave for the purpose of assuming the supreme command, either in the Semiramis or the Assaye.

Eastward of India the aspect of affairs had not become more pacific. The narrative of events consequent upon the outbreak of hostilities at Canton broke off, it will be recollected, in our last number, with the capture of the Barrier forts, which had been attacked by Commodore Armstrong, in consequence of the Chinese having fired upon a man-of-war's boat under American colours. The intelligence was then brought down to the 25th November. On the following day Blenheim Reach fort was taken by her Majesty's steamer Barracouta, without loss. On the 4th December the French Folly fort, which had been reoccupied by the Chinese, was attacked and carried, with the loss of one man killed and two wounded, on the side of the assailants: Shameen fort was likewise destroyed. By way of reprisal, the Chinese set fire to the British factories, and also to the Oriental, Agra, and Mercantile banks. Sir John Bowring had applied to the Government of India for troops; and it is understood that a portion of the troops in Ceylon were also to be held in readiness for service in China. The following particulars are extracted from an extra sheet of the China Mail, published at Hong-Kong on the 16th December.

"The factories have been burnt down by the Chinese; and the only particulars we have ascertained are, that at 10-30 or 11 o'clock on Sunday night, the beating of tom-toms sounded the alarm, and instantly the flames burst out in every direction. Vigorous efforts were made by the seamen and marines to stop their progress; but all such attempts were fruitless, and the fire raged throughout the night, and up to the time of the steamer leaving. At first, some hopes were entertained that the flames might be extinguished; but fresh fires burst out all round. Dent & Co.'s premises were about the first to go, and the whole of the Paoushun Hong, the Imperial, French, Minqua's, Soike—all the hongs indeed—are destroyed,—the only houses untouched when the steamer left, being—the British Consulate, Augustine Heard & Co.'s, and Jardine, Matheson, & Co.'s, Turner & Co.'s, and one or two others in the New English Hong; Russell & Co.'s, in the Swedish Hong; and Wetmore and Co.'s, in the Imperial Hong: and whether they would ultimately escape the fate of the others was very doubtful. The three banks—the Oriental, Agra, and Mercantile—were on fire, with no hopes whatever of saving them; and Admiral Seymour had withdrawn his men into the Garden, the only refuge left for foreigners. Only one fatal accident is known to have occurred; Mr. Odiorne T. Lane, nephew of Sir John Bowring, having been killed—crushed by the falling in of a wall at Fletcher's & Co.'s house, which was blown up by our people. Dr. Winchester, the acting vice-consul, was with him at the time, but received only some slight bruises. What steps the Admiral means to take are of course unknown, but there is little doubt that the city of Canton will be no longer spared; and the discharge of rockets and shell is said already to have commenced."

POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

The Right Honourable the Governor in Council has the highest gratification in publishing for general information the following despatches received from Maj.-Gen. Stalker, C.B., commanding the expedition to the Persian Gulf, from Rear-Admiral Sir H. Leake, K.H., R.N., and from Commander Jones, I.N., political agent with the field force, announcing the surrender of Bushire on the 10th instant.

The island of Karrack was occupied by the British forces on the 4th instant, without opposition.

The Right Honourable the Governor in Council will feel most sincere pleasure in drawing the attention of the Right Honourable the Governor-General of India in Council to the gallantry displayed by Maj.-Gen. Stalker, C.B., and Rear-Admiral Sir H. Leake, K.H., and by the officers and men under their command during these important operations.

The Right Honourable the Governor in Council is pleased to direct that a royal salute be fired at noon this day in honour of the capture of Bushire and the occupation of Karrack.

By order of the Right Honourable the Governor in Council.

H. L. ANDERSON, Sec. to Govt.

Bombay Castle, 27th December, 1856.

From Major-General F. Stalker, C.B., commanding Expeditionary Field Force, to H. L. Anderson, Esq., Secretary to Government, Political Department, Bombay.

Head-Quarters, Field Force, Bushire, 12th Dec. 1856.

SIR,—I have the satisfaction of reporting to you, for the information of the Right Honourable the Governor in Council, that the British flag has been hoisted on the walls of Bushire, which, as well as the island of Karrack, is garrisoned by our troops.

I have the honour at the same time to forward copy of my letter of this day's date to the Adjutant-General, and I trust that the amount of duty of all kinds with which I am overwhelmed will plead my excuse for any deficiency of detail.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

(Signed) FOSTER STALKER, Major-General,
Commanding Expeditionary Field Force.

Head-Quarters, Field Force, Bushire, Dec. 12, 1856.

SIR,—I have the honour to report for the information of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the complete success which, under the protection of Almighty God, has attended our arms. The British flag waves over the walls of Bushire. The place, infinitely stronger than I had any reason to believe, from the information I had received, surrendered on the appearance of our troops before it, on the 10th instant. The previous day we had a smart affair in dislodging the enemy from a strong position they occupied in the old Dutch fort of Reshire. The casualties on this occasion, though numerically small, were principally among the officers, and, I regret to say, included Brigadier Stopford and Lieutenant-Colonel Malet, 3rd light cavalry, killed; Captain Wood, Lieutenants Utterson and Warren, 20th Bo. N.I., wounded, the two latter since dead (Captain Wood, though severely wounded, is doing well). The lesson the enemy received on this occasion, together with the bombardment of the works, the imposing appearance of the troops in line, and of the fleet, was doubtless the cause of their want of spirit in surrendering the strongly fortified town of Bushire, in which we have found fifty-nine guns,* with large quantities of ammunition and warlike stores. The governor of the place, and the commander of the troops, came out and gave up their swords. They, and one of the principal officials, are now in my camp, and will be sent to Bombay. The garrison, to the number of 1,500 or 2,000 men (a large number having previously effected their escape, and very many others having been drowned in attempting to do so), grounded their arms in front of our line, and were next morning escorted by the cavalry some distance into the country, and set free. Every assistance and co-operation has been rendered by the fleet, a heavy fire was opened in the early morning, and kept up spiritedly for some hours, till the place surrendered. At Reshire also, the previous day, all the co-operation possible was rendered by the fleet. And my very best thanks are due to Sir Henry Leake, the officers and seamen, for their unwearied exertions in landing troops, which, owing to the absence of any other boats than those of the fleet, was a work of much labour, occupying the greater part of three days and two nights. The force landed at Hallila Bay, about twelve or thirteen miles south of Bushire, without any serious opposition, a body of 300 or 400 men who appeared being scattered by the fire of the gunboats. There being no carriage-cattle, the troops were landed without tents or baggage of any description, three days' rations being carried in the haversacks. The hardships which the men have been called upon to undergo have been endured most cheerfully, and I cannot say too much in their praise. Being still without our baggage, I have been unable as yet to obtain the reports called for from the several officers commanding brigades, regiments, and detachments; but I shall do myself the honour to enclose them for the information of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

I ought to have mentioned that, on approaching Bushire, the enemy were observed to occupy, in some force, an entrenched position, with a strong redoubt about a mile and a half from the walls, and commanding the wells from which the main supply of water for the town is derived. This position was precipitately abandoned on my line being formed. It also had sustained a bombardment from the fleet.

I would beg especially to mention the unwearied exertions and valuable aid rendered to me, from the landing at Hallila Bay to the taking of Bushire, by my assist. adj.-gen., Lieut.-Colonel Younghusband; Capt. Wray, assist. quartermaster-gen.; Major Hill, commanding Engineers; Capt. Dunsterville, assist. commiss.-gen.; and Dr. Mackenzie, the superintending surgeon.

Brig. Stopford and Lieut.-Col. Malet died leading on their men in the most gallant style. Brig. Honner, commanding 2nd Inf. Brig.; Lieut.-Col. Shepherd, who succeeded to the command of the 1st Inf. Brig.; Lieut.-Col. Trevelyan, commanding the Artillery Brig.; and Lieut.-Col. Tapp, commanding the Cavalry Brig., have earned my warmest thanks for the manner in which their arduous duties have been carried; as also Capt. Pottinger, brig.-maj. of Artillery, whose exertions were conspicuous; and my best thanks are equally due to Maj. Sterling, commanding H.M.'s 64th reg.; to Capt. Macleod, who succeeded to the command of the 20th reg.; to Lieut.-Col. Ramsay, commanding 2nd Eur. L.I.; to Maj. Manson, commanding 4th Rifles; to Capt. Hough, commanding 2nd Belooch batt.; to Capt. Forbes, who succeeded to the command of the 3rd L.C.; to Maj. Blake, commanding 4th troop H.A.; to Capt. Hatch, commanding No. 3 Lt. Fd. Batt.; to Capt. Gibbard, commanding No. 5 Lt. Fd. Batt.; and to Capt. Dickinson, commanding the Sappers and Miners.

I have also derived every possible assistance from my aide-de-camp, Capt. Hunter; Maj. Ballard, head of the intelligence department; Maj. Boye, the dep. jud. ad.-gen.; Capt. Rigby, who has acted as my Persian interpreter; Capt. Finimore, commissary of ordnance; Capt. Collier, dep. assist. adj.-gen.; Capt. Shewell, and Lieut. Holland, dep. assist. quar.-mr.-gen.; Maj. Barr, paymaster; and Lieut. Willoughby, sub-assistant commissary-general.

Lord Dunkellin, Coldstream Guards; Maj. Taylor, Persian Embassy; and Mr. Johnstone, Indian navy, also rendered most efficient service (having attached themselves to my personal Staff); and to Mr. Johnstone's knowledge of the country and its inhabitants, with the unwearied zeal he has exhibited, I am much indebted.

In fine, no thing could have surpassed the admirable spirit exhibited by the officers and men of all ranks, and the utmost praise is due for their zeal, devotion, and gallantry.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

(Signed) F. STALKER, Major-General,
Commanding Expeditionary Field Force.

From Rear Admiral Sir Henry J. Leake, K.H., R.N., Commanding Naval Force, Persian Gulf Expedition, to the Right Hon. Lord Elphinstone, G.C.H., Governor of Bombay.

H.C. Steam Frigate Assaye, at anchor off Bushire, 10th Dec., 1856.

My Lord,—It becomes my pleasing duty to report to your lordship in council, that after a bombardment, which commenced this morning at eight o'clock, between the Persian batteries and the men-of-war of the Indian navy, and lasted on both sides until nearly an hour after noon, that the town of Bushire has been taken, and the flag of our Sovereign is now flying on the citadel.

It was determined that the disembarkation of the troops should take place in Hallila Bay about ten miles south of the town. All was ready on the morning of the 7th inst., and the gunboats in advance to cover the landing, when a number of the enemy were discovered in a da grove about 200 yards to the left of the beach; the boats opened fire, and, after the exchange of a few shots, the enemy retired. Here the famous chief, the son of Baucher Khan, was killed by a shell from one of the advanced boats, and I trust gave a check to, and prevented the approach of, a large number of Persian troops, who would have very much harassed the army while landing.

On the following day I paid a visit to General Stalker at the camp, and on parting I promised him that I would keep close to the shore in this ship, and support the left of the army on its approach to the fort of Reshire (about four miles from this place), where it was supposed, from the information we had received, the enemy, in number from 1,500 to 2,000, would receive our troops and make a powerful resistance. On my nearing the fort, this information was confirmed, and we saw it perfectly full of Persian soldiers, who were drawn up ready for the attack. At this moment, I was about 1,700 yards from them when we commenced firing shell—many dropping within the trenches and committing much slaughter, obliged the Persian troops to fly, with the exception of about 800, who made a resolute stand, and were driven out by the troops in one of the most brilliant and gallant charges I ever witnessed. Here the troops halted for the night.

I then pushed on for this roadstead, and at daylight this morning, seeing the Persian army drawn up near the wells (their centre supported by a high fortified tower and redoubt), it was my duty to dislodge them; and for this service I ordered the vessels named in the margin,* under the command of Lieutenants Tronson, Worsley, Chitty, and Giles, and eight heavy-armed gunboats, under Lieut. Stradling, to place their ships in position to attack it. This was done in a most gallant way; and in the course of an hour, I had the satisfaction to see the whole of the Persian troops in full retreat to the town, but in perfect order and with great coolness, supported by their artillery. A boat, with a white flag, was now seen approaching the ship; and on one of the chiefs arriving on board, a request was made by the governor of the town for a delay of operations for twenty-four hours, to offer terms. This I instantly refused, in consequence of his having fired on one of our small steamers, bearing a flag of truce, the day before. Half an hour was given him to get out of the way of our shot; and the ships having been placed in line of battle, my flag-ship in the centre, the action commenced, and continued on both sides for two hours, when, observing two batteries outside the town, one a kind of miniature Malakoff, harassing the Semiramis and Feroze, I directed our fire towards them; and in three hours they were perfectly silenced and the guns dismounted. A tower on the north-west angle of the fort, and a masked battery below the residency flagstaff outside the walls, kept up a constant and steady fire upon the Semiramis and Feroze. It was necessary to silence them also; and seeing that both ships were much damaged by their steady aim, the foremost guns of this ship were ordered to be directed towards them, and in the course of an hour both batteries ceased firing.

I was now anxious to make an opening in the wall of the town, that the troops might have nothing in their way, if General Stalker, on his arrival, determined upon carrying the place by assault. Our fire was therefore directed to the S.W. angle, and the breach commenced by knocking down a part of the tower and the embrasure, in which a gun was mounted, as well as the lower part of the wall. The fire from their batteries at this time gradually slackened, and at this moment the flagstaff in the town was hauled down in token of submission, and the place surrendered.

The army was by this time close to the town, and it was a source of the greatest pleasure to me to feel that we had cleared away every obstacle that presented itself on their onward march, the more so as they had lost so many gallant fellows the day before when storming the Fort of Reshire.

The ships of the fleet have suffered considerably in their hulls, masts, and rigging, from the fire of the enemy's guns; the Semiramis and Feroze have some shot through them, but nothing to prevent all being ready for sea in a day or two. I am most happy to add, that no person has been touched, nor has any casualty occurred during the four hours and a half we were under fire; how this has happened is miraculous, for the grape shot, which fell at every instant around and abreast the gun-boats, and the round shot over and about our ships, was very severe, and proves that our enemy were more formidable than they were supposed to be even by those who had known the town years before, there being fifty-nine guns mounted on the batteries.

It now becomes a pleasing part of my duty to bring to the notice of your Lordship in Council the very great assistance I have received from Commodore Ethersey (who met me off the island of Kishm, and from his knowledge of this place, gave me much valuable information), Capts. Jenkins and Young, Commanders Macdonald (in charge of all the transports) and Rennie, and Acting Commanders Foulerton and Adams, the latter the captain of this ship, the officers, petty-officers, and seamen of the fleet under my command; nor can I ever forget their gallant conduct in this day's battle, or their cheerfulness and activity in carrying out my orders, and in moving their ships into position abreast of the batteries, and I am sure the Government will think with me that this was no easy task to perform, for most of the vessels drew from fifteen to sixteen feet water, and we had to take them (at high water) some way through soft mud to get near enough to the forts, and this under a heavy fire.

Where all have so ably and gallantly performed their duty, it is difficult to particularise individuals, but I desire to express my warm thanks to Capt. Griffith Jenkins, the first captain of this ship, for the very great assistance he has afforded me throughout the whole of the operations, and particularly during the action. He was the first officer, assisted by Maj. Hill, engs., and Lieut. Clarkson, the first lieutenant of my flag-ship, to enter the town, and hoist the British flag.

I trust, my lord, it will not be taking too much upon myself to express my admiration of the gallant conduct of Gen. Stalker and his brave army, the more so as I have had the honour of being associated with them for many weeks, and have been an eye-witness of all their proceedings from the day of landing, as well as on their advance to the town. In doing so I offer the humble tribute of a British admiral to the brave general, his officers, and soldiers, whose dashing conduct on the day of storming the fort of Reshire can never be forgotten.

I cannot deny myself the satisfaction of bringing to the notice of your Lordship in Council the excellent manner in which the commanders and officers and crews of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamships, named in the margin,* have conducted their ships during the time they have been with the fleet. They are at all times ready for any hard work, and have rendered me very essential service; and I beg to express my sincere thanks to them collectively and individually.

To the masters commanding the merchant ships named in the margin,† and their officers and crews, especially to the commander of the Result, Capt. Cow, whose kind and considerate conduct in bringing off the wounded, did him honour, I tender my best thanks for their active exertions. All did their duty, and vied with each other day and night which ship should do the most in landing the troops, horses, and stores.

In conclusion, may I again request your Lordship's notice of the gallant officers who have given me so much assistance and support during the time I have been fitting out the Persian Gulf expedition;—by their exertions nearly 10,000 persons, with all their camp equipage, provisions, guns, and stores, and 1,100 horses, have been landed on the shores of Persia without the slightest accident, and, with the exception of five horses, without a casualty of any sort; and by to-morrow evening the troops will have their tents pitched, cooking things ready, and every arrangement to give them comfort and shelter from the cold weather and rains of the winter. The Indian navy being a service of seniority, precludes promotion, and, unlike their brethren of the army, they can gain nothing of advancement to a higher rank; but if, in bringing to the notice of your Lordship in Council their good, meritorious conduct upon this as well as every other occasion, I have the good fortune to render a service to those who have so thoroughly done their duty, it will be a source of the greatest gratification to me.

I have the honour to be, my Lord, your Lordship's humble and obedient servant, (Signed) HENRY J. LEEKE, Rear Adm., R.N.

Commander-in-Chief I.N., and commanding the Naval Force, Persian Gulf Expedition.

From Commander Felix Jones, I.N., Political Agent with the Forces, and Resident in the Persian Gulf, to H. L. Anderson, Esq., Sec. to Gov. Bombay.

Residency in the Persian Gulf, Bushire, Dec. 13, 1856.

Sir,—My last despatch made known my retirement from Bushire. I now continue the report of my proceedings to the present date, in connection with the Expeditionary Force in this Gulf.

2. On the 29th November, a detachment of the fleet, as per margin,‡ first hove in sight of Bushire, and dispelled the prevailing idea that the force would not quit the shores of India. This illusion I had been able to maintain perfect to the last moment, though the object I had contemplated of an immediate descent on the coast failed, from the fleet being scattered in various parts of the Gulf. It was not indeed until the 6th inst. that they were sufficiently collected to admit of direct operations being commenced; but in the meantime the island of Karrack was occupied and formed into a military depot, as reported in my despatch to Maj.-Gen. Stalker, under date 4th inst.

* Precursor, Pottinger, Chusan, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy.

‡ Feroze, steam frigate, towing two merchant ships and corvette Falkland.

3. The day subsequent to the arrival of the first ships, the Governor of Bushire wrote to me officially on the subject of the display before the town; but, as I was then about proceeding to meet the general some miles off at sea, an answer to his inquiries was delayed, as shown in the accompanying letters. On the 3rd Dec. the Governor-General's Proclamations were sent to him officially, with the sanction of the major-general commanding the force. To these there was no reply.

4. On the 6th instant the fleet moved down to Hallila Bay, which Commodore Ethersey had pronounced the best suited for the debarkation of the force, and no spot could have been better selected. Dispositions were made for landing the force on the following morning, when it was effected in admirable order, though not unobserved by the enemy, small parties of whom were driven from their lurking-places in the date-groves by the fire of the gun-boats and well-directed shot from the steam-frigate Ajdaha.*

5. Shortly after noon the force was enabled to advance from the beach, and take up an extended front before the enemy, seen at intervals watching our movements, a few miles in advance. Great difficulties, however, had to be contended with in landing the cavalry horses and artillery equipage, from a paucity of native boats, which I had failed in procuring from the Arab coasts, owing to the impracticability of dealing with the people in moments of emergency and need. These difficulties were, however, readily surmounted by the skill and activity of the Indian naval officers and men, whose exertions on this occasion merit the highest praise. These exertions were fully appreciated by their associates in arms, not less active in their endeavours to get at the enemy with the least possible delay.

6. Forty-eight hours sufficed to put the troops in motion northward; the ships of war, led by the admiral, advancing along the coast to their support. This was on the morning of the 9th, and by noon the enemy were observed to be in some force in the village of Reshire. Here, amid the ruins of old houses, garden-walls, and steep ravines, they occupied a formidable position. But, notwithstanding their firmness, wall after wall was surmounted, and finally they were driven from their last defence (the old fort of Reshire), bordering on the cliffs at the margin of the sea. This was carried at the point of the bayonet, the enemy then only flying in despair down the cliffs, where many met their death in their endeavours to escape through the ravines of the south. The nature of the ground, however, rendered pursuit difficult to the horse, though many were cut up in a chase of some distance. Details of this spirited affair will be given by the proper officers. I shall therefore merely observe, that the enemy received at first a lesson he will not readily forget, for the tribe families of Dashti and Tunge-toon comprising his ranks are regarded as the most brave, as well as the most skilled, in the defence of posts like Reshire, where regular troops cannot work with full effect. Brigadier Stopford, C.B., met his death here, and other loss was experienced. The wounded were received into the ships the same evening, and provisions were thrown into the camp from seaward during the night.

7. It had been agreed upon that I should proceed in person to the town of Bushire in a small steamer, with a flag of truce, bearing the accompanying copy of a summons to surrender, with the terms offered to the garrison. While the above was enacting, I proceeded on this errand, with the humane object also of receiving such of the merchants and townspeople as might be desirous of shelter in the fleet. This was quite in accordance with the wishes of the Government of India in regard to the inhabitants of Bushire; and the maj.-gen., the admiral, and myself, were induced to believe that my presence near them might tend to avert much bloodshed. In this, however, we were disappointed, for, on passing through the intricate channel leading to the town, two batteries, at a distance of 500 yards, opened upon the Assyria, bearing the flag of truce, in defiance of all usage of war. Deeming it might be a mistake, I caused the vessel to stop, but a second and a third shot passing close to us, I was compelled to retrace my steps, and even then, two more guns were discharged. I could scarcely account for this conduct, having taken some pains to explain the meaning of a flag of truce, in the event of warfare, before quitting the town; but, while relating the circumstance to Rear Admiral Sir Henry Leeke, a flag of truce from the shore was reported, and the bearer (Mirza Ismail, collector of customs in the town) came off with a written apology from the the Governor, who, with the chief officers of the garrison, were stated to have been outside of the walls examining into the condition of the exterior defences at the time; every regret was expressed, the act was attributed to the ignorance of an artilleryman, with the hopes that it would be overlooked. To this the admiral and self replied, that so far as we were personally concerned, we were willing to credit the statements of the Governor, and accepted the apology, though the act itself, in whatever way originating, must stigmatize the Persian Government and its officers in the eyes of all civilized states. Mirza Ismail returned with a summons to the shore.

8. While this was going on, a note from the maj.-gen. commanding announced his intentions of advancing on the town the following morning, and the admiral disposed his fleet in order of battle, for first dismantling the newly-erected outworks, and then moving with the view to breaching the south wall of the town. The following morning, as the tide served, the ships were in the positions assigned them. A second flag of truce had come off begging twenty-four hours' delay, but this was promptly rejected, and at near eight o'clock the signal was hoisted to engage. Shot and shell were aimed at the Redoubt south of the town, but with little effect, owing to the great range, though eventually the enemy, assembled there to oppose the troops, were dislodged, and beat a retreat with their guns into the town. The ships, in the meantime, had moved upon the town, and such was the ardour displayed to get close into the works, that every ship was laid aground at the turn of high water, and for four hours continued to cannonade the defences, which were active in replying the whole time; many of their guns, however, were not of sufficient calibre to reach the ships; but the perseverance of the Persian gunners in firing from the more heavy pieces was admired by every one. Their shot told very often on the hulls of the Victoria, Falkland, Semiramis, and Feroze; which latter vessels, under Capt. J. Young and Com. J. Rennie (if comparisons are admissible where all exerted themselves alike), had the posts of honour for the day. Details of the affair it is unnecessary for me to enter upon. It will suffice for me to report that some of the guns being silenced, on the approach of the army under Maj.-Gen. Stalker, C.B., to breach the wall on the gate side before assault, the Persian flagstaff was felled in token of submission. This was at noon. The Persian flag has since been recovered by myself, and presented as a joint trophy to the chiefs conducting the combined operations in this expedition, who, with every officer and man in it, whether soldier or sailor, have certainly won for themselves an honourable name.

9. After surrender, some little hesitation was shown on the part of the Governor and garrison to come out of the town; an assuring note, coupled with the threat of an assault in half an hour, was, however, sent in by a freed captive; and on the expiration of the time that officer was seen issuing with his suite from the gate. I moved forward with a party to receive and conduct him to head-quarters, where, after tendering his sword, he met with a gracious reception from the Major-General and Rear-Admiral Commanding the Forces. Shortly afterwards, the Sirhang, or Lieut.-col. and Commandant, submitted, the entire garrison at the same time laying down their arms on my proceeding into the town with assurances of safety from the Maj.-Gen. Commanding in Chief. The British colours were then hoisted, at 4 30 p.m., on the residency flagstaff, by Lieut. Clarkson, of the Indian navy, the troops under orders to garrison the town moving at sun-set into the place.

10. Since the occupation I have been engaged with my assistant, Lieut. Disbrowe, in giving confidence to the townspeople, securing the magazines, granaries, and other public stores, endeavouring to reopen the bazars, and in adopting measures for the public safety, as well as in taking steps for obtaining supplies. Owing to the distrust naturally prevailing amongst suspicious people quite new to us, and generally ignorant as to our usages and institutions, we have some difficulty to contend with. Time, however, will aid to dispel fears, to restore confidence, and eventually, I hope, secure to us all we require. I must not conceal, however, that our chief local supplies of fresh meat, grain, &c., must be drawn from Busreh and Bagdad, and boats are not readily procurable. A large quantity of coal should therefore be stored both here and at Busreh, for the use of steamers, those of small size being best adapted for this service; they should not fail us, for, in any case, to insure cattle living, the voyage should be shortened as much as possible by their taking boats in tow.

11. No intelligence of any kind has come in from the interior; but I may be able to glean some in a few days. All is, however, quiet in the town and districts at the present time.

12. I beg to inclose copy of a proclamation, with appended articles, which forms the basis of our future administration in these tracts. These will, doubtless, require emendation as we progress in the government of a strange people, but they seem to me at present best adapted to work upon, and have accordingly

From Meerza Hassan Ally Khan Dureya Beggee, Governor of Bushire, to Commander Felix Jones, I.N., Political Resident, Persian Gulf. Dated 2nd Rubee-ool-Sanee, 1272, 1st Dec. 1856.

A. C.—A number of vessels, both steam and sailing, have arrived, and anchored abreast of Bushire; others, too, keep making their appearance. Never before have so many ships, pertaining to the British Government, visited these parts. I have deemed it, therefore, my duty to inquire from you on what errand, and to what port, the said vessels are bound. If their destination be the Persian Gulf, I beg to be apprised of the object of their visit. I trust you will be pleased to acquaint me of the true cause of their coming.

From Commander Felix Jones, I.N., Political Resident, Persian Gulf, to Meerza Hassan Ally Khan Dureya Beggee, Governor of Bushire. Dated 3rd December, 1856.

A. C.—I had the pleasure of receiving your note of 2nd Rubee-ool-Sanee, 1st December, and understood its contents; but, unfortunately, being then proceeding to join the Sirdar General Bahio, and having no Meerzas on board the strange vessel, I was compelled to defer the answer until the present moment, for which excuse me. I must now, however, inform you that my functions in connection with Persia have ceased by order of my Government, and therefore it will remain for the Sirdar himself to reply to the purport of your note.

I cannot close my own correspondence with you without expressing how much I feel this separation. Trusting, however, it will not be of long duration, I am, &c.

To all Governors and authorities in the towns and districts bordering on the shores of the Persian Gulf.

Be it known to you that the Sirdar Gen. Foster Stalker Sahib Bahadoor, decorated with the Order of the Bath, has been intrusted with the supreme command of a powerful fleet and army sent by the exalted Government of Great Britain to these shores. The motives of his coming it is unnecessary for himself to explain, as the enclosed Proclamation, from the Most Noble the Governor-General of India in Council, is sufficiently explicit and clear.

By order of the Sirdar General Sahib Bahadoor.

Political Agent with the Persian Expeditionary Force.

Dated from on board H.I.C. steam-frigate Assaye, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir H. J. Leeke, Kt., K.H., in Bushire Roads, Dec. 3, 1856.

To the Governor of the town and districts of Bushire.

Anxious to save Bushire from the horrors of war, and to give to its non-combatants, women, and children, ample time to escape from its walls, the Sirdar General Sahib and the Sirdar Admiral Sahib, commanding the English combined military and naval forces before the town, have, to the present time, refrained from bombarding it, otherwise the powerful ships of the British Government could have laid it in ashes in the short space of two hours. The dictates of humanity having therefore been complied with, they will no longer delay, unless the Governor, seeing the inutility of opposition, prudently surrender the town into their hands.

The Governor is given until to-morrow morning at sunrise to consider his position, when, should he determine on surrender, the topmast of the Persian Government flagstaff at the Chetar Boorj must be struck as the signal of submission.

The Sirdar General Sahib and the Sirdar Admiral Sahib commanding, &c., offer the following conditions, in case of non-resistance and honourable capitulation:—

Private property of all descriptions, including dwelling-houses, will be scrupulously respected; but public property of every kind, with the contents of granaries, magazines, and public buildings, including arms, ammunition, and public treasure, must be transferred, with official lists, into their hands.

The worship of Almighty God, according to the dictates of conscience, is tolerated by English law. All sects and denominations, therefore, will be free in the exercise of their religious rites, and will be protected against the least molestation.

The troops forming the garrison, and all other armed retainers of the Persian Government, will be allowed to march out of the town gate with the full honours of war,—that is, with drums beating, flags flying, &c.; after which they will pile arms immediately under the wall, left and right of the gate, and deposit all Military equipments, before becoming prisoners of war. The superior officers will then approach, and surrender their swords in token of submission. All captives of war, if not set free, will receive honourable treatment, clothing, and food, agreeably to the usages of civilized nations, which admit of the superior officers being abroad on "parole."

The British Government wars not with peaceful citizens and unarmed men. It fights only against the state. All such are protected in life and property and in the exercise of their religious observances, under mild British rule. For these classes conditions are unnecessary.

Such are the terms without evasion. If accepted by the display of the proposed signal, peace will continue at Bushire; if rejected, war on the expiration of the time named.

By order of the Sirdars General and Admiral Sahibs, commanding the combined British Forces before Bushire.

Political Agent with the Forces.

Done on board the steam frigate Assaye, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Sir Henry J. Leeke, Knt., K.H., this 9th of December, 1856.

PROCLAMATION.

The Town and Outworks of Bushire, after a four-hours' cannonade, having surrendered unconditionally to a combined Naval and Military Force assembled for storm before the place, were formally taken possession of, in the name of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, yesterday afternoon. The British Colours were hoisted at the Residency Flagstaff in the town at 4. 30, p.m. the topmast of His Majesty the Shah of Persia's Flagstaff having been felled in token of submission.

This occupation of Bushire, on the main land of the Persian territories, was announced officially this day, with a salute of twenty-one guns from the Fleet, the ships being dressed in the usual form.

God Save the Queen.

By order of the Maj.-Gen. commanding the Persian Field Force.

(Signed) FELIX JONES,

British Residency, Bushire, Dec. 11, 1856.

With reference to the above Proclamation, the town of Bushire is declared to be a military post, under British rule, and, for the present, subject to the operations of Martial law. All parties, therefore, living under British protection, are warned of the bad consequences of trespassing upon the rights of individuals, or in aiding or abetting others in designs against the State.

2. The Port of Bushire is declared free from all duties until further notice.

3. Warlike stores of every description, coming under the denomination of contraband of war, will be seized and confiscated; as also wines, beers, spirituous liquors, which are pronounced unsaleable in the town or districts without especial license.

4. All other articles, whether for consumption or trade, may be imported or exported at will.

5. The traffic in slaves is abolished. Newly-imported negroes of every age and sex will be seized and set free.

6. Parties desirous of settling here will be permitted, so long as they continue to live peaceably in recognition of British law.

7. Wearing arms, except by the military and police, is declared unlawful. Weapons will therefore be seized wherever found. Parties coming in from the sea, or from the country, such as muleteers, Arab seamen, or travellers in pursuance of peaceful occupation, are required only to deposit their arms at the bunders, or at the gate. They will be restored again on quitting the town.

8. All parties living under the protection of the British Government may pursue their lawful occupations without let or hindrance; and the free worship of Almighty God, according to conscience, is tolerated by British law. Let none, therefore, fear oppression on account of religious opinions.

9. Petty crimes and misdemeanours are punishable in conformity with camp and garrison usages; but graver offences must be referred for the decision of the major-general commanding the expeditionary force.

By order of the major-general commanding the Persian field force.

PERSIAN GULF EXPEDITION.

CAPTURE OF BUSHIRE.

On the 6th instant nearly all the ships with fighting men having arrived at Bushire, the fleet moved down to Halilah Bay, and on the morning of the 7th the troops commenced landing, under cover of the gun-boats, which had previously cleared the way for them. The whole of the infantry and a good portion of artillery and cavalry were landed on that day, and they bivouaced about two miles from the landing place. On the 8th the disembarkation of horses and guns continued; the troops bivouaced as the day before. On the 9th, nearly all the horses and guns being landed, the troops marched towards Reshire (about five miles from Bushire), the Assaye, Punjab, and Feroze, preceding them along the coast. The enemy mustered in great force at Reshire, and stood manfully till our troops were nearly up with them, when they opened fire; and we have to regret the loss of some brave and distinguished officers and men. Brig.-Gen. Stopford and Colonel Malet were killed; Lieuts. Utterson and Warren, 20th N.I., mortally wounded (since dead); Capt. Wood, 20th N.I., severely wounded (happily recovering); and several men killed and wounded. Brig. Stopford had just dismounted to lead his men up the earthwork, when he was shot through the heart by a Persian close at hand. His men are full of revenge. Like Colonel Malet and Lieut. Utterson, he fell by the hands of men spared by their orders. The troops bivouacked at Reshire for the night, and the ships of war anchored a little in advance of them.

In the course of the day, Capt. Jones, political agent, was despatched in the Assyria steamer with a flag of truce to demand the surrender of the town. On nearing the forts he was fired upon, and was obliged to return almost immediately afterwards. The governor of Bushire sent an apology for the act, attributing it to a mistake on the part of the soldiers in his absence, and without his orders. The demand for the surrender of the town was sent on shore by the bearer of the apology. On the 10th, at daylight, the gunboats, with the Victoria and Ajdaha, took up a position close on shore for the purpose of driving a number of the enemy from a small square tower, about two miles outside Bushire, which they did effectually. A flag of truce having come off from the shore to request a day's delay to reply to the summons to surrender, half an hour was given, and the boat bearing the flag of truce was sent in tow of the Semiramis as near as she could take her, and was just cast off from that vessel about 1,500 yards from the batteries, when they opened fire on the Semiramis. The action now commenced fairly. The enemy had got the range of the Semiramis, when the Feroze and Assaye came up and diverted their fire. The former was run in shore some hundreds of yards closer than the rest, on ground that Capt. Rennie had surveyed three months before. She was repeatedly struck both in hull and rigging, but not materially injured. The fire was kept up briskly on both sides for about two hours and a half, when that of the enemy slackened; and about noon the flagstaff at Bushire was cut away as a token of surrender. By the time the troops had arrived within a few hundred yards of the gates of the town, the governor and commander-in-chief of the garrison walked out and delivered their swords to the general; and before sunset the British flag was hoisted at Bushire flagstaff, by Lieut. Clarkson, I.N., and our troops took general possession of the town. Although the shot fell thick and heavy about the ships, happily not a man was hurt.

The Semiramis received one shot right through her side, and several about her rigging. The Feroze received several shots. The number of the enemy killed, the despatches will tell. One brigade is in charge of the town, the others are encamped about 1½ miles outside. Baggage and stores were being landed as fast as possible. The weather was very fair during all the operations. Bushire has been declared a free port under martial law till further notice, and confidence being restored, the bazar was partially open, and the people apparently delighted with the change of rulers. Very little damage was done to the town, and none of the townspeople hurt. The Semiramis left Bushire past 8 p.m. of the 14th, and touched at Bassadore and Muscat. At Bassadore, intelligence was received of the arrival at Luigar of 2,000 soldiers, with six guns, under command of a general officer. — Bombay Times, Dec. 27.

Off Bushire, 6th December, 1856.

My last from Kishm informed you of the assembling of the fleet of transports appointed to convey the troops on this expedition. The number, counted on the 26th, amounted to thirty-four, including men-of-war, merchant-men, and the Indus steamer Satellite, and a flat in tow. That morning the Admiral ordered all vessels to send as many boats on shore with water-butts as they could afford, but, to the astonishment of the whole fleet, half the butts had not been filled before the admiral issued orders to weigh; and the transports were surprised to find a steamer at their bows ready to tow them up the Gulf. Dhobies returned with clothes wet; long boats were towed back with barrels empty; and the blue Peter at the fore-mast head of the vessels warned each crew and shore party of officers that their return was not to be of so long duration as they expected. At dusk, with the exception of the admiral and the Rajah of Cochin, all the vessels had started, some in tow, others under sail. Great excitement was caused by the fact of the Result, one of Mr. Green's ships, having put to sea under sail, under the full expectation that if the wind favoured she would reach her destination as soon or sooner than the vessels in tow; but on the second day a stiff breeze sprung up, which compelled most of the ships to part company with her consort, and the result was, that with the exception of the Peninsular and Oriental boats, and one or two of the East-India Company's vessels, few of the steamers came in with the transports they had towed out of Kishm, and it was not till the morning of the 6th that a sufficient number of ships were counted to warrant a commencement of hostilities.

On the morning of the 6th, the Result, on board of which vessel the ammunition had been sent, was towed in by the P. and O. steamer Pottinger; the Result having sailed to within fifty miles of Bushire in little more time than the other vessels were being towed nearly the whole way. On the 3rd Dec. a royal salute was heard booming over the briny sea from the guns of the Feroze, in honour of the landing and taking possession of the island of Karrack by our troops. The Precursor, with the head-quarters of H.M.'s 64th on board, and the Feroze, with the rifles, were sent there in case opposition was offered; but, so far as I can ascertain, the guard of honour were allowed to land peaceably, and the few troops that were sent ashore having been formed into three sides of a square, the Proclamation annexing the island to the possessions of her Britannic Majesty was read. The flag that braves the battle and the breeze was, after an absence of eighteen years, again hoisted over Karrack. Two companies of the 2nd Belooch battalion have been left to garrison the island, over which one of the Wiltoughbys is placed in gubernatorial charge. The Feroze having returned to this place last evening, it is expected that a move will soon take place; the well-known energy of Commander Rennie being a pledge to the whole fleet, that idleness and indecision ceases in his presence.

CAMP, BUSHIRE, Dec. 11, 1856.—Bushire capitulated yesterday after a few hours' bombardment from the fleet. I am happy to say that on our side not a wound was received. Our force came up in front of the fort about one o'clock, the 3rd tr. h. art. being drawn up in advance. So soon as the men-of-war ceased firing, the 3rd tr. h. art. commenced; the first round shot brought down the flagstaff at the Governor's house. When the cavalry prepared to make a sortie, those that left the gate were sent back flying by another round shot which brought down four men and a horse; the next two rounds were played firmly into the right and left of the gate. The cavalry party that advanced from the redoubt came riding out at so easy a pace and in such small number, that it was imagined they were coming up to parley; but, to the astonishment of the force, they had no sooner come up to the left flank of our line, than they set spurs to their horses and bolted at full speed, followed by some of our mounted officers; amongst others I saw Brig. Honner ride coolly up to a fellow and hit him a smart tap with his cane. Capt. Aitchinson, the brigadier's staff officer, succeeded in opposing him and brought him in prisoner. Our troops piled arms, and sat down to their dinners about a mile from the fort, whilst a flag of truce was sent under the walls. Part of the 2nd Bombay regiment and rifles, with some guns, were ordered to take charge of the redoubt. Admiral Leeke having landed about four o'clock that afternoon, the chiefs were shortly afterwards seen riding out. Our troops formed three sides of a square, and the treaty of capitulation was ratified in the presence of the army, when our staff, mixing with the Persians, rode up at the head of the first brigade to the fort gate, and received the arms and accoutrements of the vagrant army, and such a poor lot can scarcely be conceived, the arms being deposited at the gate by some indeed in a very ungraceful manner. The disbanded soldiers were allowed to pass unmolested to their own villages. The 64th and 20th N.I. have been ordered into the fort for the present. The union-jack was placed on the residency flagstaff by a tar about sunset, under deafening cheers from the army and navy, and there it was allowed to remain all night. Royal salutes were fired by the 3rd tr. h. art. and steamers of war at sunrise, and all the Company's vessels were decked with colours during the day.

Dec. 12.—The guns found in the fort amount to fifty-eight, including brass and iron, mounted and dismounted, and two mortars complete with travelling carriages. The exact date of the departure of the steamer with the mail has been postponed so often, that I trust I shall be able ere it leaves to give you an account of the attack of Ras Reshire, which our troops took by a rush on the 9th. The loss on that occasion was as follows: Killed—Brig. Stopford, C.B.; Lieut. col. Malet, 3rd cav.; privates J. Doyle and M. Daly, 2nd E.L.I.; and one tent-lascar. Wounded—Lieuts. Uttersson and Warren, 20th N.I., since dead; Capt. Wood, 20th N.I., favourably reported of today; privates P. McNamara and J. Doherty, 64th regiment, since dead; two troopers, 3rd cavalry; two troopers 3rd troop horse art.; two troopers, reserve art.; seven of H.M.'s 64th regt.; four of 2nd Eur.; four of 4th rifles, seven of 20th N.I.; and one of 2nd Belooch bat. About 600 stand of arms, some swords, daggers, and pistols have been deposited with the prize committee, but a good many articles have remained with the actual captors.

CAMP, BUSHIRE, Dec. 12, 1856.—I told you in my last letter of the 23rd, that the whole fleet felt confidence from the presence of the Feroze among them. The admiral having signalled to weigh, the steamers were soon seen laying alongside the transports, and presently strings of threes and fours were in full tow down the coast to Halila Bay, where commences the neck of land on which Bushire is built. Rafts were seen under construction alongside the Feroze, immediately we anchored, and under the superintendence of Captain Jenkins, I.N., might be seen the fitting up into gun-boats the several pilot-boats brought up from Bombay with us.

During the night of the 6th, the hammer might be heard going in every direction—anxiety prevailed to a late hour, as orders for landing were not issued till near eleven o'clock, when commanding officers were informed that the landing would commence at sunrise next day. Boats were immediately heard rowing in every direction, orders passed from stem to stern of transports, pistols brought out, locks examined, grub packed, and every preparation that the certainty of to-morrow's work suggested. The disembarkation commenced about four o'clock on the morning of Sunday, the 7th. Steamers were brought alongside the transports, and the men, who were from three weeks to a month on board, were anxiously looking out for the coming opportunity of again treading on terra firma,—however uncertain some might feel at the possibility of landing at all—all left in good spirits, and as each boat passed the ships on its way to the line of formation, the hearty hurra that passed from end to end of the bay was encouraging, and kept up the spirits of many a novice in the art of war. At sunrise, some twenty boats of the Indian navy headed the advance, and so many of the troops as could find sitting room in the long boats, pinnaces and the other small boats of the transports, followed in close succession. The gun-boats were planted during the night about half a mile from the beach, and opened fire with spherical case as soon as they perceived some Persians in ambush in a date-grove, not far from the spot where troops were to land. The Ajlaha too managed to send in some shrapnel shell, which effectually cleared the coast. The firing was effectual, and at eight o'clock the rifles formed up on the beach to protect the landing, whilst such of the gun boats that could now be spared were placed at Captain Macdonald's disposal, who was seen hurrying from one ship to the other hastening work by encouraging words and hard blows sometimes. The 20th N.I. was the first of the force that was completely landed—every man of that regiment was at the landing-place before twelve o'clock that day.

Where every one worked hard, it is perhaps invidious to particularize; but the hearty interest that Capt. Cowe and his officers and the crew of the ship Result took in the work of the day stood so conspicuous above the assistance rendered by the rest, that not to mention it would be unfair and ungenerous; and I am sure that no one can justly take offence at this prominent mention of the Messrs. Green's people. In the ship I came up in they could not prevail on the crew to do more than send a man in the boat to steer, while the small steamers—Assyria, Snake, Sir Jerjeehoy, Bombay—towed them in. Of course the merchant seamen were in no way bound to land until hostilities were at an end, or a safe landing-place had been secured; and the fact of their breaking through this necessary precaution shows that an interest in the welfare of the troops was taken by such as assisted the landing, with heart and soul. The horses and artillery stores, guns, carriages, and waggons, were landed between the Sunday afternoon and Monday night; and on Tuesday morning the 9th, the army advanced to meet a party of the enemy supposed to be strongly intrenched between the landing-place and Bushire. The war-steamers kept in advance of the army, and opened fire on a stronghold at Ras Re-hire. The fire was kept up for nearly an hour, but owing to the shallow nature of the coast, the vessels could not get within effectual range. Some sixty-eight pounder shell, however, had effect, and compelled the enemy to send some of their force inland in view to employ the left flank of our army, whilst the intrenched party peppered the right; but the advance guard, consisting of a division of the 3rd troop, with about sixty dragoons and two companies of the 2nd Bombay regiment, having overshot the usual distance preserved by advance-guards, came up just in time to prevent the movement. The two Horse Artillery guns having opened fire, brought the whole combined force of the Arabs on them, and by a well-regulated counter-march, in which the fire was well kept up on both sides, succeeded in bringing the whole mob in sight of our army. The rush back to their stronghold was instantaneous, and then, joined by the Arabs that remained in their earthwork, they offered a most determined resistance to our troops. It was of little use bringing the artillery into play here, still some shells were fired among them, and the infantry prepared for a rush. Down into the trench they jumped, and there stood before them a steep embankment of loose sand and lumps of sand stone. The brave Stopford could not here forget his old regiment, to whose lot fell the steepest part of the embankment. Waving his sword, the brigadier called out "Forward, Sixty-fourth," and these were his last words, for a bullet pierced his left breast, and the gallant colonel fell as he had lived, like "a brave soldier." Colonel Malet, of the 3rd cavalry, was the next officer who fell a victim to a Briton's generous heart; he received his death-wound from the hand of the assassin whose life he had saved from the swords of his troopers. Three officers of the 20th, Capt. Woods, Lieuts. Uttersson and Warren, were wounded, and two privates of the 2nd Eur. regt. killed; also some natives killed and wounded, whose number I cannot now ascertain. The strength of the Arab force in this entrenchment could not be ascertained, as many succeeded to make their escape by the beach. Others were driven into the sea, and, in the pursuit, some pretty narrow escapes were experienced. Brig. Trevlyn, of the Artillery, had a button shot off his frock-coat. Gen. Stalker's thumb was grazed by a matchlock-ball. Capt. Finimore, the commissary of ordnance, had his sword shot off, and a gunner of the 3rd troop had his shoulder-strap shot off, the button carrying away a part of the cloth-jacket with it. As might be expected, British discipline overcame the disadvantage of position, and our army immediately encamped.

The surgeons, whilst attending the sick, were fired on, and the barbarity shown to our wounded shows how little mercy these barbarians deserve at our hands. Orders were immediately issued to land sufficient ammunition for the next day's expected consumption, a work that kept guards and fatigue parties on the move between the Bunder and the camp all the night long. The 64th were formed into square next morning, the 10th, at daylight; and the bodies of the late Brigadier Stopford, C.B., Col. Malet, Lieut. Uttersson, and of two men of the 2nd Bom. Eur. reg. were interred—Mr. Watson reading the funeral service. The men of the 64th are not pleased at the idea of their brave colonel not receiving the usual salutes, and have volunteered to march down to Ras Reshire for the purpose of bringing them up to Bushire and giving him a soldier's funeral—a feeling, I think, that deserves praise, and should receive encouragement from the authorities. Each regiment being supplied with full complement of cartridges, the force commenced to move from its encampment near Ras Reshire about eight o'clock over one of the roughest pieces of ground imaginable, at each step the soldier took he was up to his ankles in the sand, else lumps of loose sand stone had to be marched over. In the formation of his troops General Stalker showed the experienced soldier, now throwing out skirmishers as he advanced on villages, marching them in column where the ground required it, and by occasional halts where water was procurable, allowing his men the opportunity of refreshing themselves for the coming engagement. During the march the steamers kept up a steady fire, the larger vessels from their sixty-eight pounders, and the smaller ones from their twelves—so that on approaching a small fort about a mile and a half from Bushire, the whole of the occupiers were found to have escaped. Shot and shell lay in every direction, some of the shot had struck the embrasures, and the cooking pots on smouldering embers showed how precipitately the ragamuffins had left.

This fort our general and staff used for a time as a point of reconnaissance, and then opening out the first brigade brought the 64th on the left, and 20th on the right (the Belgaumites), breast to breast opposite the fort of Bushire, where he halted them about half a mile from the gate. Quartermaster Sears, of her Majesty's 64th, on reaching the small fort on the approach to Bushire, unfurled the regimental colour, and the "Flag that braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze" was seen floating, the pride of a true English heart, on the deserted fortification of his Majesty the Shah of Persia. A general cheer from the fleet followed this display, and few hearts present were not thrilled by Jack Tar's vociferous acclamations. At this point the Persians appear to have brought themselves to the striking point, and out the cavalry rushed from the gate, when a round shot from Blake's troops brought down four troopers and a horse, when a general retreat took place, and in the cavalry rushed and closed the gates, not before two more shots were planted right and left of the gate of Bushire. But a ludicrous scene was being carried out to the left of our line, while the above sortie was checked. A number of Persians were seen leaving the redoubt on the right of the fort, and partly advancing slowly, and some retreating, of course the general impression was, that the chiefs had come out and desired a parley; in consequence, no one attempted to molest them, but they no sooner got near our left, when, trusting to the fleetness of their steeds, off they galloped for their lives. Some pistol-shots were immediately sent to warn them of their danger, and Brigadier Honner, who commanded the reserve, gave one of the gentlemen a sharp lick of his stick. The cavalry, however, were soon after them, and among the rest Capt. Aitchison, brig. maj. of the 2nd brig., brought in a prisoner, who, on being interrogated, denied any knowledge of the attack at Ras Reshire, and said that the fire on our steamer with the flag of truce the previous evening was a mistake of a subordinate. But to return. Our army being drawn out with the reserve at 200 paces in rear, General Stalker gave the order to pile arms, and allowed the men to eat their food, while a flag of truce proceeded to the walls. The reply appears to have been satisfactory, for the part of the reserve were at once ordered to take possession of the redoubt, and the commissary of ordnance's establishment commenced collecting all the shot and shells and other artillery stores they could lay their hands on. The admiral landed under the redoubt, about half-past four, and the Governor of Bushire was soon afterwards seen advancing towards the army. Three sides of a square having been formed by the troops, the admiral, Gen. Stalker, and all the staff-officers received the Persian Governor, and negotiations were immediately commenced. From what I can collect, the Governor has agreed to give up the fort, pending the sanction of the Shah, to whom a period of a month has been given for consideration. Preliminaries having been settled, the chiefs and staff preceded the army towards the gate, where the surrender of arms and disbandment of the army were carried out without delay. According to current reports, some of the fellows were inclined to show us the use of arms before they surrendered, as I hear that several thrusts were made at our officers and searching parties. During the surrender of arms, a portion of the first brigade marched into the fort, and one of the Hon. Company's Jacks had the honour of hoisting the Union on the residency flagstaff, when a general hurrah from the fleet was wafted over the breeze, and, joined to the cheer of our men, was kept up for some minutes. At the entrance of the fort were placed five mounted guns, each so placed as to point into the gate (on our troops as they entered of course!) of which two were iron and three brass, the largest being an eighteen-pounder gun, and the smallest a mountain gun, whose bore was much smaller than those in our service, a one and a-half pounder, I believe.

Two mortars were mounted on carriages at the Residency, an eight inch and a five and a half inch. The cartridges were all shotted, and for priming they used meal powder tubes. Their ball cartridges are, owing to the coarseness of the powder, much longer than ours, but they correspond with ours in respect to the fold, which is so very peculiar, that few but natives with their slender fingers can manage it. Some six hundred stand of arms, bayonets, swords, pistols, &c., have been taken, of which some are of the same manufacture as ours; the rest are so flimsy that a hard blow would surely bend their swords. Most of their arms were without locks, and where they were found, they were quite loose. The fort of Bushire is built of sandstone; and as far as I could see, it appears square, with eight towers on each face; the houses in it are plastered with mud, and, with the exception of one face being open, they present the same appearance as the houses in the fort of Hyderabad. Their women carry on the business of the dairy, but are seldom to be seen without their cows. Of the current coin, one is a silver piece, without shape and of different sizes, called coror, equal to half a rupee of our money, each coror fetch seventy pies (Persian), about the diameter of ours, not so circular and thicker. The water in general is brackish, and a cup of tea, as we have it without milk, very much resembles tea with salts in it. Dates are plentiful, and so are oranges and pomegranates; but in their prices the Persians are so very extortionate, that I am not surprised to hear that at times they get a blow from our people. Flesh or fresh provisions of any sort, I have not seen any as yet. Our troops (with the exception of the guard left in the fort) are encamped about a mile from the gate of Bushire, with a plain of four square miles in their rear. At present the whole of the troops are employed on fatigue duties, bringing up their tents and commissariat from the beach: the most part are in good health, but the sickness (intermittent fevers) prevails mostly amongst the 2nd Bombayers. Two transports are to leave immediately for more troops, that I fancy we shall have to advance northward.

"CAMP BUSHIRE, Dec. 13, 1856.—The Governor of Bushire, with two of his staff and some servants, were brought down to the Bunder by an escort of the 3rd cavalry, and embarked in man-of-war boats, lying there for their reception. Every respect due to brave men who have fallen in the defence of their country was shown them—the sailors standing up with their hats in their hands. The chiefs were taken on board the steamer Punjab, and will be detained there for the present, till the arrival of the Shah's answer from Teheran. The reason for placing them in restraint, I understand, is that the admiral has received reliable information of their intention to bolt and raise a sufficient number of followers from the hills to attack us on the plain where we are now encamped. The wounded are favourably reported of."

"BUSHIRE, 14th DECEMBER, 1856.—This place was ours on the evening of the 10th. The governor came out and gave it up to the general, the troops laying down their arms and marching out. Already the people are returning, and the bazaars and shops are being opened, and the people walk and ride about the city in all directions with comparative safety. The landing was effected without any opposition, on the morning of the 7th, at a place called Halila, about ten miles below Bushire; and on the morning of the 9th the whole marched on the road to Bushire. There was a small post on the way named Reshire, at which some opposition was expected, and sure enough the enemy made a determined resistance. They came out and met the advanced guard, but only with small arms, chasing back some of the cavalry and two guns sent in advance, and whose duty it was to retire as they did, under such close fire from the enemy. On the arrival of the general and the whole force, an advance was made, and the whole of the enemy driven out of the place by a charge in line of the 64th, 2nd European, 20th N.I., 4th rifles, &c., the guns having first peppered them well. More serious opposition was met with than had apparently been expected, the Persian infantry were in holes, and regularly dug pits, and fired away undauntedly till bayoneted, or shot down where they stood. You will see how large our loss has been, from the official reports—the attack was as gallant as the defence; every one was anxious to be in the front, regardless of life or anything, but to get at the enemy. After the action, we halted for the night, every one as tired and hungry as possible, sleeping on the bare ground—there were no tents and the cold was intense. The march of the morrow upon Bushire keeping every one in a state of excitement, there was but little sleep, and at daybreak all were in motion. The killed of the previous day having been solemnly deposited in their last resting-place on earth, the army formed in a long column and moved off for the attack on Bushire about four miles distant. Early in the morning, the sound of the heavy guns of the fleet cannonading the place was heard booming in the distance, and soon the whitesmoke rising from the same was visible. The troops hastened on, and Colonel Tapp's Poona horse and the 3rd troop horse artillery galloped on a head, to intercept a stream of troops and followers issuing from the opposite side of the city, and endeavouring to escape with a large number of laden mules. The troops with some guns retreated into the city, and most of the laden mules and attendants were soon made prisoners. In the meanwhile all the force having come up, the city was surrounded, and the governor called upon to surrender. He did not do so, however, without apparent considerable hesitation: eventually however, towards sunset, he came out and surrendered. On the whole it was fortunate for us that he did so, although the opposition would of course have been overborne, still it would clearly have cost us numbers of gallant men. Not a gun was fired at the troops from the city, but the excellent way in which the firing was made at the ships showed what the artillerymen of the enemy could do. Most of the steamers had grounded, and had the troops not come up and frightened them into a capitulation, they would have cared but little for a couple of days' firing from the ships. The whole of the army is now encamped outside of Bushire at the wells, where the whole water for the city is obtained. The health and spirit of the troops are excellent, and, for the time, the doctors have actually nothing to do, all the wounded, &c., being sent on board the hospital ship Result."

BENGAL.

THE NEW INFANTRY BONUS-FUND SCHEME.

A regimental subaltern, stationed at Berhampore, has endeavoured to explain to the army the true working of Major Burn's New Bonus-Fund Scheme, which, he thinks, is unfair towards captains and subalterns of the army. He says:—

"The unfairness of the scheme is simply this. That while field-officers only pay towards steps actually purchased by the Fund, captains and subalterns pay into the Fund on promotion, no matter how they get it, whether by a death casualty, by a regimental retirement, by the sentence of a court-martial, by a resolution of the Court of Directors removing any officer from their service, or, lastly, by the operation of this Fund! This will be better understood by illustration. A regiment at this station has just had two death steps, those of a major and a lieutenant. Had the officers of the corps belonged to this Bonus Scheme, the present major, junior captain, and junior lieutenant would have had to pay respectively 3,500, 800, and 160 rupees into this Fund for their promotion. When the lieutenant died, the ensign who was promoted by that step would have had to pay Rs. 160 into the Fund. Should a captain in any regiment propose to sell, the senior lieutenant and ensign of that regiment would have had to pay respectively into the Fund Rs. 800 and Rs. 160, besides their share of the money given by the regiment to induce the said captain to retire. In this case, also, the Fund would give no assistance towards purchasing this step. Mr. Hawtrey, late of the 50th N.I., has just been dismissed the service by sentence of a court-martial. If the officers of the 50th N.I. had belonged to this Fund, the senior ensign would have had to pay Rs. 160 to the Fund for his promotion. Worse than this. Suppose Colonel A. dies, Lieut.-colonel B. and Major C. gets his step for nothing; but Capt. D., Lieut. E., and Ens. F. have each to pay his respective quota to the Fund for the promotion, viz., Rs. 3,500, Rs. 800, and Rs. 160. These assertions, are, perhaps startling to some; but I proceed to prove them from the prospectus itself. At the end of the pamphlet there are two tables; one contains the subscriptions and bonuses of majors, according to their standing; the other, that of lieut.-colonels. Suppose the junior lieut.-colonel to retire:—

Add contributions of senior captain, lieut., and ensign of the regt. getting the line step	4,460
Total amount of money actually paid into the Fund on account of this step	24,710
But the bonus of the junior lieut.-colonel is	35,000
Difference	10,290

"Where is this Rs. 10,290 to come from? Simply from the contributions levied on captains and subalterns for steps other than those purchased by this Fund; for Rule 6 distinctly states, that in the case of lieut.-colonels and majors, they shall only be called on to pay for the "steps of officers above them bought out by the Fund." While just over the page it says, that captains and subalterns must pay "on promotion," without a word as to how that promotion may be obtained. Again, a little lower down, is the statement of the annual income of the Fund, supposing it to purchase out in one year eight colonels:—

Contributions of lieut.-colonels for each step	25,920
Ditto majors	20,250
Total ditto of field-officers for each step, and all they pay	46,170
Eight steps annually	8
	3,69,360
Then we have 20 captains at 3,500....	70,000
" 50 lieuts. 800....	40,000
" 70 ensigns 160....	11,200
	4,90,560

The bonus of 8 colonels amounting to Rs. 4,80,000; but where are the 20 promoted captains, 50 lieutenants, and 70 ensigns to come from? Clearly not from this Fund, which only promotes eight of each grade yearly. It therefore follows that the promoter of this scheme has taken an average of the steps going in the various grades from all causes, added eight to each for the operation of his Fund, and charged the captains and subalterns all round for steps got in any way they might come. By this means 20 captains, 50 lieutenants, and 70 ensigns would have to contribute yearly; and a reference to the army list will show that it is about or rather under the average number of casualties from all causes plus 8 owing to the fund. For each colonel and lieut.-colonel, therefore, bought out by this Fund, the captains and subalterns of this army would have to pay Rs. 14,750, and not 4,460 (as I suspect) is generally believed, viz.—

Contribution for the actual step	4,460
Total	14,750

"Of the annual income estimated in the prospectus, the majors will pay Rs. 1,62,048, and the captains and subalterns Rs. 1,21,200; just three-fourths of the amount. The relative advantages are, that the major becomes a lieut.-colonel in 3½ years, instead of 5½ to 6, and at the end of it is entitled to a bonus of Rs. 35,000; while the captains and subalterns get one line step in 10 years. Let the army say if this is a fair apportionment of charges and benefits. I think the majors are unduly favoured; for, assuming a lieut.-colonel, when junior, to be worth Rs. 35,000, he pays his way fairly up to the colonel's bonus of Rs. 60,000; and I do not think that many captains and subalterns will sign the adhesion and the guarantee contained in Rule 9 when they clearly understand that they are to pay for their luck as well as for the actual benefits the Fund gives them. My reasoning may be wrong, and I shall be only too happy to have it proved so, as no one is more anxious than myself to join any fair scheme for accelerating promotion; but, on the other hand, if my conclusions are found true, as I am unwilling to incur the appearance of destroying without any effort to reconstruct, I may give to the army, on a future occasion, some two or three suggestions, by which I think the scheme might be made fair and equal."

A Regimental Lieut.-Colonel has thus replied to the above:—"I have no hesitation in saying (though a regimental lieut.-colonel), I consider the letter of a 'Regimental Subaltern' a fair and correct view of the proposed scheme in so far as the money calculations go. Further, I think it a valuable letter, and one that should be generally read, to insure that all regimental officers should clearly understand what they are about ere they join it. Doubtless it is worse than useless to begin with a fund, unless the scheme is fair to all parties and promises stability.

"But as regards 'Regimental Subaltern's' view of regimental officers being overweighted and regimental majors underweighted in the subscriptions proposed, I cannot agree with him. I am not prepared to say that the scheme might not with justice be made more beneficial to regimental officers, but I deny that raising the subscriptions of regimental majors would have that effect. My remedy would be, rather, to allow majors to benefit in proportion with colonels and lieut.-colonels, by their grade being allowed two of the eight bonuses yearly upon equal terms, viz., a full eighth of the regimental subscriptions added to the major's rates of subscription below the parties taking the bonus, and what more it was worth their corps to give them. I would even go further. I would give majors on these terms any of the other six bonuses not taken up by colonels or lieutenant-colonels. This, I maintain, would increase the regimental officer's benefits very considerably. But the part of the scheme which appears to me most unfair, unstable, and objectionable, is the proposed mode for collecting the regimental officers' subscriptions. Now, the sum called for from regimental officers, viz., Rs. 1,21,000 yearly, is not (I maintain, and can, I think, prove) by any means an exorbitant sum; for the benefit it insures, namely eight extra field-officers' steps a year. This sum, divided between eighty regiments, gives each regiment Rs. 1,515 to pay yearly: or in twenty years, in which space it is to give each regiment an increase of two line steps, each regiment will have paid in all Rs. 30,300 for the said two steps: a less sum than is generally paid now for each major bought out by his regiment.

"And there are, I imagine, few regiments that ever get more than two chances in twenty years of buying out their young promoted majors. If this is granted, the regimental officer gains by this scheme two steps for the price he would otherwise pay for one. Again, the men, who will derive the greatest real benefit from a bonus fund, are the juniors of the army at the time the scheme commences. Old and unfortunate captains and lieutenants, particularly the former, have no time left to recover their bad fortune by a bonus scheme. The junior ensign, and those coming after him, are those only who can reap the full benefit. And for this as well as for many others I could state connected with the permanent stability of the fund:—Collect, I say, to the regimental officer, the quota demanded yearly from you by a percentage on each grade's regimental pay and allowances, in place of seniors of grades paying for every step they get. Thus: the scheme wants yearly from the army Rs. 121,200; or, divided by 80, from each corps yearly Rs. 1,515, viz. Rs. 70,000 from captains, Rs. 40,000 from lieutenants, and Rs. 11,200 from ensigns.

Lieutenants	11 × 4	ditto = 44 × 12 = 528 ditto.
Ensigns....	5 × 3	ditto = 15 × 12 = 180 ditto.

Total each regiment yearly ..	1,590 Rs.
This sum multiplied by	80 regts.

Rs. 1,27,200

"Giving, beyond what the proposed scheme asks, Rs. 6,000 as a margin to cover short ensigns' and any other unattainable subscriptions. Now, looking at the scheme in the above light, in place of the light in which 'Regimental Subaltern' proposes it to be looked at, regimental officers can make no mistake as to the real and true sum asked from them to increase their promotion by two line steps in twenty years. And by the above mode of collection there would be no payment required for death steps or other casualties amongst the regimental officers. Although a lieutenant-colonel, I am not of those who propose scrambling for this bonus, in the event of the fund being established, nor have I at present the slightest intention of ever doing so, unless driven to do so by broken-down health, ere I can reach my off-reckonings. But, from well-earned experience, strongly do I recommend the regimental officers, particularly the younger grades, to use every exertion in their power to establish a fund. There are, I imagine, few officers in the upper grades of our army, who will not freely acknowledge the regret they feel that some fund had not existed when they were ensigns, to have saved many of them the long and dreary pull they have had to reach the top, or to have saved the pockets of those more fortunate, who have had to pay sums of money for their majorities that will keep them in debt and fettered to India for many a year to come. Why not give this scheme a fair trial?—regimental committees collecting their quotas, in any fashion most suitable to their officers' wishes, at all events for one year, under a principle that can hurt none. Let the scheme commence working from the 1st of January next, and let regiments do their best during 1857 to collect their quotas, sending in to the general committee, as soon as they clearly see their way before them, an estimate of what sum at the end of the year will be forthcoming. Let the general committee, from the 1st of January, 1857, receive and register in turn all applicants for the bonus in January, 1858; and, as soon as they have the probable estimate of what the eighty regiments will pay, let the general committee divide the sum, whatever it may be, by eight, and offer it to the eight senior applicants for bonuses, or (in event of any of the eight refusing) in turn to all below them. If it answers the first year, as above, rely on it, year by year defaulters and objectors will become fewer, and the subscriptions in time rise to full power. If found at the end of the first year a failure, drop it as a hopeless case.

TORTURE IN INDIA—THE OTHER SIDE.

The last number of the Indian Mail (page 35) contained an article representing the chief modes of torture stated to be practised in Bengal. The following letter, addressed to the Hurkaru by "A Bengalee," takes the other side of the question:—

"In your paper of this day, I observe a long account (apparently original) of 'Torture in India.' Any article with this heading is sure to attract plenty of readers, and I, like thousands of others doubtless, looked into it. But what is the nature of the cases of torture it professes to narrate? You and your readers will keep in mind that the article describes a number of cases of torture, from which we are to deduce the conclusion that torture is, to use the words set down in your journal, 'prevalent in every part of India.' Let us examine what is the actual evidence provided by these cases (supposing every word of them to be correct) in favour of the existence of torture in Bengal.

"In the first case, I find 'it was alleged that lime had been put into the eyes of a man.' Now, Sir, if ever you have been a juror, grand or petty, in Calcutta, you must know that almost every other prisoner who is tried 'alleges' torture, under the direction or with the connivance of the European police. The English judge who tries the case understands his countrymen, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred takes no notice of the allegation. In the Mofussil we have judges who do not understand the people, and who very naturally give credence to a tale circumstantially narrated, forgetful that a prisoner on his trial, be he European or native, will 'allege' anything that he thinks will get him off.

"In the second case we find that 'rubbing the face upon the ground' is 'spoken of as a mode of torture.' To corroborate it we have the case of a man with a bruised face examined by Dr. Murray, of Beerbhoom, and this man's case you suggest was 'probably of this kind' of torture. Alas! Sir, if you draw conclusions from this sort of evidence, what horrible facts will you not arrive at if you only but read the reports of the London police-offices.

"In the third case, which is given in great detail, the so-called tortured man, even when at the point of death, refused to reveal the facts. Just fancy a man whose flesh was literally burnt off his bones' refusing, even at the call of the magistrate, to say a single word in corroboration of his injuries having been inflicted by way of torture.

"The fourth instance which you cite is that of torture by dacoits. That these ruffians employ torture is most probable. English burglars and murderers, we presume, never put pistols to peoples' heads, or give them a blow in order to induce them to reveal where their treasures are, or to silence them for ever. Would you think it quite fair, if you were commenting on the manners of the people of England, to cite such atrocities as those of Greenacre and Daniel Good in illustration of them?

"The fifth case is that of a girl 'who accused her mistress of tying her with a cord, heating some oil, and pouring it on her.' I shall not stop to remark on the word 'accusing,' except to say that, if 'accusing' were sufficient, there are few, either of us natives, or of you English gentlemen, or of any nation in the world, that would escape. But even if it were true, what then? Is the inhuman conduct of an individual to be set down as a practice 'prevalent in every part of India?' I ask you, Sir, if you did not observe in the London papers some time ago the fact of a barrister and his wife, in your great city of London, so cruelly treating a little servant girl of theirs as to draw upon them, in a regular trial before the judges, the sentence of some years' (twice, I think) imprisonment in Newgate. Would you think it fair to have this cited by a Frenchman or a German, as a specimen of the manner in which even the educated classes of your countrymen and women treat their poor servant girls? You well know you would not; but you have no hesitation in setting down an act of inhumanity on the part of one native of India, as a specimen of the 'atrocities prevalent in every part of India.' There is this difference also: in the English case the parties were convicted of the cruelty; in the Indian case, all that you venture to state is that the correctness of the girl's statement 'appears to have been confirmed by the civil surgeon'—appears to have been confirmed. Surely the civil surgeon confirmed it, or he did not. But I can very easily suppose a writer not being very positive in asserting the actual facts of a case, when it 'appears,' to use his own phrase, that he has obtained them merely by hearsay.

"I intended to have gone on seriatim through the cases you have cited, but have not time. However, I think what I have said is sufficient to show that, whether torture prevails in India or not, its prevalence cannot be deduced from the cases you have brought forward."

THE IRON ORE OF UPPER ASSAM.

Colonel H. Goodwyn forwarded the subjoined report on specimens of the iron ore of Upper Assam to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, on the 3rd October, 1856.

Specimen No. 1 has been obtained from Doobri. It is finely and very closely granulated, and would be well adapted for the manufacture of steel.

Specimen No. 2 is iron ore obtained from Jeypore. It is somewhat brittle and pinny, and would not therefore answer for any very fine work though it might prove serviceable for work of a coarse description.

Specimen No. 3 comes from Golaghaut. It is pinny and irregular, but tough, and would answer for a variety of purposes, such as nuts, bolts, &c.

Specimen No. 4 (Tiroom iron) is an uniform grain, tough and suitable for the more refined descriptions of iron work.

Specimen No. 5 (Dingernoo iron) is unequally granulated, partly fibrous, and partly crystalline, but like Specimen No. 2 would answer for such coarse works as iron gratings, jail fittings, &c.

Specimen No. 6 is the knife manufactured from native iron alluded to by Dr. Macnamara in his report. The steel bears tempering and letting down very well, the manufacture however is coarse, and the blade pinny, and irregularly steeled. Mr. Sterling reports, that on giving the blade a hard temper, he found it "extremely tough" and the "edge not injured by hard blows against iron bars." He is therefore of opinion that such steel in the hands of a Sheffield cutler would be brought to a perfect state.

Parcel No. 7 Mr. Sterling states contains a specimen of difficultly fusible iron, very "brittle and hard, but only partially reduced." It is therefore impossible to give any report upon it as to its physical properties, being at present only half fused, and in a semi-converted state. If a more definite report is wanted on this, and the specimen next to be mentioned, I would suggest that they be sent to the yard in large quantities, when they can be thoroughly reduced to the metallic state.

Parcel 8 contains some scoria or slag from the furnace, and has but very little of iron in its composition.

4th. This disposes of the eight specimens of iron-ore sent to me by Government for report. I would, however, take this opportunity of stating that, having myself received from Colonel Hannay a spiral piece of iron, and a small quantity of magnetic iron-ore found by him at Doobri on the Burrumpooter, I forwarded them also to Mr. Sterling for examination, who reports,

5th. That the piece of iron bent into a spiral shape (which I herewith forward) is very ductile and malleable, and is suited for a variety of fine works.

6th. The iron ore (which I also inclose) is finely granulated, and is found, after examination, to be what is commonly called "magnetic iron ore." Its specific gravity is 45. It is strongly attracted by the magnet, an infallible sign of its purity. Mr. Sterling reports that, in conducting the examination, he found among it "grains of mica, quartz, and ruby garnet." The two latter substances would rather improve its adaptation for the smelting furnace; but, on the other hand, Mr. Sterling discovered some "iron pyrites" (sulphuret of iron), which would detract from its value at least to a certain extent.

7th. All the specimens of iron which were sent in bars have been found to bear laminating very well, and to be adapted for the ordinary purposes to which refined English iron is now applied; in fact, Mr. Sterling is of opinion that with the exception of one or two exceedingly poor ones, every kind of ore would be equally good, if subjected to the same treatment.

8th. In conclusion, I would observe that, having had much conversation, and some little correspondence with Col. Hannay, and aided by the further light thrown on the subject by the results of the examination of the ore itself, as reported above, I am led to believe that Assam might be made capable of supplying Bengal with iron, as the ores there produced are good, and water-carriage is available to the spot. In fact, if the resources of the country are properly developed, I have no doubt but that Bengal can be made to minister to her own wants, on both iron and clays, by producing what is required, instead of indenting, as at present, on the home market.

9th. Assuming for granted that the capabilities of this country, as regards the supply of iron, are undoubted, as is evident by the specimens which are here produced, wrought by means of the simple and rude furnaces of the natives, it cannot be difficult to foretell how much that produce can be improved, and how vast would be the advantages by the setting up of proper smelting-furnaces and rolling-mills for the Lower Provinces.

STATISTICS OF THE BENGAL ARMY.

At the present time there are colonels who from rank and length of service ought to be returned as "non effective" 94
In July, 1856, there were brevet colonels..... 77
Do. do. brevet lieutenant-colonels 38
Do. do. brevet majors 163

By G. O. G., September 8th, in the Bengal army alone, "alteration of rank" was given to 48 brevet colonels, 60 brevet lieutenant-colonels, and 42 brevet majors, total 150

After the 23rd November there will not be a brevet captain in the artillery, engineers, light cavalry, or European regiments
In the native infantry there will be brevet captains 33
Officers on civil and political employ 216

Do. on the military general staff 350
After the 23rd November there will not be a cornet in the light cavalry, and in one or two regiments not the full promotion of lieutenants.

The most fortunate brevet colonel in the army is Arthur Becher, quartermaster-general.

The most fortunate brevet lieutenant-colonel is Fraser Tytler of the 37th N.I.

The most fortunate regimental major is Prout, of the 56th N.I.

The most unfortunate regimental subaltern is Lieut. Garstin, of the 70th N.I.

Judging from the length of service of the ten senior officers of each regiment respectively, the most fortunate in promotion are the 56th and 58th N.I.; and the six most unfortunate are the 10th, 11th, 23rd, 35th, 50th, and 70th N.I.

In the space of ninety-eight years the Bengal army has won fifty-eight honorary distinctions for campaigns, and throughout the service there are only seven regiments without some name on their colours and appointments. The Bengal army includes seventy-one members of the Bath. From three regiments are five captains absent on detached employ; and in four, there are still four absent in defiance of the Court's order on that important subject. This does not refer to those who probably will be rewarded by their promotion on the 23rd inst.

There are 112 irregular regiments and batteries attached to the Bengal army, thirty-four of which are under the patronage of the Commander-in-Chief, and seventy-eight under that of the Governor-General. Capt. Baugh, of the 26th N.I., is the only officer who having entered the service since 1837 holds an appointment without being P. H.—Ibid.

The LONDON MAIL, of Nov. 10th, arrived at Calcutta, Dec. 16th (per Nubia).

SOMETHING WRONG SOMEWHERE.—We are sorry to hear of several cases of desertion from H.M.'s 53rd regt., no less than seven men having absconded within the last fortnight; being in the proportion of one desertion every other day. Surely there must be something wrong somewhere, to induce so many men to run their necks recklessly into a noose within so short a time.—Phoenix, Nov. 29.

STRENGTH OF THE PERSIAN FORCE.—The total strength of the expeditionary force despatched to Persia consists of 5,670 fighting men (of whom 2,270 are Europeans), with 3,750 followers, 1,150 horses, and 430 bullocks. The fleet consists of 8 war steamers of the Indian navy, 7 lined steamers, and 30 sailing ships; and numbers, in all, 45 sail.

AGRA: FAREWELL DINNER TO COLONEL SWATMAN.—The officers of the 3rd European regiment gave an entertainment to a large party on Friday evening last, in honour of Col. Swatman, who leaves for England by the next steamer. The toasts, of which there were the usual variety, included all the departments of the services and society. Of these, the principal ones were given out by Major Wakefield with great vigour and effect. The most interesting was of course the health of Col. Swatman, which was enthusiastically received. Major Wakefield paid a hearty tribute to the high qualities of the colonel, both professional and personal, which have obtained for him the respect and attachment of all under his command, who look upon his departure as a lasting loss. The colonel responded to the tribute with some emotion, in expressing his regret at his separation from the corps. The "Civil Service," the "Medical Service," the "Press," the "British Army," and the "Railway Staff," were among the other toasts; and the "representative man" of each class responded as became him. Among these Dr. John Grant was as usual conspicuous in the display of his rare accomplishment—the art of putting the right word into the right place. Nothing indeed could have gone off better than the evening's proceedings, which were kept up to a sufficiently late hour. The 3rd Europeans had been inspected in the morning by the brigadier, and we believe with a very gratifying result.—Mofussilite, Nov. 18.

STEAM TUG "CAROLINA."—The steam tug Carolina, formerly belonging to a bankrupt firm at Hong Kong, has been sold by auction for Rs. 81,000, the purchasers being Messrs. Gordon, Stuart, and Co. It is estimated that an outlay of about Rs. 25,000 will put her into perfect working order.

Mrs. H. V. BAYLEY is appointed a temporary judge of the Court of Sudder Dewanny; and Mr. Latour, recently arrived from England, is nominated to officiate in his place as judge of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs.

ARCHDEACON PRATT has resumed charge of the archdeaconry from the Rev. H. S. Fisher, and the latter gentleman being in very indifferent health, has obtained sanction from the proper quarter to proceed to Darjeeling for a few months, without any retrenchment of his stipend.

SCHOOLS OF INSTRUCTION IN MUSKETRY are to be formed at Umballah, Peshawur, and Dum Dum, to which an officer and five men are to be sent from every regiment in the service, in order to qualify themselves as regimental instructors.

THE BANK OF BENGAL.—There has been a stormy meeting of proprietors at the Bank of Bengal, during which Mr. Ashburner brought a variety of charges against the directors and secretary, but failed to substantiate any one of them, and the result, therefore, instead of doing injury to the officers of the bank, has simply been disastrous to himself. The bank is about to extend its operations by the establishment of branch banks in some of the most central stations of the North-West Provinces and the Punjab.—Hurkaru.

THE CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY takes well. The few shares reserved for India were at once subscribed for; the agents could have allotted ten times the number.

A REGATTA is to take place in Calcutta on New Year's-day, under the patronage of Lord Canning.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, the 13th December, made an amendment to the Calcutta Municipal Bill, to the effect that a rate of two per cent. be levied on every house in the town, the monthly rent of which exceeds Rs. 10. It also voted Rs. 30,000 per annum for providing a supply of water to the town.

DOCTOR FORSYTH, formerly secretary to the Medical Board, and now superintending surgeon in Pegu, is spoken of as likely to be selected for the appointment of inspector-general of hospitals on the expiration of Dr. Renny's tour of service.

MR. LEONARD, a civil engineer, has been selected by the Lieutenant-Governor for the superintendence of the works connected with the new port on the Mutlah, especially in clearing the site of the proposed town.

MR. CHARLES PRINSEP has sent in his resignation of the office of advocate-general, and Mr. W. Ritchie has been confirmed as his successor.

MR. MACLEOD WYLIE resumed his seat as first judge of the Court of Small Causes on the 10th December.

MR. HALLIDAY, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, intends leaving the presidency for the eastern districts by the 10th Jan.

CHANGES IN BURMAH.—Dr. Morton, magistrate of Rangoon, has resigned his appointment; Captain Lloyd, joint magistrate, has obtained leave to go home; Major Tickell and Captain Stevenson, deputy commissioners at Maulmain, proceed to England; and Mr. D. G. Nicholson (an uncovenanted officer), principal assistant commissioner, is dismissed. Mr. O'Riley (an uncovenanted officer), formerly a sugar-planter, is made magistrate of Rangoon, and Lieutenant Scott becomes joint magistrate.

CAPT. SPARKS.—We regret to perceive that Capt. Sparks, deputy-commissioner of Rangoon, has been sent back to his regiment. His deputy-collector, it will be remembered, absconded with nearly two lakhs of rupees. The punishment is necessary, even if Capt. Sparks can be acquitted of carelessness.

THE 6TH DRAGOONS.—The whole of the 6th regiment of dragoon guards, just arrived from England, has been sent up to Allahabad on steamers.

NECESSITY OF A RETIRED SENIORITY LIST.—The Hurkaru illustrates the necessity of a retired seniority list by referring to General Tredway Clarke, who arrived in India in 1780, and finally left the country in 1807, and whose name has been borne on the roll as a regimental colonel of artillery since the 25th July, 1810, thus preventing promotion in the corps. General Sir James Lillyman Caldwell, who came to India in 1788, in like manner has been clogging promotion in the engineer corps, of which he became one of the three regimental colonels in May, 1824.

SIR ROBERT HAMILTON, Bart., agent to the Governor-General for Central India, returns to Indore immediately, from whence he proposes making an application for permission to visit Europe for six months under the new rules. It is not impossible Sir Robert may return from England as a provisional member of the Supreme Council. The Rev. Arthur Hamilton, senior chaplain of St. John's Church, will accompany his brother to Indore.

BRIGADIER CHAMBERLAIN'S FORCE has returned into the British territory from the vicinity of Caubul.

A LAKH AND FIFTY THOUSAND RUPEES have been sanctioned for the erection of a Custom House on the Mutlah, together with accommodation for the officers. Until the building is erected, a hulk is to be used.

MR. J. GRAHAM, barrister-at-law, has been appointed to act as secretary of the Indigo Planters' Association during the absence of Mr. Theobald, who left for England by the last steamer.

DR. RICHMOND believes that port wine is the best protection against cholera. He has known cases where two glasses of strong port have cured spasms which had resisted strong anti-spasmodics. The recommendation will be popular.

INFANTICIDE.—A very interesting meeting has been held at Umritsir to test the practical results of the anti-infanticide measures taken three years ago. The leading Sikh sirdars and other influential natives were present, and gave most satisfactory evidence of the success of the measures. It was especially shown that the religious mendicants, whose extortionate practices at weddings are cited as a principal cause of infanticide, have ceased to be troublesome. All the chiefs present renewed their engagements to use every effort for the suppression of infanticide, and these men seem to have a habit of keeping their promises. Still it is found that there must be special legislation before the practice can be effectually put down.

ADMINISTRATIVE REFORM IN INDIA.—The demand for annual reports from administrative officers is spreading. The Sudder Board of Revenue of the N. W. P. is not satisfied with the usual report from district officers. It has enjoined on all collectors "the importance of requiring an annual report from such of the officers subordinate to them as are in independent charge of a territorial subdivision, and are thought likely to furnish useful remarks regarding the proceedings of the year." The system has already obtained in the Benares division. It is a good system; but we are in danger of a mania for reports. The knack of telling a good story is no test of administrative capacity.

THE AGRI-HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA has reported most favourably on a new variety of silk, brought into notice by Capt. Hutton, of the invalids, a resident of Landour. The worm which produces it (Bombyx Huttoni) spins in all weathers, whereas the common silk-worm is apt to be thrown off work by a passing cloud. It is thought that the new worm may prove commercially important, and Government is solicited to institute experiments regarding its productive powers. In connection with silk it was announced at the late meeting of the Society, that the new plan of manufacturing silk directly from the bark of the mulberry tree is rapidly gaining ground. Signor Lotteri, the inventor, announces that four companies have been started in Europe for carrying out the system, one of which has already paid him down 25,000*l.* for the privilege.

MR. JOHN KING, the third judge of the Small Cause Court, will (the Phoenix states) have to proceed to England on sick leave. The elevation of Mr. King to the Bench was an experiment much canvassed at the time; but he has, apparently, given general satisfaction.

MR. CONWAY, an assistant in the office of the Sudder Board at Agra, has lost his life through an over dose of arsenic. He had been recommended to take arsenic for a painful malady, and had unfortunately persisted in dosing himself with the poison without being guided by proper medical advice. On a post mortem examination of the body of the deceased, arsenic was discovered in the stomach sufficient in quantity to have destroyed the lives of six men.

ALLAHABAD AND CAWNPORE RAILWAY.—The first section of this railway was opened, for a distance of thirty miles, by the Lieut.-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, on the 1st December, with great éclat.

A YOUNG BENGALÉE WOMAN, of good caste, has published a volume of venacular poetry, the chief subjects being love and railways.

THE SUNGTOOL MINERAL SPRING.—The Supreme Government has sanctioned an outlay of Rs. 900 for repairing the road to the Sungtool mineral spring near Darjeeling, and for erecting a simple building for the accommodation of the soldiers of the convalescent department who may resort to the waters.

PORTRAIT OF THE MARQUIS OF DALHOUSIE.—Mr. Dorin has a resolution to propose in the Legislative Council, that a message be sent to the Governor-General in Council, communicating the wish of the Council that application be made to the Court of Directors for a portrait of the Marquis of Dalhousie, to be placed in the new council-room.

MR. MATE-PILOT OCTAVIUS BRYDGES has been dismissed the service for drunkenness, and "for throwing up the charge of the ship Mauvertius without the sanction of the commander, or the permission of the master attendant."

THE STEAMER Oriental has been finally chartered to proceed to Rangoon to bring up the 65th N.I.

DR. MACPHERSON has lately found the vaccine virus on the teats of a cow here, a matter of interest in a medical point of view, as hitherto it has been necessary to import it from England.

THE BISHOP OF MADRAS reached Agra on the 3rd December, after having paid a visit to Lucknow.

SHAHABAD, NOV. 22.—“Mr. Solano, of Shahabad, has been nearly murdered; he was attacked by a band of 300 men, whose intention was to take his life. He has escaped, however, though it is very doubtful whether he will survive the effects of the severe wounds he has received. Some of the party who attacked him have been arrested, but the whole conduct of the magistrate is highly reprehensible, and Mr. Halliday should look into the matter before his enemies have time to taunt him with the charge of indifference. You know very well that Mr. Solano is an independent sort of a gentleman, and natives and civilians feared him alike. What wonder, then, that one should aid and abet the other; notice should be taken of the matter by the press.”—Englishman.

LAHORE: MEMORIAL FROM CASHMERE.—A letter from Lahore mentions that more than three hundred of the inhabitants of Cashmere have petitioned the Punjab authorities, and also the Governor-General, against the tyranny of Golab Sing, to avoid which numbers have fled the country. They say that he has endeavoured to monopolize all the trade of Cashmere, opening retail shops. That he has monopolized all the forests; and if a branch is cut from a tree, punishes it by striking off the hand of the offender. There are many other charges against him; and it must be supposed the people think that, because the British Indian Government gave him the throne, they have power to keep him in order. Should a remonstrance be made, Golab will only have to call attention to Gortschakoff's circular on the right of independent princes to do what they please with their own subjects. If Lord Dalhousie were here, indeed, he might order the annexation of Cashmere with a much better reason than he did that of Oude. The government of Golab Sing is an unmitigated tyranny, and having put him on the throne, it may be fairly argued that the British are answerable for his crimes.

MR. JOHN INGLIS, the deputy-commissioner of Salkote, who has been in charge of that district since annexation, has applied for furlough to England for six months, and purposes claiming the privileges of the recent order in the N. W. Provinces on his return. Mr. Inglis may think he has just reason to complain of his recent supercession, first, by Lieut.-Col. Clarke, who, though only a second-class deputy, was placed over his head as officiating commissioner, and secondly, by the appointment of Mr. A. A. Roberts to the commissioner'ship of Lahore.

RAILWAY ASSAULT.—The Editor of the Bhaskur reports that three Europeans and two ladies were travelling in a second-class railway carriage, in which were two natives dressed in clothes of such fine texture as rendered them, to accidental breeding and way of thinking, disagreeable passengers to the other travellers. The ladies, looking ashamed at the natives, observed that in spite of the habiliments put on by them, they seemed quite naked. Upon this the Europeans peremptorily insisted upon the natives leaving the carriage and taking passage in another when the train stopped at the nearest station. To this imperious demand the Bengalis said that they had paid for their passage and had a perfect right to travel in the carriage. At this the Europeans got enraged, and assaulted the natives with slaps and blows; their habits in the course of the scuffle that followed were torn, making them thus more indecent and shocking to the finer sensibilities of the fair couple. When the train halted at the station, the noise produced by the conflict drew the attention of some of the railway authorities, who helped the natives to alight down from the carriage. Being overpowered, they were so severely beaten that blood was seen issuing from their mouths. The train started, leaving the sufferers mourn over their distress.

THE AGRA GOVERNMENT has been compelled by financial embarrassments to postpone for fifteen days the pay-day of the civil establishment throughout the Agra district. The deficiency is attributed partly to unexpected calls for advances to the Railway Company, partly to a failure of salt revenue, caused by injudicious interference with the exports from the Bhurtpore territory.

THE OPIUM SALE of Dec. 9 ended as follows:—

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar	1891	955	940	946 2 1½	17,89,140
Benares	1010	970	965	966 6 6½	9,76,075
Re-manufactured
Behar, of 1853-1854.	531	900	785	709 12 8½	4,24,690

The warlike news from China has but partially affected prices. At the last sale Patna opium sold for Rs. 965, and Benares for Rs. 1,004. The reappearance in the market of the damaged drug of the season 1853-54 is a new feature.

THE ZENANA OF THE ROYAL FAMILY AT LUCKNOW has been entered by robbers and plundered of gold, jewels, and female ornaments of the estimated value of several lakhs. The theft seems to have been cleverly effected. A subterranean passage twelve yards in length was dug, from a shop adjoining the outer wall of the palace, to the storeroom in the Khas Mehal, where the jewels were deposited. Fourteen persons “of supposed respectability” have been apprehended, and a part of the stolen property has been recovered, but the ringleader of the gang, an Abyssinian eunuch, appears to have escaped with a large part of the booty. Had there been fewer parties to the plot, they might all have enjoyed impunity.

AFGHANISTAN.—Both the Central Star and Delhi Gazette state the objects of the conference with the ruler of Cabul, which was to take place on the 8th December. Dost Mahomed is to be called on by Sir John Lawrence to give sufficient guarantees for the protection of our troops against insult and outrage while passing through or residing in his dominions. He is also to be asked to account for the employment of the subsidies in money and arms which he has already received.

THE “ENGLISHMAN” STATES THAT GOVERNMENT has accepted a private tender for the conveyance of the mails between Calcutta and Akyab, Rangoon and Moulmein. The sum of Rs. 2,500 per mensem is to be paid for the service, beginning with the 1st of January. The contractor is Mr. H. Marshall, agent, we believe, of one of the private steam companies.

THE MANAGER OF THE NORTH-WEST BANK.—At a meeting of shareholders on the 13th December, it was resolved to invest the supervision and control of the bank in a Board of Directors instead of a sole manager. The manager remains at his post, but will act under the directors, each of whom is to be paid a gold mohur for every attendance at the bank's meetings. The shareholders passed a resolution expressing their gratitude to Mr. Tandy for the present improved condition of the bank, and stating that the change is a “concession to public opinion made on the recommendation of the manager himself.”

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA has declined to comply with the missionaries' petition.

A MELANCHOLY CASE OF LOSS OF LIFE.—We regret exceedingly to learn that a most melancholy case of loss of life through drowning occurred on Saturday evening. Two young gentlemen just arrived in this country, and nephews of Colonel Goodwyn, were bathing in the jail tank, when the eldest, though a swimmer, we believe, sank before any assistance could be rendered to him, to rise no more. The body was recovered only yesterday afternoon, and after prolonged efforts.—Phoenix, Dec. 22.

PESHAWUR.—The following is an extract of a letter from Peshawur of the 4th Dec.:—“The Meerunzaie force are all back to Kohat, and Proctor of the 39th, who has been out with them (doing duty with the 4th cavalry), rode in this morning; he gives a good account of the expedition, which appears to have been well managed and successful; the arrears of revenue having been collected, fines levied, prisoners taken, and a good and very direct road to Cabul found, the force having been within thirty miles of that place. Proctor tells me that the Commander-in-Chief is in a rage, at so many of the 66th Goorkahs having been sent without his sanction with the force, and unaccompanied by their own commanding officer, who, it would appear, was not allowed to accompany them—his regiment—on service, because he was senior to the brigadier of the Punjab force. The Commander-in-Chief has also directed the return to their regiments of officers sent to do duty with the force, they having been sent without his approval having been obtained in the first instance: so I should say somebody will catch toko. The fact of taking 600 men of a regiment away in service, and not allowing the commanding officer to go, is what I call riding rough-shod over a man.”

CAPTAIN YOUNG and Lieutenant Playfair of the 4th Bengal N.I., proceed, we believe, without loss of time, to the Persian Gulf, with a view to the organization of an Arab contingent near Bussora.

CIVILIANS ON LEAVE TO EUROPE are required to deliver to the secretary at the East-India House their certificates of the exact date on which their leave commences, immediately on their arrival in England.

INLAND STEAM NAVIGATION.—The steamers of the India General Company take up the river 16,000 tons of European goods per annum, and bring back 14,000 tons of country produce. The traffic of the Ganges Company, up and down, amounts to 20,000 tons per annum; making in all a trade of 50,000 tons. In 1852, the aggregate trade of the two companies was only 10,000 tons. And yet, as is well known, the supply of steam accommodation, in spite of its rapid increase, bears no proportion to the demand.

THE CASH BALANCE in the Government treasuries throughout India, on the 31st Dec., 1856, amounted to Rs. 10,37,49,194.

MR. BOND is exhibiting, at the Exchange, a lock of his own invention, which he defies any one to open, even with the key belonging to it, unless he knows the secret mode of applying it.

THE PENAL CODE.—The Act known as the Indian Penal Code was read a first time in the Legislative Council on Saturday, December 20th.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

MOVEMENTS OF CORPS.

Head-quarters, Camp Meerut, Dec. 6, 1856.—With the sanction of the Right Honourable the Governor-General of India in Council, the following movements in the corps of Sappers and Miners, for 1856-57, are directed to take place on the dates and in the order specified:—

1st company, from Peshawur to Roorkee, when relieved by the 6th company; 2nd company, from Attock to Roorkee, when relieved by the 5th company. To march together from Attock, under the senior officer.

5th company, from Deenah to Attock, on 12th January, when joined by the 6th company.

6th company, from Roorkee to Peshawur, on 1st December.

7th company, from Hazarah to Roorkee, on 1st Dec.; 8th company, from Margullah Pass to Roorkee, on 1st Dec., to join at Rawal Pindee, and march down under the senior officer.

9th company, from Deenah to Roorkee, on 10th Dec., when joined by the 7th and 8th companies.

Head-Quarters, Camp Meerut, Dec. 8, 1856.—With the sanction of the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council, the undermentioned movements and changes in the destinations of regiments and detachments are to take place.

1st regt. light cavalry, from Lucknow to Mow, when relieved by the 7th regt. light cavalry.

7th regt. light cavalry, from Jullundur to Lucknow, already marched.

DEPÔTS FOR TRAINING OFFICERS, &c., IN THE USE OF THE RIFLE MUSKET.

Head-Quarters, Camp Meerut, 12th Dec., 1856.—With the sanction of Government three depôts will be formed during this cold season, for the purposes of training a limited number of officers and non-commissioned officers in the use of the rifle musket, and of qualifying them to become instructors of musketry in their several regiments.

2. These depôts will be established at the following stations.

Sealkote—For the troops in the Peshawur and Lahore divisions.

Umballah—For the troops in the Cawnpore, Meerut, and Sirhind divisions.

Dum Dum—For the troops in the Dinapore and Presidency divisions.

3. Each European regiment of infantry of the Royal and the Company's services will detach to the depot of the division to which the corps belongs, one commissioned officer and five men, including a proportion of non-commissioned officers; and each native infantry corps of the line, one European officer, one native commissioned officer, and five men, including a proportion of non-commissioned officers.

4. The officers and men are to be selected by commanding officers, with reference to their intelligence and smartness generally, and their aptitude for the peculiar duty in question.

5. An officer instructor, who has been trained at Hythe, and reported qualified, will be appointed to each of the depôts, on a staff salary of 100 rupees per mensem.

6. An officer will be appointed to perform the duties of adjutant and quartermaster at each depot, during the practising season, on a staff salary of 100 rupees per mensem.

7. A commandant will also be appointed at first to each depot on a salary of 200 rupees a month; but this appointment will be dispensed with when the system of instruction is properly established, and found to work well.

8. The depôts at Umballah, Sealkote, and Dum Dum, will be assembled on the 15th January; and the officers and men are to be detached so as to join by that date.

9. The European officers will proceed to join by dawk, at the Government expense; and the native commissioned officers and the non-commissioned officers and men, European and native, are to be sent by bullock-train.

10. Ammunition will be furnished to the depôts in the proportion of 100 rounds per man; and weekly reports of the practice and of the progress of the men generally, are to be furnished to the adjutant-general of the army, for submission to the commander-in-chief.

MADRAS.

MR. DALE AGAIN.—At the sitting of the Supreme Court yesterday, Mr. Dale applied for permission to be struck off the list of attorneys, and to be admitted to practise as a barrister. The former application was granted, and on a renewed application on Friday, the learned gentleman will be duly enrolled as a barrister of the Court.—Spectator, Dec. 3.

REVISION OF THE ARMY REGULATIONS.—At length (says the Athenæum) a committee is appointed for the revision of the general regulations of the army. We trust its work will be done without hurry, and yet with no loss of time. Major T. McGoun, of the 6th regt. N.I., is the president. It will be remembered that the necessity of codification has been strenuously advocated by us.

MR. SPENCE.—From the Athenæum we learn that "Mr. Spence who has held the office of accountant at the bank of Madras for nearly twelve years, is about to return home to take up an appointment as joint manager of a branch bank in Scotland. We hear his services have been spoken of by the directors in the highest terms. He has also filled the office of Auditor to the administrator general's accounts since the establishment of the office in 1851, and has acted with considerable credit to himself in connection with various local institutions. We wish Mr. Spence success in his new walk. We understand that Mr. Franck who has filled with great credit for years the situation of Deputy-Accountant, will fill the vacancy occasioned by Mr. Spence's retirement. But to re-place Mr. Franck in his department, it seems that the Directors are unable to find a man in Madras, the second city in India, with a population of 750,000.

MAGNIFICENT BARRACKS for European troops have been erected at Secunderabad in the Nizam's territory. The buildings for a single regiment actually occupy 14½ acres, but they are scattered over a space of 220 acres. The quarters for the unmarried privates give a space of 2,730 cubic feet to each man; the married privates have two rooms, with 5,872 cubic feet for each family; non-commissioned officers have each four rooms and 11,284 cubic feet. All these are exclusive of cook-rooms, bathing-rooms, plunge-baths, reading-rooms, and workshops. The total cost of the barracks, which are to accommodate a single regiment, has been 13½ lakhs. The sum seems large; but it is difficult to waste money in economizing the life of the European soldier.

NEW POLICE FOR INDIA.—We (Madras Crescent) understand that Lord Canning has for some time had under his consideration a plan, received from England, for the formation of a general system of police for India. Each presidency is to have its own superintendent, and under his command are to be several regiments of infantry, each five hundred strong, and each with a European subaltern officer at its head. The men are to be armed with a short rifle, and a sword bayonet. There is, also, it is said, to be a proportionate number of mounted policemen under a similar organization. The superintendents and commandants are to obey requisitions from the judges and collectors, and the functions of the force are to be those of thief-takers and peace-keepers. The village police is to remain as at present constituted, but to be placed under the surveillance of the superintendent.

THE REMARRIAGE OF A HINDU WIDOW has taken place at Salem. She was a girl of 13, who had never lived with her deceased husband. Her father determined to remarry her, and did so, though threatened with excommunication by his caste. Numbers of respectable natives were present at the ceremony, and "a gentleman of the Civil Service honoured the occasion." The caste of the family is not mentioned.

MADRAS RAILWAY TRAFFIC.—The amount of traffic on the Madras Railway, for the week ending the 20th instant, amounted to Rupees 3,958-8-2, being an average receipt per mile of Rupees 60-14-4.—Spectator, Dec. 20.

REVENUE.—Mr. Elliott has introduced a bill for the recovery of arrears of revenue in his Presidency.

LIEUT. BELL, 25TH N.I.—A European General Court Martial was ordered to assemble at the Court Martial Room, Fort St. George, Madras, on the 18th December, for the trial of Lieut. H. B. Bell, of the 25th regt. N.I.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S VISIT TO RANGOON.—The Madras Spectator hears it rumoured that his Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, purposes proceeding to Rangoon on a tour of inspection, and that with this view he will leave the presidency about the end of the month.

TANJORE.—The fifteen widows of the late Rajah of Tanjore have applied to the Madras Supreme Court for an injunction to restrain the East-India Company from interfering with their private property, and to compel delivery of the specie left by the Rajah. The court granted a commission to take the affidavits of the eldest of the Ranees.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF of the Madras army has been requested, at the instance of the Court of Directors, to visit every cantonment in the Madras presidency. There are some stations which are invariably passed over in the course of the usual tours.

A TIGER which had killed upwards of sixty people was shot lately at Kurnool.

DR. MACPHERSON.—We understand that Dr. Macpherson of the Madras army is, as a special case, to be appointed superintending surgeon of the Hyderabad contingent. — Spectator, Dec. 23.

BOMBAY.

TROOPS FOR THE PERSIAN GULF.

The following regiments are to compose the force about to be sent up the Gulf.

H.M.'s 14th Light Dragoons.

" 78th Highlanders.

A troop of Horse Artillery (from Kurrachee).

No. 2 Light Field Battery (from Sholapoor).

1st regiment Scinde Irregular Horse.

23rd regiment N.L.I.

26th do. N.I.

In addition to the above, there is to be a flank battalion, composed of the light or flank companies of ten regiments of Native Infantry.

A light battalion is, we believe, to be formed from the light companies of the various regiments within reach, to proceed to the Persian Gulf along with the next division; and this, it is said, will be commanded by Major G. H. Robertson, of the 25th regiment N.I., one of the most judicious selections which could have been made. The following are the regiments that will be drawn upon:—

2nd Grenadiers, from Ahmedabad.
3rd N.I.	" Sholapoor.
5th do.	" Bombay.
11th do.	" Do.
22nd do.	" Malligaum.
25th do.	" Ahmedabad.
27th do.	" Colapore.
29th do.	" Belgaum.
8th do.	" Kurrachee.
15th do.	" Bombay.

Ten companies in all, brought up to the full strength of 80 rank and file, as a total of 800. The companies are to be allowed a captain and subaltern each, with an adjutant, quartermaster, and surgeon for the battalion.

The LONDON MAIL, of Nov. 26th, arrived at Bombay, Dec. 22nd (per Pekin).

THE DEATH OF BRIGADIER STOPFORD, of H.M.'s 64th regiment, who was killed in the attack on Reshire, will be regretted. He served with the 40th N.I. throughout the operations in Candahar and in Afghanistan, during 1841 and 1842, for which he received a medal; and he commanded a regiment in the action of Maharajpore, on the 29th Dec., 1843, until severely wounded in the side. He had also a horse cut down under him, and received another medal for his services in this action. The following are the dates of his commissions:—Ensign, 17th Dec., 1825; lieutenant, 2nd Nov., 1826; capt., 10th Sept., 1830; major, 11th March, 1842; brevet lieutenant-col., 30th April, 1844; lieutenant-col., 13th Nov., 1847; col. 20th June, 1854.

THE LATE COLONEL G. G. MALET, 3rd L.C., who was so treacherously killed in the attack on Reshire, served with the 9th N.I., in 1824, against the Bheels in Guzerat; and with the 3rd L.C. with the field force in Scinde and Afghanistan, in 1841-42, including the advance on Candahar and the several operations of the army under Major-General Nott, leading to the re-occupation of Ghuznee and Cabul, for which he received a medal. When on political employ with the Khan of Khyrpoor, he accompanied the force under Sir Charles Napier in the campaign against the hill-tribes north of the Indus. Colonel Malet was a brother of the Hon. A. Malet, fourth Member of Council at Bombay; and of H. P. Malet, Esq., late of the Bombay civil service. He entered the Bombay army in the year 1822, and succeeded to the regimental majority on the 23rd Aug. 1851, receiving the brevet rank of lieutenant-col. on the 28th Nov. 1854.

MR. WARWICK.—We have heard with much pleasure that a mercantile gentleman recently arrived from England, Mr. Warwick, has determined on the erection of cotton screw-machinery without delay in Kurrachee. He has been induced to this enterprise, we are told, in consequence of the high prices which wool and cotton, the produce of this and the more northerly districts, have recently fetched in the Bombay market. We earnestly hope that this speculation will realize the most sanguine anticipations of the gentleman who has had the boldness to give it a first trial in Sind.—Sindian.

SPIRIT DRINKING AT BOMBAY.—The Bombay Times analyses a return of the spirit drinking carried on in the Presidency town. There are 200 stills at work, turning out a million and a half gallons of country liquor a year. There are about 200,000 possible drinkers in the Presidency. Of these one-half are notoriously sober. The remainder consume, on the average, fifteen gallons a head per annum, or about a strong dram a day. Yet the population is said to be sober. The reporter recommends an increased taxation, for the benefit of the municipality. We believe the tax, even in Calcutta, might be by degrees quadrupled, with advantage to morals and the revenue. It is much lower in Bombay.

KURRACHEE HARBOUR.—The Sind Kossid supplies us with the details of Mr. Walker's scheme for removing the bar of Kurrachee harbour. It is in all respects analogous to the system of Bandels, employed in clearing the Ganges of its sand-banks. The various currents are to be concentrated upon one point of the bar, and Mr. Walker is confident "that Kurrachee is capable of being made an excellent harbour, and that there are no very great engineering or other physical difficulties to contend with in making it such."

THE 12TH N.I. AT DEESA.—Two young officers had agreed to play at billiards so soon as the table was disengaged. On its becoming so, one of them said, that he did not feel disposed to play that night, the other alleged that he promised, and ought to play; the former replied, that he had not done so in the sense understood, and called out across the table, "Go away, and don't be telling these lies about me." The party so accosted went round, and asked that the words should be repeated or recalled. They were repeated, and the party to whom they were applied thereupon spat on the face of him who used them. The papers of the one have been sent in already, those of the other are likely to follow. Not long since, a similar brawl occurred in the Northern Division, where words in the last degree offensive were employed and replied to by the contents of a beer-glass.—Bombay Times.

NAN, OR WHEATEN CAKE.—At the Bhutyarees' shops, which abound in Bombay, a wheaten-cake, called nan, weighing more than half a pound, may be purchased for two deryas, or three farthings, and one of these a day will at last sustain life for many weeks, perhaps months. Such a cake, with a little salna or curry, twice a day, forms the diet of many a labouring man in Bombay, his two meals thus costing only an anna and a half. This, however, applies chiefly to Mahomedans. The ordinary meal of poor Hindus is a seer and a quarter of flour, or a seer of rice, with a little dhal or fish, and two such meals cost about an anna and a quarter per diem. All who can go out to ask for alms will obtain as much as this, and thus at least contrive to keep body and soul together. So long as a really destitute person can crawl from door to door, and make his cry heard, he is sure, in a vast population like that of Bombay, where thousands daily bestow money, grain, or other food upon the poor, to light upon some heart which can feel for his distress—some hand which will stretch itself out to help him.

MUSSULMAN BEGGARS.—Annually there is a large concourse here of pilgrims to Mecca, from Sind, the Punjab, Kashmere, Delhi, Lucknow, Peshawar, Afghanistan, Bengal, and other countries, Bombay being the principal port of embarkation for the Red Sea. Some of these pilgrims are rich, and a large portion able to maintain themselves, but many are supported during their stay by Mussulman families. Again, on their return from the Haj, when the proportion of the destitute is much greater, they are fed and clothed, and helped on their way to their homes. The number of pilgrims who arrive on their way to Mecca or Medina ranges from five hundred to a thousand, males and females. There is always here also a large number of Syds, who, claiming to be descendants of Mahommed, deem it derogatory to work—though to subsist on the bounty of others they are not ashamed. Sometimes there are as many as five hundred of this class in Bombay. They come chiefly from Kutch and Sind, and are principally supported by Memons from those parts. It is computed that the Mahomedan population is laid under contribution for their maintenance, to the extent of some twenty thousand rupees a year. There is no place provided by the Mahomedan community expressly as an asylum for their poor. Every mosque has a part assigned for the temporary residence of learned men and scholars. Pilgrims also are allowed to take up their abode there, and sometimes poor travellers who cannot afford to hire lodgings. All needy and destitute persons also are permitted to resort thither. Every morning and evening a wooden tray or basket, called a tuggara, is sent round by the banghee, or crier of the mosque, to the Mussulman families in each street, and into this is dropped a small portion of the victuals prepared for the household. The promiscuous collection, after the banghee has appropriated his own share, is distributed amongst strangers and poor residing at the time in the mosque. Bachelor beggars often club together, ten or fifteen hiring an apartment, and living on communist principles. The Peshawares are generally found in the compounds of mosques; some live in ruined houses; others occupy verandahs of houses, or squat on plots of vacant ground; and many of these employ themselves in weaving, thus earning from two to three annas a day. In the evening they sally forth as beggars, and generally return with a full scrip. Of Mussulman beggars generally, many males are reputed to be drunkards, ganja-smokers, opium-eaters; and it is generally believed that not a few are addicted to pilfering.—Bombay Quarterly Review.

A MUTINY QUELLED IN THE FUSILEER CORPS.—One of the men of the 1st Fusiliers, named Moss, attached to the 2nd regiment for field service, having been confined for drunkenness, he became very violent, and endeavoured to force himself away from the guard, when he was stabbed with a bayonet by one of them, and within a few minutes after death ensued. Shortly after the occurrence, the most exaggerated accounts reached the lines of the 1st Fusiliers of the murder of a comrade. This so excited the men, that every barrack-room was busy with its inmates preparing to seek vengeance. The commanding officer, the adjutant, and the sergeant-major were promptly on the spot, and with great exertions the men were quieted, with the promise that every inquiry would be made into the matter. The deceased, it appears, was always a very well-behaved man, and a general favourite. His remains were followed to the graveyard by nearly every man of duty.—Scindian.

GOVERNMENT-GENERAL ORDERS.

COMMANDANT OF SAPPERS AND MINERS.

Bombay Castle, Dec. 17, 1856.—Under instructions from the Government of India, the Right Honourable the Governor in Council is pleased to notify that the Commandant of Sappers and Miners will, in future, be allowed the privilege of retaining half of his command allowance whilst on leave, in assimilation with the practice obtaining under the Bengal Presidency.

2. The terms "Pallankeen allowance, and book and instrument allowance," at present applied to the allowances, aggregating Rs. 60 per mensem, which are now drawn by English subalterns, doing regimental duty with the Sappers and Miners, are abolished, and in lieu of these, a consolidated allowance of sixty rupees a month, under the name of "Sapper Allowance," is granted (from the 1st proximo) to all Engineer subalterns doing duty with the Sappers, whether as attached to companies, or holding office on the regimental staff.

3. The G. G. O. No. 493, of the 4th June last, is accordingly so far modified, as to admit of the Sapper allowance being drawn by the adjutant of the corps.

By Order of the Right Honourable the Governor in Council.

LEAVE TO STAFF OFFICERS.

Bombay Castle, Dec. 19, 1856.—The Right Honourable the Governor in Council is pleased to notify that heads of departments are vested with the same authority as general officers commanding divisions, and brigadiers commanding stations, to grant leave of absence for short terms, to European staff officers serving immediately under their authority and orders.

CEYLON.

The LONDON MAIL, of Nov. 26th, arrived at Point de Galle, Dec. 25th, en route to Calcutta (per Bentinck). The Mail, of Dec. 10th, left Aden, Jan. 3rd, for Calcutta (per Bengal). The Ganges, with the Mail, of Dec. 10th, had left Aden for Bombay.

THE PEARL FISHERY.—There is every prospect of an extensive fishery in March, 1857; but before any estimate of the value can be made, the specimen of oysters brought from the bank—10,000 in number, we believe—must be washed and examined. It is believed that the oysters are again extending over the banks, and another large fishery is anticipated in 1859.

LIMITED LIABILITY.—A prospectus has been issued of a company under the designation of "The Ceylon Cooly Transport and Steam Navigation Company, limited," the object of which will be, to secure a direct and expeditious communication, by means of two or more iron screw steamers, between Colombo and various ports on the southern coast of India, as well as the principal ports of the island itself, for the conveyance of Coolies to Ceylon.

THE NEW POSTAGE ordinance for Ceylon comes into operation on the 1st of April next, when the colony will enjoy the cheapest postal system in the world. The basis is one halfpenny for letters and newspapers.

BURMAH.

CONFLAGRATION AT RANGOON.—The following communication from Rangoon, dated Oct. 31, gives an account of the late disastrous fire:—"About ten o'clock this morning, I was startled by a rush of people through the street, and a loud hum, as if of many voices speaking in a moderately high key. As soon as I had fairly launched myself into the street, there before me I beheld clouds of thick black smoke rising at about a mile from us. The street was crowded with carriages, saddle-horses, with their riders, and foot-passengers, all seemingly panic-stricken, and all hurrying as if by one consent in the direction of the fire. I also joined the throng. On coming up to the spot where the fire was making fearful ravages, I was astonished to see how furiously it was burning. It was madness to attempt to go within a hundred yards of the flames. The dock-yard here was on fire. From the best information I could get, the fire had originated by spontaneous combustion in an old tar-burrel. When I arrived at this scene of desolation, the store of the dock-yard was on fire, and it was a grand sight to see the tar, pitch, oil, &c., &c., sending up to heaven such immense tongues of flame. Well may panic seize the inhabitants when a fire breaks out here. The wind blew luckily in a direction the most favourable for the safety of the adjoining buildings; it blew off the shore on to the river, on the banks of which the dock-yard is situated; had it been otherwise and had the breeze come from seaward, it is not improbable that the whole town may have been burnt to the ground. At the present time every house which has a thatch has so much tinder in it that the smallest spark would be sufficient to ignite the tinder. It is not many days since Government ordered all the thatch from parts of the town, which are only sold to parties on the understanding that they are to be built pukka, to be pulled off, and it is more strange, that so soon after this order had gone forth and some demur had been made by parties owning half-finished houses, this fire should have taken place, and in a Government building too. I begin to think that I would not be wrong if I said that it was to be attributed to some incendiary. What, however, surprises me more is, that although the inhabitants or owners of certain lands are bound to build pukka houses, the Government themselves have nearly all their offices, &c. of wood and thatch. There were four fire-engines on the spot, and a number of soldiers from cantonments had come down to render what assistance they could. Nearly every man of any note in Rangoon was here, and the crowd was immense. Fire, it is said, is the scourge of Rangoon, and so it must be in the dry season when a fire has so much fuel to live upon."

TRADE AND SHIPPING.—The Java Courant contains a statement of the trade and shipping of Java and Madura for 1855, from which it appears that the imports on private account amounted to the value of F. 32,994,263 and on Government account 14,987,597 being less by F. 15,793,487 than the imports in 1854.

On the other hand, the exports in 1855 amounted to:—

On private account..... F. 34,261,962

On Government account 49,850,435

F. 84,112,397

being F. 9,726,977 more than in 1854.

The amount of import and export duties actually received during 1855 was F. 6,423,766.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON.

FRIDAY, January 30, 1857.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR R. J. H. VIVIAN, K.C.B.

In the list of officers who received the Order of the Bath on Saturday last, we were gratified to observe the name of Major-General Vivian, late in command of the Turkish Contingent, and now a Director of the East-India Company. It will be remembered that, when the prolonged struggle in the Crimea demanded that every effort should be made by the British Government to augment the available force serving there, it was determined to raise a levy of Turkish troops to be officered by members of the Indian army, and General Vivian was selected to organize and command the force. The fitness of his selection for that high and important duty was universally admitted, and the popularity of the appointment among those who might serve under him was evidenced by the eagerness with which candidates offered themselves for that particular service. General Vivian had earned a high reputation by long and distinguished service in the Madras Army, more especially by conspicuous gallantry during the Burmese war, in 1824; by the success of the force under his command in recapturing the fort Nepaunee from a body of insurgent Arabs in 1841; and more recently by the able manner in which he discharged the important duties of Adjutant-General of the Madras Army, from which post he retired in 1853. That the Turkish Contingent did not play a more conspicuous part in the late campaign was not the fault of its commander; that it rendered good and important service there can be no doubt,—service which, even apart from the antecedents of which Sir Robert Vivian can boast, would fairly and honourably entitle him to the reward he has now received at the hands of his sovereign.

THE EXTINGUISHED DYNASTY OF OUDE.

It would not be easy to furnish from the world's history another example in which the happiness and prosperity of a country have been so utterly disregarded by its rulers as in that of the recently annexed kingdom of Oude. The extinct dynasty was one which boasted of no ancient origin, nor was it ever distinguished by the honour or renown of any one of its princes. A passing notice of the character of each reign will serve to illustrate the truth of these assertions. Saadut Khan, the founder of the family, closed his career, as governor of Oude, by an act of treachery against his liege lord the Mogul emperor, which led to the sack of Delhi by the Persian monarch Nadir Shah. Nadir, though profiting by the counsels of Saadut, held the nawab in such base contempt, that after upbraiding him for his disloyalty, he spat upon his beard and banished him from his presence. Saadut, unable to survive the ignominy, swallowed poison. This took place in 1739. Ten princes of this line, whose seat of empire was the city of Lucknow, have subsequently occupied the throne of Oude. The first in order was Seifdar Jung, the nephew of Saadut. The young nawab, treading in his uncle's footsteps, sullied his reign by revolting from the emperor, who thereupon deprived him of the rank of vizier, and dismissed him in disgrace. The family infirmity appears to have lost none of its efficacy in its descent from generation to generation. Shujah-ood-Dowlah, the son of Seifdur, ascended the throne in 1754. His first act was to throw off his allegiance to the Emperor of Delhi, and to usurp the territory of Oude. He then confederated with the Nabob of Allahabad and the eldest son of the emperor for the conquest of Bengal; but taking advantage of the absence of his colleagues, he basely seized the fort of Allahabad, and dissolved the confederacy by his treachery. In 1760, he once more associated himself with the heir-apparent, who, shortly after, succeeding his father as Emperor of Delhi, raised Shujah to the rank of vizier. Three years later, Shujah made common cause with Meer Cossim in resisting the arms of the East-India Company, and in 1764 sustained a signal overthrow at the battle of Buxar. The British commander, following up his success, pursued Shujah into his own dominions, where, being again defeated, the vizier threw himself unconditionally upon the clemency of his victors. Clive had the generosity to re-instate him upon conditions, and hence the origin of our political relations with Oude.

Shujah, though ambitious, lacked the decision and courage which usually characterize the successful usurper. At the battle with the Rohillas, fought on his behalf by Colonel Champion, in 1774, he betrayed the most dastardly pusillanimity. It had been arranged that he should support the colonel with a strong force of cavalry. Instead, however, of fulfilling his engagement, the prince encamped in the vicinity of the field of battle, and remained a passive spectator of the contest. But though regardless of the glory of victory, Shujah had a keen eye for its profits, and when the enemy's defeat became no longer doubtful, he pressed forward with admirable celerity, and carried off a large share of plunder. The Rohilla territory was shortly after added to his share of the spoil, and thenceforward became an appendage to the Oude dominions. Upon his return from this expedition, Shujah's health betrayed symptoms of decay, and he expired early in the following year. Little has been recorded in history in praise of this prince. Dow, his biographer, sums up his character in a few words, and styles him "the infamous son of a more infamous Persian pedlar." Hitherto the nawabs of Oude had reigned absolute in their dominions, and never delegated their power to another. Their more degenerate descendants, while inheriting the meaner vices of their predecessors, lacked their ambition, and have been content to substitute for this quality another family characteristic—the total neglect of the duties of royalty. The first of these was Asaf, the son of Shujah. This prince having bound the East-India Company by treaty to profect his subjects from foreign invaders, thereby secured the sole right of plundering them himself, and zealously devoted to the work a long and undisturbed leisure. His reign was one uninterrupted course of extortion and profusion. "If," said Lord Cornwallis, "the information which I have received of the state of the country be true, the disorders exceed all bounds and all description. The consequence is, that the revenues are collected by force of arms, the revenue agents are left to plunder uncontrolled, and the cultivators have no means of redress." Asof died in 1797, bequeathing to his successor an exhausted treasury and an enormous public debt. Vizier Ali, his supposed son, ascended the throne; but the spuriousness of his birth being shortly after established, he was deposed, and removed to Benares. Here he murdered Mr. Cherry, the British resident, and ended his days a prisoner at Fort William. On the deposition of Vizier Ali, Saadut Ali, a brother of Asof, and the rightful heir, was placed on the musnud. The misrule commenced by Asof continued under the reign of Saadut, and fears being entertained that the impoverished country would fail to afford the dues of the British Government, the nawaub consented to transfer a portion of his dominions in commutation of the annual subsidy previously paid for the defence of his country. The treaty concluded for this purpose bears date in 1801. By this agreement the nawaub ceded territory yielding an annual revenue of nearly a million and a half sterling. The remainder of his possessions were guaranteed to Saadut upon the express condition that he should introduce therein such a system of administration as should be conducive to the prosperity of his subjects and calculated to secure the lives and property of the inhabitants. Saadut died in 1814. The essential part of his engagement he had never performed. His attention had been otherwise engrossed. Avarice was his ruling passion, and to enable him to gratify its illimitable demands, he had rendered himself a complete adept in the art of extortion. In the thirteen years which elapsed between the conclusion of the treaty and his death, Saadut contrived to amass treasure to the amount of thirteen millions sterling, exacted from a territory which, during his reign, gave only a million and a half of revenue. Under the spendthrift and the miser the country had fared much alike; its ruin, which commenced with Asof in a reign of oppression and profusion, bid fair to be consummated by Saadut in one of parsimony and extortion. Ghazee-ood-deen, the son of Saadut, completed the renunciation of dependence upon the Mogul emperors by assuming the title of king. The change, however, brought with it no amelioration of the condition of the people. The maladministration of Ghazee-ood-deen called forth the strongest remonstrances of Lord Hastings, who had in vain urged him to reform a system so oppressive to his subjects. British troops were constantly called out for the preservation of the peace, and in the year 1820, upwards of seventy of the forts of refractory landholders were occupied and dismantled by their aid. Upon the demise of the king, in 1827, the Resident at Lucknow felt it to be his duty to report to the Government that the country had reached so miserable a state of decline, that nothing but the assumption of the administration could preserve it from utter ruin. At length, in 1831, in the reign of Nusseer-ood-deen, a crisis seemed to be impending. In that year Lord William Bentinck resolved to seek a formal interview with the king. Upon this occasion he, with due solemnity, informed his Majesty, that unless his territories were governed upon other principles than those hitherto followed, and the welfare of the people made the principal object of his administration, the precedent afforded by the principalities of the Carnatic and Tanjore would be applied to the kingdom of Oude, and its ruler would be transferred into a pensioner of state. This warning was also sent to Nusseer-ood-deen in writing. The words of Lord William appear to have fallen unheeded on the ear of Nusseer, and the more permanent record he probably never troubled himself to open. Nusseer died in 1837, without having made one effort to reform the incorrigible misgovernment under which his subjects laboured. He left his kingdom in utter confusion and anarchy, bequeathing to his uncle and successor the option of following advice which he himself had long since forgotten. How far Mahomed Ali availed himself of the opportunity, may be gathered from the following passage in a Report, dated in 1839, from Dr. Butter, an officer who enjoyed the best opportunities for making himself acquainted with the condition of the people:—

The administrative state of the country may be summed up in a few words: a sovereign regardless of his kingdom, except in so far as it supplies him with the means of personal indulgence; a minister incapable or unwilling to stay the ruin of the country; local governors, or, more properly speaking, farmers of the revenue, invested with virtually despotic powers, left almost unchecked, to gratify their rapacity and private enmities; a local army ill paid, and therefore licentious, undisciplined, and habituated to defeat; an almost absolute denial of justice in all matters civil or criminal; and an overwhelming British force distributed through the provinces to maintain the faith of an ill-judged treaty, and to preserve peace.

Mahomed died in 1842. He was succeeded by his son Umjud Alee Shah, who reigned five years, at the close of which the kingdom of Oude was represented as being "in no one respect better than it had been at any previous date." This, in point of time, brings us to the accession of the last of the Kings of Oude, the particulars of whose reign we reserve for future notice. We have thus, with one exception, adverted briefly to the character and conduct of each member of the royal line. Some of these were beardless princes, and others of riper years; some were spendthrifts, and others misers; some were imbecile, while others possessed a degree of mental power; but in spite of persuasion and remonstrance—threats and entreaties—the results in every case have been the same: oppression and extortion on the part of the government—hopelessness of redress on that of the people.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE OF INDIA.

THE examination of candidates for assistant surgeoncies, which commenced at the India House on the 12th instant, resulted in the selection and appointment of twenty-two officers to the Medical Service of the Company: their names will be found in another column. According to rumours now generally credited, the position and prospects of this branch of the service are about to be placed upon a more satisfactory footing, and surgeons and assistant-surgeons, it is believed, will be entitled to increased allowances after stated periods of service. In connection with the subject, we would draw attention to the intelligence received from India by the last Mail, of a contemplated change in the higher appointments of the Medical Service. The several medical boards, it is said, are to be abolished, and in their place there is to be a director-general at each of the three presidencies. The director-general at Calcutta will exercise superintendence over three inspectors-general of hospitals,—one for Bengal, one for the Upper Provinces, and one for the Punjab. At Madras, and also at Bombay, the director-general will have the aid of but one inspector-general.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

IN our impression of the 17th December last we informed our readers that measures would shortly be taken for establishing a line of telegraphic communication between Europe and India, through Asiatic Turkey, by the valley of the Euphrates and the Persian Gulf. We then stated, that the duty of constructing the line to the Turkish dominions would devolve upon her Majesty's Government, that a company, formed for the purpose, would continue the communication to Korna at the confluence of the Euphrates and Tigris, and that the East-India Company would complete the work by laying down a cable from that point along the Persian Gulf to Kurrachee. The first step was to make such terms with the Telegraph Company as would induce the public in this country to subscribe capital for the purpose, and we are glad to find that these have now been determined upon. The British Government and the East-India Company have agreed, from the date of the completion of the line from Seleucia to Korna, to pay the sum of £12,000 annually, or so much of it as shall be necessary to make up, with the other receipts of the company, a dividend of 6 per cent. on the capital; but that, if the value of the work performed by the Telegraph Company for the Government and the East-India Company shall exceed £12,000 per annum, such excess shall also be defrayed. It is further stipulated, that if the dividends of the Telegraph Company exceed 12 per cent. per annum, the Government and the East-India Company are to have the power of lowering the rates, but not to such an extent as shall reduce the dividends below 12 per cent. This arrangement is to remain in operation for twenty-five years from the completion of the line. A Government supervision is also to be provided.

THE LATE MR. STARK.

WE regret to have to announce the death of Hugh Stark, Esq., late assistant secretary at the India Board, which took place on the 28th inst., and was caused, we understand, by apoplexy. Mr. Stark retired from public life a short time since, after a service of fifty years, and had always insured by his abilities and frank bearing the respect and esteem of those with whom he associated. We are informed that, up to the last, Mr. Stark, notwithstanding his retirement, continued to afford to the department over which he formerly presided the benefit of his matured experience and sound advice.

HINDU MEMORY.—There is a general inclination to treat the scholastic merits Bengalee pupils with contempt, because they generally show a powerful memory; and even the Hurkaru, which has always promulgated sound views on Indian education speaks of this quality in Bengalee boys in an apologetic tone. Nothing is a surer sign of sound mental health than a powerful memory, and that, like other faculties, needs cultivation to acquire strength.—Hindoo Patriot.

EAST-INDIA SHIPPING.

From the East-India and China Association's "Comparative Statement of the Number of Ships Entered Inwards and Cleared Outwards, from and to Places within the Limits of the East-India Company's Charter, from the 1st of January to 30th December, 1855 and 1856," we ascertain the following results:—

VESSELS ENTERED INWARDS FROM CALCUTTA, MADRAS, BOMBAY, CHINA, &c., IN 1855 AND 1856:—

The total net increase of vessels cleared outward is 84 vessels and 96,942 tons. The principal departures were for Bombay, China, New South Wales, and the Cape of Good Hope.

APPOINTMENTS.—(Downing Street, Jan. 16.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Rev. George McIlvaine to be minister of the Church of Scotland in the island of Mauritius, and W. Allan, Esq., to be chief clerk in the colonial treasurer's office in that island.

THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY have given public denial to a report (which originally emanated from India) that they had any intention to annex the Rajpootana states. The rumour of the annexation was copied into our last number from the Bombay Telegraph and Courier.

A BANQUET on a grand scale was given on the 20th inst. by the Queen of Oude, at Hawley House, to the Chairman, Deputy-Chairman, and Court of Directors of the Hon. East-India Company.

PENSION TO MRS. THOMPSON.—The Court of Directors has granted a pension of 100*l.* per annum to Mrs. Thompson, the mother of the late Lieut. H. L. Thompson, who so gallantly contributed to the defence of Kara.

MOVEMENT OF CAVALRY TROOPS.—It is understood that the 2nd Dragoon Guards are to relieve the 14th Light Dragoons in India, and the 3rd Dragoon Guards will relieve the 9th Lancers. The practice formerly in vogue of merely sending out light cavalry regiments to India has been abandoned.

THE PERSIAN AMBASSADOR, FEROUK KHAN, with his suite, comprising more than twenty persons, including councillors, dragoman, secretaries, writers, and doctors, have arrived in Paris. Six magnificent horses have also arrived, presents from the Shah to the Emperor. It is stated that, at an interview which Ferouk Khan had with the Emperor, his Majesty expressed his extreme regret that there should be war between Persia and Great Britain.

A COLOSSAL EQUESTRIAN STATUE of the late Lord Hardinge has just been executed for Calcutta. Shortly after the battles of the Sutlej a subscription was set on foot in India to raise a statue to the honour of the Governor-General, and a sufficient sum having been realised, Mr. Foley, R.A., was entrusted with the commission. The horse is modelled from Lord Hardinge's favourite charger Manee, which carried him through several Indian battles. The rider is represented in the act of restraining its impetuosity, that he may calmly survey some military operations. A portion of a shattered cannon under the horse's feet indicate the nature of the scene in which he is engaged.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—At the meeting on Monday, the 26th inst., the following papers were read:—1. Notes on the Geography of Burmah, with a new map of the same, by Captain Yule, of the Bengal Engineers; communicated by Sir Roderick I. Murchison. 2. Journey across the Kuenlun from Ladak to Khotan, by Messrs. H. and R. Schlagintweit; communicated by Colonel W. H. Sykes.

THE LAST ARRIVAL OF SILK FROM CHINA (14,694 bales) amounted to an aggregate value of about 1,500,000*l*.

M. DE BOURBOLON, French minister to China, who was in Paris on leave of absence, has left for his post.

AN ADDRESS from Newcastle has been presented to her Majesty against the invasion of Persia.

MADAME IDA PFEIFFER, the celebrated traveller, has again arrived at Cape Town, and intends proceeding to Madagascar, via Mauritius.

THE WILL OF JAMES MEADOWS RENDEL, F.R.S., of Kensington Palace Gardens, has just been proved under 100,000*l*. Lieut.-Gen. Thomas Morgan, Hon. E.I.C., 20,000*l*.

THE HON. WILLIAM LE POER TRENCH, R.E., is proceeding to Ceylon, where he proposes to remain two years, and then go on to the Mauritius and Hong-Kong; his aggregate sojourn in the East to be seven years.

LORD GOUGH.—It is stated that the veteran Lord Gough has purchased from the representatives of the late Mr. V. Knox the whole of the property bought by them in the Encumbered Estates Court from Lord Gort, which comprises most of the town of Gort and the land connecting it with the extensive demesne of Lough-cooter.

LIEUT. J. C. PATERSON, late of the 2nd B. E. regiment, is likely, we hear, to be allowed a pension by the Honorable Company. The circumstances under which this officer was dismissed the service were very peculiar, and it was generally supposed at the time that his case would be favourably received when brought under the notice of the Court of Directors.—Grindley's Home News.

THE BOMBARDMENT OF CANTON.—At a public meeting on this subject, held in the Music-hall at Birmingham, on Monday, Jan. 19th, a letter was read from Lord Lyttelton, in which his Lordship states his inability to justify the proceedings of Admiral Seymour and Sir John Bowring in China. A petition against the war, for presentation to Parliament, was resolved upon by the meeting.

INVESTITURE OF KNIGHTS.—The Queen held an Investiture of the Most Hon. Order of the Bath at Windsor Castle on the 24th inst. The following were invested as K.C.B.'s:—Rear-Admiral C. Elliot (civil), Hon. J. D. Bligh (civil), J. F. Cramp-ton (civil), Lieut.-Gen. F. B. Auchmuty, Lieut.-Gen. N. Thorn, Rear-Admiral C. H. Fremantle, Rear-Admiral Hon. F. W. Grey, Col. H. K. Stocks, Lieut.-Gen. G. P. Wymer, Major Gen. R. J. Hussey Vivian.

A Bonus of Twenty per cent. from realized profits has been declared for the present year to all policy-holders on the profit scale who have paid five years' premium.

The advantages of this Society are as follow:—

Low Rates of Premium, calculated on the best and most recent investigations of mortality in India.

Annual participation in the profits after payment of premium for five years, by parties assured on the profit scale.

Immediate reduction of premium to the English rates in the case of a party assured proceeding to Europe for a permanency, and reduction after one year in the case of the party visiting Europe for a short period.

The civil rate only charged on the lives of parties in the military service, holding civil offices, as long as they continue in such office.

The Society also grants Deferred Annuities and Endowments payable at any given period.

Tables and full information may be had at the Office in Chatham Place; or on application to the Secretaries at Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or to the Agents of the Agra and United Service Bank, at the other Indian Presidencies.

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICAL STATISTICS.—Wm. Farr, Esq., M.D., F.R.S.

By the Annual Report of 1853, it appeared that the number of Policies then in force was 3,434, insuring £1,337,500, and yielding an income of £55,207.

At the FIFTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING, held on the 27th November, 1856, it was shown that on the 30th June last:—

The number of Policies in force was 5,739

The Amount Insured was £2,762,197 7s. 2d.

The Annual Income was £118,557 10s. 2d.

Two Bonuses have been declared (in 1848 and 1853), adding nearly 2 per cent. per annum on the average to sums assured, and by which a Policy of £1,000, issued in 1842 on a healthy life, is now increased to £1,200.

Since the last Division of Profits in 1853, the accumulated funds have increased by more than £105,000, offering considerable advantages to present assureds.

Profits divided every five years—next division in 1858.

The Society has paid claims on 651 Policies, assuring £251,009 since its establishment in 1841.

Premiums for India have been computed on the actual results of European life in that colony, extending over the whole period of the East-India Company's experience, and will be found generally lower than those of other Companies, and especially favourable for military men.

Civil rates charged on the lives of military officers holding civil appointments, for the term of such appointments.

Immediate reduction to English rates on the assured returning to Europe permanently to reside.

Policies may be made payable either in London or in India, at the rate of Two Shillings sterling per Company's Rupee.

GENERAL ADVANTAGES.

Assurances are effected at home or abroad on Healthy Lives at as moderate rates as the most recent data will allow.

No extra Premium is required on Healthy Lives in the Army or Navy unless in actual service.

The Policies issued by this Society give greater facilities to parties going to or residing in Foreign Climates than those of most other Companies.

Invalid Lives assured on scientifically-constructed tables based on extensive data, and a reduction in the Premium is made when the cause for an increased rate of Premium have ceased.

Policies issued free of stamp-duty and every other charge, except the Premium.

Medical men are paid a guinea for each report, and receive the same advantages as solicitors for any business they may introduce.

Notices of Assignment are registered and acknowledged without charge.

Assureds incur no risk of co-partnership as in Mutual Offices, but are free from all liability.

A Capital of Half a Million sterling, fully subscribed (in addition to a large income and accumulated assets), affords a complete guarantee for the fulfilment of the Company's engagements.

AGENTS WANTED IN VACANT PLACES.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA AND CHINA.

MAP OF INDIA;

Showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this Map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the Map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP OF INDIA;

Compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by Order of the Honourable East-India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or with rollers, and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP OF INDIA:

From the most recent Authorities. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or on cloth, in a case, £1. 1s.

MAP OF THE

ROUTES IN INDIA;

With Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size, 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this Map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies.

A MAP OF THE

WESTERN PROVINCES OF HINDOOSTAN;
THE PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c.
INCLUDING ALL THE STATES BETWEEN CANDAHAR AND ALLAHABAD.

On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or on cloth, in a case, £2; or on rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP OF INDIA AND CHINA,

BURMAH, SIAM,

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS matchless remedies for Invererate Ulcers.—Mrs. Anne Edwards, of Gloucester, was a great sufferer for nearly twelve years with several obstinate ulcers in the legs, accompanied with a continual and preternatural discharge, corrupting the entire system, resulting every mode of treatment devised by her medical attendants and others of the faculty. Having heard of the numerous cures effected by Holloway's Pills and Ointment, she was induced to give them a trial, and to the astonishment of herself and friends was quickly and soundly cured.

Sold by all Medicine Vendors, and at PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY'S Establishments, 249, Strand, London, and 80, Maiden Lane, New York; by A. St.amps, Constantinople; A. Guidice, Smyrna; F. Muir, Malta; and by all European and Native Vendors of Medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

TO GENTLEMEN WITH TENDER FEET.

J. CHAPPELL, 388, STRAND, LONDON, BOOT-MAKER, and Professor of Fitting; Successor to the celebrated Mr. B. Smith, late of Great Queen Street, begs to call the attention of such to his method of measuring, by which he guarantees to produce a PERFECT FIT AT FIRST TRIAL, combining comfort with a gentlemanly form. J. C. particularly solicits those gentlemen who despair of obtaining comfortable Boots, as from his great success and consequent increase of business, he is confident of their becoming regular customers. The leather used is dressed so as not to draw the feet or become hard in wear, although it requires blacking in the ordinary way. Established 1825.

WATCH, CLOCK, AND CHRONOMETER MANUFACTORY,

33 AND 34, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON. ESTABLISHED 1749.

J. W. BENSON, MANUFACTURER OF GOLD and SILVER WATCHES of every description, construction, and pattern, invites attention to his magnificent and unprecedented display of Watches, which is admitted to be the largest and best selected Stock in London. It consists of Chronometer, Duplex, Patent Detached Lever, Horizontal, and Vertical Movements, Jewelled, &c., with all the latest improvements, mounted in superbly-finished engine-turned and engraved Gold and Silver Cases. The designs engraved upon many of the cases are by eminent artists, and can only be obtained at this manufactory. If the important requisites, superiority of finish, combined with accuracy of performance, elegance, durability, and reasonableness of price, are wished for, the intending purchaser should visit this Manufactory, or send for the ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, published by J. W. BENSON (and sent post-free on application), which contains sketches, prices, and directions as to what Watch to buy, where to buy it, and how to use it. Several hundred letters have been received from persons who have bought Watches at this Manufactory, bearing testimony to the correct performance of the same. The following extracts from the opinions of the Press will, it is hoped, be a sufficient guarantee to the public that they may secure at this House a good Watch at a reasonable price:—

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

By the present Mail, which brings intelligence from Bushire to the 30th December, we learn that the capture of the town had not resulted in the termination of hostilities. Up to that date no attempt had been made by the enemy to recapture the place; but a force of twelve to fifteen thousand Persians was said to be in the neighbourhood, contemplating an attack on the British troops encamped near the city. The position of the British is considered secure, and probably nothing more is intended on the part of the enemy than a demonstration of force. The Shah is well aware that a favourable adjustment of the differences which exist between himself and his invaders is more likely to be effected in the closet than in the field, and his ambassador, Ferook Khan, has doubtless been vested with full powers to concede every reasonable demand to the British Government. The health of the troops is stated to be generally good; the men who, in the first instance, were affected by the brackish water, having quickly recovered, upon the discovery of a purer supply. No inconvenience had been experienced from the climate, the thermometer by day not exceeding eighty degrees, though the cold at night was considered severe, the range being as low as forty degrees. Energetic preparations had been made at Bombay for the organization of a second division for service in Persia, to be forthwith despatched in the steamers and transports which were daily returning from the Gulf. The command of this division had been given to Brigadier-General Havelock, brother to the officer who fell in the charge of the 14th at Ranonuggur. This division consists of two brigades, the first being composed of the 78th Highlanders and the 26th regiment of native infantry; and the second comprising the 23rd native infantry and a battalion formed of the light companies of sundry regiments not ordered on service. The first division of the expeditionary force had been placed under the command of General Stalker, the entire force being combined under the command of Lieutenant-General Sir James Outram. General Orders remodelling the staff of the whole force, will be found in another column. The cavalry, which was to be augmented by two corps, the 14th light dragoons and the 1st Scinde horse, had been placed under the command of Colonel Jacob, Colonels Tapp and Steuart, of the 14th, commanding the two brigades. The artillery reinforcements consisted of a field-battery from Sholapore, and the fourth troop of horse artillery from Kurrachee. A land-transport corps had also been organized, and every effort was being made to insure its efficiency. In addition to the troops about to be immediately despatched to Bushire, and which in the aggregate would amount to about five thousand men, it was reported that a much larger force would follow so soon as it could be collected. General Outram and staff left for Bushire in the Semiramis, on the morning of the 16th January. Sir Henry Leeke had returned to Bombay a few days before in the Assaye.

Turning to the north-west frontier, we find that Dost Mahomed, the ruler of Cabul, arrived at Jumrood, in the Peshawur valley, on the 1st of January, and was for some days the guest of Sir John Lawrence; but although several interviews had taken place between the Chief Commissioner and his visitor, the nature of the communications had not transpired. Sir John Lawrence had been for some time expecting the arrival of the Dost, and, on being warned of his approach, despatched a considerable force into the Khyber Pass to escort him to the British dominions. The meeting at Jumrood was not devoid of interest. A miniature army, consisting of two troops of horse artillery, two field batteries, a mountain-train, the 51st light cavalry, with three regiments of irregulars and six regiments of infantry, formed a street from the Commissioner's tent to the Dost's camp. As the Afghan cavalcade moved onward, Colonel Edwardes, with other military officers, advanced to meet it. At the head of the cavalcade rode Nawaub Syadut, Khan of Lalpoora. Immediately behind him was the ruler of Cabul, dressed in a plain, shabby, dingy, mud-coloured "choga,"—the Dost himself looking much worn and haggard. He is described as being about seventy years of age, with a long beard dyed a deep black. His body-guard consisted of about fifty soldiers irregularly armed; and behind the cortège, in a litter slung between two ponies, sat the ex-king of Balkh, a prisoner of the Dost. Arrived at the darbar, Dost Mahomed was received with a royal salute, the royal anthem being played by the regimental bands. The troops then passed in review, and the Commissioner and the Dost proceeded to business.

Intelligence from Hongkong to the 30th December states that all the foreign buildings at Canton had been burned and pillaged. The fire commenced on the 14th; but as all the particulars have been already given in minute detail in our Summary of the 30th January, it is unnecessary to give them further notice. We then stated that the discharge of rockets and shells into the city of Canton had already commenced, and little of moment appears to have subsequently taken place except some firing into the city from the fort designated the "Dutch Folly." At the latest date Admiral Seymour had desisted from active hostilities, and was busily engaged in strengthening his position. Rumours from the north were afloat that Yeh had been superseded, and that the incoming High Imperial Commissioner had full liberty to admit the British within the city. Little credit, however, was accorded to these rumours. An incident displaying the disposition of the Chinese to reprisal, was an attack upon the river postal-steamer Thistle, by a fleet of one hundred junks, in three divisions. The subjoined particulars are from the China Mail of the 25th December:—"The Thistle, with the lorch Anonyma, full of valuable bale-goods in tow, had reached the neighbourhood of Second Bar about ten o'clock on Monday night, when she was fired upon by a large number of junks anchored in line. Captain Weiland, at great risk of himself, had the crew of the Anonyma taken on board the steamer, and the lorch cast adrift. He then took the wheel himself, the pilots having hid themselves below, and ran the gauntlet past the other two divisions of war-junks—his vessel being completely riddled by their shot, three Chinese killed, and two dangerously wounded. On arrival at the Bogue, he communicated with the Nankin, and had the wounded men attended to by one of the naval surgeons. About a mile and a half further down, he met the Shamrock, and warned Captain Wood of the danger awaiting him; the Sir Charles Forbes, with a coal-boat in tow, was also hailed; and both steamers came to anchor for the night off the Nankin; whence the Shamrock, having no armament on board, returned to Hongkong; the Forbes, being well armed, proceeding up the river next forenoon. Some fears were entertained for the Queen, which left Canton an hour after the Shamrock; but Captain Campbell, on being fired at, wisely put about, and returned to Canton for the night."

There is also reason to fear that the British lorch Alma has been captured by the Chinese, who are reported to have barbarously murdered the master and owner, Julius Hannibal. In addition to these outrages, a daring and successful attempt at kidnapping had been made upon Mr. William Cowper, of Whampoa, an old man of about sixty-five years of age, who was seized on the gangway, close to his own residence, and borne off to a mandarin-boat by half a dozen boatmen. As soon as the news reached Canton, Admiral Seymour and Consul Parkes sent for Howqua, who, after inquiry, said Mr. Cowper had not been taken to Canton. Mr. Parkes went himself to Whampoa to push his inquiries, and succeeded in securing the persons of three of the elders of that place; one of them, the East-India Company's old comprador, who engaged to find and return Mr. Cowper, if alive. Some display of ill-feeling towards foreigners had taken place at the ports of Amoy and Foochowfoo, but it was not supposed that the differences at Canton would lead to a disturbance of trade further north than Amoy. Amoy—other reports it was rumoured that the Chinese were even threatening an attack upon Hongkong.

The scheme for the establishment of universities in the presidency towns, prepared in conformity with the Educational Dispatch of July, 1854, has been promulgated. As regards Calcutta, the Governor-General is the Chancellor; Sir J. W. Colville, the Chief Justice, the Vice-Chancellor; and twenty-nine fellows, of all creeds and professions, have been nominated to the Senate. The Vice-Chancellor and fellows of the Madras and Bombay universities will be appointed by Governors in Council of those presidencies respectively.

The utmost tranquillity prevails over the whole of India; and beyond the demise of Mr. Bushby, the Resident at the court of the Nizam at Hyderabad, there is little worthy of notice.

THE PENAL CODE.—WHAT IS IT?

The history of the penal code is the history of most Indian improvements. Ordered by the Charter Act of 1833, it was intrusted to some of the ablest men who have ever been employed in India. Their chief, Mr. Macaulay, has since attained a reputation which has blotted his Indian achievements from the memory of his countrymen. The code, however, was mainly his work, and seems likely to endure at least as long as those by which he is known in literature. On its appearance, however, it was fiercely tried. The novel arrangement of definitions and illustrations displeased lawyers, accustomed to rigid precedent. The subjection of all classes to one and the same law displeased the Europeans. The Press regulations displeased, we believe, every one whom they were intended to affect. The code, therefore, was suffered to sleep. It was referred from authority to authority, from India to Europe, from Europe to India, till the generation which had expected it, and was interested in its success, died gradually away. At last the existing evil became intolerable. The laws and constructions offered perpetual loopholes for the escape of crime. No man could tell what was murder, or who was liable for perjury; the decisions of the Sudder became more and more obviously absurd; the Black Act was defeated by the horror all Europeans entertain of that tribunal; and the code was once more placed upon the anvil. Mr. Bethune undertook the task of revision. But Mr. Bethune's schemes seldom produced results. The code was shuttlecocked from country to country—from department to department, from the India House to the Council, and the Council to the Legislative Member. It was "referred," and "considered," and "revised," and "amended," and "annotated," and "discussed," and "submitted" and "sat upon in Committee," and, in short, everything, except passed. It was not till the creation of an open Legislative Council that there appeared any reasonable prospect of its becoming law. Mr. Peacock then took it in hand, and devoted to it an attention which will earn for him as a law reformer the respect not always bestowed on the administrator. The action of the law commission at home perhaps accelerated his labours, and after one or two more references the Code began to march. Delayed for three-and-twenty years, opposed and ridiculed, impeded by official forms, by legal prejudices, and by popular dislike, it has retained sufficient vitality to pass its second reading. It will probably be May before it passes into law. It may still be materially modified, but it is time to examine what it really is—a subject the present generation knows only by tradition.

It is substantially Macaulay's Code. Four chapters on illegal entrance into India, on offences relating to the Revenue, on offences relating to the Press, and on the illegal pursuit of legal right, have been altogether omitted. They are to be supplied apparently by special enactments, an arrangement which appears to impair the Code from its very formation. Its first object is to limit the number of such Acts, to make them as far as possible unnecessary and superfluous. The more numerous the subjects excepted from the Code, the more necessity for a patchwork legislation. Numbers of clauses also have been omitted, generally those in which the framers, yielding to the great temptation of speculative jurists, attempted to refine too far. Very many other clauses have been modified. The minimum of punishment fixed by the Code has been removed, and left to the discretion of the judge.

For the rest the code retains its well-known form. Every crime, or grade of crime, is first defined. The exceptions then follow, usually somewhat minute, and last comes the maximum penalty to be awarded. All the definitions which may be considered obscure are explained by illustrations, which will take the place and serve the purpose of authoritative precedents. These definitions and punishments apply to every class, and will be used by every court throughout the empire. From the date of the passing of the Act there will be no English and no regulation law in criminal matters. The act which committed by a Hindoo is a crime, will be a crime in the Englishman also. There are no exemptions, the treaty rights of native princes being guarded, we may presume, by the code of procedure. There is no distinction between Crown or Company's Courts, or between regulation and non-regulation provinces. All are reduced apparently to one dead level before the law. The code leaves a tabula rasa, though the fact is not, so far as we can perceive, stated in any portion of the volume. With its clear definitions the code supplies the place of that common law which India has so long required.

In the place of the Koran, of the English common law, and of the Sudder's attempts to define crime, we have a body of law which will not occupy 100 octavo pages, and might almost be committed to memory. It is not difficult to understand the immediate effect of such a change. There is not a judge or magistrate in the country who will not on its publication feel himself at once relieved of a load of responsibility. The immediate labour saved is no light boon. It is, however, trifling when compared with the relief which will be afforded by the intelligibility of the law. Instead, for instance, of fifty pages of definitions all tending to narrow the crime of perjury, and many of them contradictory, we have a page and a half which it is impossible to misunderstand. Instead of two or three Acts intended to catch associated murderers, we have the following sentence, which the culprits at all events will not consider deficient in pith or clearness:—"Whoever is habitually associated with any other or others for the purpose of committing robbery or child stealing, by means of or accompanied with murder, is a Thug. Whoever is a Thug shall be punished with transportation for life." There is not a man of ordinary capacity who may not in a month learn to understand his rights, and his obligations in the matter of criminal justice. The code may be taught in any school, or form part of the education of any lad, without abstracting undue time from equally important studies. In a few years the confused ideas current among the native population may give place to a set of principles which, accurate or otherwise, are at least definite and intelligible. The publication of the code will be an era in the administration of justice in India.

We say this without forgetting that the code is only a foundation. From the moment it is passed, Acts will be almost as numerous as before. The Sudder will still attempt to expound, and its expositions will probably be as ludicrous as they have always been. There never yet was a form of words which could include every imaginable case. There never yet was a command so clear that lawyers and theologians could not pervert its meaning. But still we have a new foundation. We build on the plain instead of the old ruin, and it is not impossible to make the new architecture symmetrical. It would not be difficult to make every Act fit into the code either as an explanation, an exception, an illustration, or a supplement. The Sudder may construe as they like, but the judge with a clear definition before him is not bound to interpret it by their authority. Even in the wide margin which is left open to their interference, there is hope. The Sudder cannot endure for ever, and its extinction will be hastened by that of the system of law to which it owes its existence. The Sudder extinct, and the legislature moderate, and we may keep for years the short and simple law we have at last secured.

THE PENAL CODE.—ITS PROVISIONS.

It is, of course, impossible for us to attempt to review in detail the provisions of the code; we content ourselves, therefore, with adverting to the chapters which introduce new principles, or remedy the most glaring defects of the existing law. It will, we think, be found that the code is in every instance a material advance upon the existing system:—

1. Perjury.—At present we can scarcely be said to have any law of perjury at all. Such a crime, it is true, is admitted to exist, but it is refined away till it is scarcely possible even for a native actually to commit the offence. The false witness must be deliberate and intentional. It must be given on a point material to the issue. It must be given to an officer qualified to administer an oath. That officer must be in the room. It must be detected before it has been successful, otherwise no action will lie. Lastly, it must be committed in a case which the darogah has not previously condoned. We say nothing of the impediments to justice presented by the existing procedure. Those we have quoted are only the impediments purposely created by the Sudder Court in its definition of the crime. The code defines it thus:—

“Whoever intentionally gives false evidence in any stage of a judicial proceeding, touching any point material to the result of that proceeding, or gives or fabricates false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of a judicial proceeding, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and whoever intentionally gives or fabricates false evidence in any other case shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.”

The “explanations” enlarge rather than restrict this definition. Thus, by explanation two perjuries may be committed during a preliminary proceeding, though not before a Court of Justice. Moreover, if the object of the false witness is to cause the conviction of another person,—the most common form of Indian perjury—the criminal is liable to the penalty the accused, if convicted, would have undergone. Provided that such punishment shall not exceed seven years’ transportation. If under the code of procedure the penalty can be inflicted then and there, the law leaves us nothing to desire. It is impossible to escape from the definition without overriding it altogether. If the evidence is not material to the issue, still it is to be “used at some stage of a judicial proceeding.” If it is not to be so used, still the phrase, “in any other case,” will bring the criminal within the law. Whether the officer be legally qualified or not, whether he signed the deposition or not, does not appear to signify one jot. The perjurer will be punished, the sole though forgotten object of a law of perjury.

2. Murder. The inherent tendency of Anglo-Indian jurists to narrow the definition of this crime is apparent even in the Code. The crime is thus defined:—

“Except in the cases hereinafter excepted, culpable homicide is murder if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death; or—

“2ndly. If it is done with the intention of causing such bodily injury as the offender knows to be likely to cause the death of the person to whom the harm is caused; or—

“3rdly. If it is done with the intention of causing bodily injury to any person, and the bodily harm intended to be inflicted is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death; or—

“4thly. If the person committing the act knows that it is so imminently dangerous that it must in all probability cause death or such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, and commits such act without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as aforesaid, and under circumstances which indicate a depraved mind regardless of human life.”

The third clause will, we imagine, include all whom the Sudder Court has hitherto endeavoured to exclude. A lattial, for instance, who in an affray puts another lattial to death, will apparently be guilty of murder. Indeed, this act is so defined in the annexed illustration. The legislature only shrinks from the simple declaration that a death inflicted in furtherance of an illegal act is murder. By the next step, however, it has obviated one source of laxity in the administration of the laws. The penalties for murder are death and transportation for life. There is no liberty of choice given to the judge. The Sudder cannot find a criminal guilty of murder yet suffer him to escape with the punishment of burglary. The law is like fate, and the criminal must suffer for his crime, undisturbed by the caprices of those who try him.

3. The same reluctance to lay down an absolute principle is manifest in the chapter on self-defence. The law on this subject has long been the opprobrium of Indian legislation. In a country where the police affords no protection, and where every man of property sleeps with armed servants round his house, the right of self-defence has been reduced to a nullity. A man cannot kill a dacoit without danger of imprisonment. He cannot resist a thief, or prevent the forcible entry of his house by the use of fire-arms. He cannot even, we imagine, resist when actually assaulted, if his resistance involves the death of the assailants. The Code sweeps away all these absurdities. The right of self-defence extends to the voluntary causing of death, whenever there is reasonable ground to expect grievous hurt, or illegal imprisonment away from the cognizance of courts of justice. That is, we believe, the definition approved by the instinctive sense of Englishmen. It amounts to this, that in an ordinary assault a man may defend himself the best way he can, the use of the revolver excepted. In defence of property he may go much further, may slay if necessary to prevent robbery, dacoity, or lurking house trespass.

A burglar may be shot dead, a regulation which when once understood will do more to check burglary than any improved police. Furthermore, a man attacked by a mob may fire if he runs the risk of taking innocent life. Such cases are not unfrequent in India, and we believe the assailed party has hitherto been compelled to take his choice between death by club law and transportation for life. The instinctive sense of mankind sometimes overcomes even the Sudder, and men in such circumstances always fight. That fact does not relieve the existing law of the charge of gross injustice.

4. Dacoity. The provisions of this section are remarkable for their clearness and severity. Any robbery committed by more than five persons is declared to be a dacoit, punishable with transportation for life, or rigorous imprisonment for not less than seven years. If, in the course of the dacoity, one man commit a murder, all shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, or rigorous imprisonment for fourteen years. If the actual offender is armed with a lethal weapon, his punishment cannot be less than five years’ imprisonment. Lastly, “whoever belongs to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoities shall be punished with transportation for life,” or imprisonment for not less than seven years. The punishments are all over-lenient, a fault which runs through the Code; but they are distinct, and the judges are deprived of the power of abrogating them by a preposterous clemency.

5. The same remarks will apply to the new law of Affray. It is distinct, and provides for every variety of offence common in Bengal, but it is somewhat over lenient. The collection of any five persons together for the purpose of seizing property, or debarring anyone from the exercise of his right, is an unlawful assembly. Every member thereof is liable, if armed, to three years’ imprisonment. He is also liable for any offence committed by any other member of the assembly. Moreover, and this is the pith of the new law:—

“Whenever a riot is committed for the benefit or on behalf of any person who is the owner or occupier of the land upon which such riot takes place, or who claims any interest in the subject of any dispute which gave rise to the riot, or who has accepted or derived any therefrom, such person shall be punishable with fine.”

Had the punishment been seven years’ transportation, instead of a fine, the law would have finally suppressed Affrays. The fine, it is true, is distinctly declared to be limited only by the discretion of the judge, but few judges will venture to inflict the fines which would alone meet the justice of the case. A powerful zemindar will pay twenty, or even fifty thousand rupees willingly for the pleasure of plundering an adversary of half an acre of land. He would not so readily face an inevitable imprisonment. Nor will the law which restricts the engagement of lattials be much more operative. Whoever engages a lattial for an affray is liable to two years’ imprisonment, and the lattial himself to six months. But who is to prove the purpose for which he is engaged? The next clause, it is true, if executed with the necessary severity, would prevent the practice by disarming the entire population.

Whoever being so engaged or hired goes armed, or offers to go armed, shall be punished with two years’ imprisonment. In practice we suspect the courts will always listen to evidence in support of the honesty of the purpose for which arms are carried. The law, however, recognises the true principle. The landholder is to be punished as well as his victim. The man who, sitting at his case in Calcutta, orders his retainers to plunder a bazaar, is not to be exempted from retribution by his own cowardice. It is true, the penalty is but a fine, but the root of the evil has at last been struck.

We had intended to make some observations on the new rules for trespass, the loosely-worded law of treason, and the new law of libel or defamation. Our remarks, however, have extended to too great a length, and we must pass on to the one portion of the Code which introduces into a law applicable to Europeans, a principle at variance with that of England. The legislative council has yielded to the universal feeling of the East, and rendered adultery a penal offence. It has, moreover, done this in a manner at variance with all ordinary ideas of legislation. It has not declared adultery a crime, for it punishes the man alone, and leaves the husband the sole prosecutor. The woman is left to the social penalty which, in Europe at least, totally outweighs any direct punishment humanity would suffer us to inflict. We believe that the legislature has acted wisely.

Of the feeling of Asiatics there can be no doubt whatever. From Peshawar to Berar it is the universal complaint that the British rule relaxes the household bond. We will neither protect the husband nor suffer him to protect himself. The remedy now proposed is sufficient to meet the evil. The wife is not dragged into court. The seducer is severely punished, and those two provisions meet precisely the native ideas of decency and justice. We cannot believe that they will be opposed by the Europeans. The English system, which sprang essentially from the idea that adultery is an ecclesiastical offence, was mitigated till lately by the universal right of duel. That practice is abolished, and with its disuse has arisen the necessity for a more stringent legal protection. None can be more efficient, or in practice more just, than a moderate term of imprisonment. It involves exactly that utter social ruin to the seducer, which society already inflicts upon the seduced. The man who regards neither the law of God, the loss of money, nor the chance—for it is no more—of a challenge, will often shrink from a five years' association with common felons. The law carries with it the sympathy of every native of India. To exempt the European is deliberately to proclaim ourselves less moral than the races whose dissoluteness we habitually despise.—Friend of India.

THE LONDON MAIL, of Nov. 26th, arrived at Calcutta, Jan. 2nd (per Bentinck).

IRRIGATION AT INDORE.—The Englishman is informed that the Government of India has called for a further report on the subject of works of irrigation at Indore, it being desirable to take at a moderate outlay any measures which will increase the revenues of the pergunnah, as Government is bound to pay annually to the Durbar Co.'s Rs. 1,10,000, which is considerably in excess of the revenue at present derived.

SIR ARCHIBALD BOGLE lately suggested to Government the expediency of building a steamer to run between Moulmein and Shwee-Grreen, a distance of 150 miles. The idea was at first approved of; but it has been found, on inquiry, that the Gulf of Martaban cannot be navigated safely by small steamers, and it is only small steamers that can ascend the Sitang river to Shwee-Grreen.

RUMOURS.—A Simla correspondent of the Englishman mentions a rumour that Goolab Sing is laying in supplies and stores of all kinds, and that the Rajah of Putealah is following his example. Both reports are probably about as well founded as the late story as a confederation of Rajpoot chiefs. Goolab Sing is not likely to give us so excellent an opportunity of correcting the mistake of 1846, and the Rajah of Putealah knows that his political existence depends on his good behaviour.

AFGHANISTAN.—According to the Delhi Gazette, Sir John Lawrence has written to Government that he would not under any circumstances advance into Afghanistan with less than 70,000 men. Sir George Pollock went with less than 15,000. Those who believe that Sir George Pollock had five times the nerve of Sir John Lawrence will believe this story.

COMMERCIAL PROGRESS OF THE TENASSERIM PROVINCES.—The Moulmein Advertiser gives a satisfactory account of the commercial progress of the Tenasserim Provinces. Ship-building which had been entirely suspended for three years, has been vigorously resumed; one vessel, 1,400 tons, has just been launched, and there are three others on the stocks. The imports have increased from Rs. 14,74,000 in 1838-39 to Rs. 22,16,000 in 1855-56, and the imports for the first six months of the current year 1856-57 amount to no less than Rs. 31,76,000. Regarding exports we have no facts except that the shipments of rice are increasing. The tonnage of the provinces has increased since last year, outward from 52,337 to 81,241 tons, and inward from 29,614 to 72,645 tons. A steam sawmill has arrived from Glasgow, and the timber trade is looking up.

A SURVEY OF THE CHANNEL OF THE MATABANGAH has just been made by Captains Lane and Taylor. They report that three feet six inches is the minimum depth of water, and that the current which runs in from the Ganges is strong enough to keep the channel open all the year round.

THE GOVERNMENT "ANNA A MILE" TRAIN is to be extended immediately to the road between Cawnpore and Lucknow, running twice a day. These carts, carrying if necessary eight men, are pulled by a single horse, at the rate of eight miles an hour, and, whatever the horses may think, are one of the greatest luxuries which we have introduced into India.

THE WHOLE BRITISH NAVAL FORCE IN THE EASTERN SEAS, that is on the waters of the "East Indies, China, and Australia," was returned on the 1st of November as 27 ships, 389 guns, and 4,098 men. With but a portion of this we wage war with the three hundred millions of China.

THE RAILWAY.—The Mofussilite states that the opening of the railway at Allahabad was only a "mock opening" after all. Advantage was taken of the presence of the Lieutenant-Governor to get up a ceremony. The line from Allahabad to Cawnpore will not be open till the end of next year.

CAPTAIN DALTON is, it is reported, to be commissioner of Chota Nagpore.

LIEUTENANT BRABAZON, of the 60th N.I., has been tried by court-martial for ungentlemanly conduct at a public billiard table; found guilty on one instance of the charge, and sentenced to a severe reprimand. The charges, finding, and reprimand will be found in another column. Mr. Brabazon appears to be fortunate in his escape.

DEATH OF MR. ANDERSON.—The Phoenix announces the death of Mr. W. Anderson, for many years a broker in Calcutta. He drank off a phial of laudanum, mistaking it in the dark for lavender.

THE NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT claims a monopoly of the coasting trade of Borneo. The Dutch complain that Rajah Brooke's settlement at Sarawak was an infringement of the treaty of 1824. It was, however, passed over in consideration of the services to humanity undoubtedly rendered by the Rajah. But now that British vessels attempt to infringe the monopoly of the coasting-trade conceded to the Dutch by treaty, the Netherlands Government interfere. They say, "If England obtains participation in the coasting trade all other nations will be entitled to similar rights, and it is feared that the concession would strike a severe blow at our Indian commerce." The pretension is simply impudent.

GAS PIPES are to be laid down at once in the undermentioned streets of Calcutta:—Chowringhee-road, Dhurumtollah-street, Waterloo-street, Esplanade-row, Bow-bazar, Loll-bazar, Tank-square, Old Courthouse-street, Government-place, Councilhouse-street, Durmahatta-street, Fairlie-place, Coilah Ghat-street, Hare-street, Hastings-street, Church-lane, Mangoe-lane, and the Strand.

WIDOW MARRIAGE.—The papers at length announce the bonâ fide remarriage of a Hindoo widow of high caste. The bride is a Brahminee, a daughter of the priest of the Nuddea Rajah. The bridegroom is a Coolin Brahmin, named Shrish Chunder Surma, so that a precedent is established for Hindoos of every caste. The ceremony took place at Calcutta on the 6th December. It was rendered more remarkable by the presence of at least two thousand native guests of high caste, whose enthusiasm was not the least interesting feature in the affair. There were also thousands outside the house who could not gain admission. The ceremony was concluded "with hymns, prayers, and controversies as well as benedictions on Pundit Shrish Chunder, Lord and Lady Canning, the Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. Grant, and the Members of Council." A second marriage between Madhusodur Ghose, a Kulin Kayastha, and the daughter of Eshanchunder Mitter and widow of Krishnamohur Benerjee, all members of distinguished and high-caste families, has taken place.

MERCANTILE CHANGES.—The mercantile changes announced January 1 were not so numerous as they usually are at the beginning of the year. Mr. Frederick Althaus has retired from the house of Messrs. Wattenbach, Heilgers, and Co., and Mr. Robert Heilgers is admitted a partner. The firm of James Lyall and Co. will hereafter be known as Lyall, Rennie, and Co., with the addition of Mr. John Lyall, junior, to the company. Mr. J. J. Cogswell has joined Messrs. W. Haworth and Co., and the partners in that house, in conjunction with the members of the firm of Geo. Henderson and Co., have coalesced as proprietors of the Bally Sugar Mills. The firm of Wellington, Norlor, and Co. is dissolved, and the business will be conducted hereafter by Mr. J. Parry and Mr. G. S. Wellington, under the style of Parry and Wellington. And, finally, the Agra Bank notify the establishment of an agency at Rangoon, under the management of Mr. Henry Turner.

A MEDICAL OFFICER has at last been found who is willing to accept the principalship of the Calcutta Medical College. Dr. Kinsey, of the 2nd Europeans, is the Curtius of the occasion.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE BANK OF BENGAL have declared a dividend of 6½ per cent. on the past half-year's operations. The rate is exceedingly low, but the shareholders have received more than twelve per cent. during the year. The market is becoming tight again. The bank rates were raised one per cent. all round on the 24th December.

OUSELEY v. PLOWDEN.—The Supreme Court has at length delivered final judgment in the case of Ouseley v. Plowden. The rule for a new trial was discharged, and the original verdict for the plaintiff with Rs. 1,000 damages, confirmed.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL C. S. REID, of the artillery, has been elected deputy-governor of the military orphan society, in place of Dr. K. Mackinnon, who has resigned.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S CUP was run for, and won by Mr. Apar's Nero, beating Mercury, Meg Merrilies, Beeswing, and Diana. General Washington was entered, but did not start in consequence of having burst a blood-vessel in the former race.

GOVERNMENT has issued a stringent order forbidding its servants to impress conveyances for any purpose contrary to law.

A QUESTION OF SOME IMPORTANCE is likely soon to attract the attention of the local authorities, in respect to the boundaries of the town of Calcutta, the act having prescribed the authority of the municipal commissioners to include all places within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the supreme court, as laid down in 1794, and these limits being now doubtful in consequence of the removal of the landmarks.

THE SUDDER COURT.—We understand that Mr. H. V. Bayley and Mr. George Loch, whose appointments as officiating judges in the Sudder Court appear in the last Gazette, are to attend exclusively to the Nizamat or Criminal cases in appeal.—Bengal Hurkaru, Dec. 26.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.—We are informed that Mr. J. H. Young having declined to take the appointment of collector of customs in Calcutta, in consequence of it having been intimated to him that doing so would deprive him of claim to a commissionership, the appointment has been offered to and accepted by Mr. T. C. Loch.

RETIREMENT.—The last Gazette announced the retirement of Brevet Major John Guise, 24th N.I., and we now learn from the Delhi Gazette that Major J. T. Bush, of the same regiment, contemplates retiring from the service in March next. This will promote Capt. J. T. Shakespear, Assistant Commissioner at Ajmere, to a regimental majority, and be an instance of more rapid promotion that has been seen before in the Bengal Army, as Captain Shakespear's first commission as ensign bears date 8th February, 1840.—Bengal Hurkaru, Jan. 5.

NEW CODE OF PROCEDURE.—The report of her Majesty's Law Commissioners proposing a new code of civil and criminal procedure, together with the Court of Directors' despatches relating thereto, and communications since received on the subject from the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and the judges of the Supreme Court have been presented to the Legislative Council under a resolution of the Government of India, in order that the Council might consider the recommendations of the Law Commissioners, and enact a law "in general accordance therewith." The proposed law, however, is not to provide for the amalgamation of the Sudder and Supreme Courts, and the formation of a High Court, that being a question which the Supreme Government have resolved to reserve for separate consideration and report to the Court of Directors. Mr. Peacock will bring in the bill for giving effect to the proposed codes of procedure.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

RANK AND PRECEDENCE.

Fort William, Dec. 8, 1856.—Under instructions from the Hon. the Court of Directors, conveyed in letter No. 155, dated 1st October, 1856, paragraph 3, the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to direct, that officers employed as assistants, or deputy assistants, adjutant-general, and quartermaster-general, or as town or fort majors, or majors of brigade, if under the rank of captain, shall take rank and precedence as the junior captains in the brigade or garrison in which they are serving.

The above order is applicable to the three presidencies.

SCHEME FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF UNIVERSITIES AT THE PRESIDENCY TOWNS.

Fort William, December 12, 1856.—1. In conformity with the directions of the Honourable Court of Directors, as contained in paras. 24 to 35 of their dispatch in the public department, No. 49, dated the 19th July, 1854, a committee was appointed on the 26th January, 1855, to prepare a scheme for the establishment of universities in the presidency towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay.

2. When the committee was appointed, some doubt was felt as to whether the Honourable Court desired the government of India to proceed at once, on receiving the report of the committee, to the establishment of universities, or whether they desired that a further reference should be made to them on the subject. This doubt has been removed by the Honourable Court in their despatch of the 27th June, 1855 (para. 6), in which they say:—"We are of opinion, that all the measures necessary for the constitution of the universities should, in the first instance, proceed directly from your Government, and we accordingly authorize you to proceed in the matter in such a way as may seem best to you without further reference to us. We would only remark, that we approve your intention, that the universities at the different presidencies should be formed on the same general basis, leaving it to the senates of the several universities to form the detailed rules, with such variations as local circumstances may render advisable."

3. The committee having now submitted their report, dated the 7th August last, the Governor-General in Council proceeds at once to take into consideration the establishment of the universities at the three presidency towns, in accordance with the views of the Honourable Court.

4. In the orders of the Government of India, appointing the committee, it was observed, "That the details of a scheme, in accordance with the outline sketched in the despatch, should be settled with as little delay as possible, so that bills for the incorporation of the universities at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, may, at the proper time, be brought into the Legislative Council, and that draft rules for examinations, for the grant of degrees, and for other cognate matters, may be ready for discussion and adoption by the senates, so soon as those bills are passed into law." The committee, therefore, though at the commencement of their proceedings they appointed a sub-committee to prepare the drafts of bills for the incorporation of the universities, and though such drafts were actually prepared, considered eventually "that this was a matter beyond their province, and that the appointment of the senates, and the framing of rules for their guidance, whether under the sanction of law or otherwise, must rest, in the first instance at least, with the Governor-General in Council." They have not, in short, dealt with the constitution of the universities, or of the governing bodies, but have addressed themselves exclusively to the system of examination for entrance, degrees, and honours, in the several branches of arts, medicine, law, and civil engineering.

5. The thanks of the government are largely due to the members of the committee, for the careful and complete manner in which they have discharged their trust, amongst pressing avocations and claims upon their time, which, with many, can have left little room for additional labours. The work has been admirably performed, and the Governor-General in Council has no hesitation in adopting, unreservedly, the scheme of the committee, which, with few exceptions, is strictly in accordance with the views expressed by the honourable Court, in their despatch of 19th July, 1854, and by the government of India in the letter appointing the committee.

6. As regards the examination upon entrance, the Governor-General in Council entirely agrees with the committee in the opinion that it ought to be required. His lordship in Council believes that the mode in which it is proposed to hold it is the most convenient that could be adopted, and that the standard is fixed judiciously.

7. His lordship in Council thinks that the committee have given good reasons for not departing from the titles of bachelor of arts and master of arts, which are familiar, and have a recognized value in England and throughout Europe; and that they have done well in making the higher degree in itself the mark of honours awarded.

8. In respect of the examination for the first degree, although it is with some distrust that the governor-general in council expresses an opinion different from that formed by the committee after careful consideration, his lordship in council is of opinion, that conditions somewhat more precise might with advantage have been laid down as an indication of the minimum of acquirements which should entitle a candidate to that degree.

9. According to the views of the committee, this minimum is to be determined by the examiners acting under the instructions of the senate; and no doubt, whatever rules the committee might have framed, the application of them in practice, and a consistent adherence to them would depend mainly upon the examiners. Nevertheless, his lordship in council would have been glad if without attempting to define accurately the minimum to be exacted in each branch of study (which indeed would be impracticable), it had been declared indispensably necessary that a thorough and perfect knowledge of some branches up to a certain point, or a complete mastery of certain recognized text-books, should be exhibited, not as in itself sufficient to secure even a bare degree, but as a sine qua non, without which no degree should be granted.

10. Mathematics up to a certain stage, or the elements of logic as treated in the works of one or other standard writer, might be prescribed as subjects upon which the knowledge of the candidates would be as strictly and thoroughly tested, as in the case of their own vernacular language, a critical knowledge of which is wisely insisted upon.

11. The Governor-General in Council considers that some such rule would be beneficial, as enjoining exactness and completeness of knowledge, and as indicating that, though the amount required is described as "moderate," that which is known should be known thoroughly. The habit of discursive reading, and the acquisition thereby of superficial knowledge, are always dangerously seductive to students, and are too often encouraged by teachers; and the wide range of study to which even those who aim at the lowest degree are invited, may increase the danger. That the range should be wide is, in itself, quite right; but the fact, that it is so, seems to call for some counteracting inducement to close and accurate study.

12. With these observations the Governor-General in Council will leave the further consideration of this important point to the senates.

13. The Governor-General in Council cordially agrees in the decision to which the committee have come in admitting the evidences of revealed religion as contained in Butler's Analogy and Paley's Evidences, as one of the subjects which a candidate for honours in the mental and moral sciences may select for examination. The subject being entirely optional, and consideration being had for the studies pursued in affiliated institutions, in some of which theology will hold a prominent place, his Lordship in Council cannot think that this will be deemed by the Honourable Court to be an infringement of the spirit of their injunction, that the examination for degrees should not include subjects connected with religious belief.

14. The rules by which degrees in medicine and in civil engineering are to be governed call for no observation.

15. It is recommended, that there shall be but one degree in law, and that a degree in arts shall be a necessary condition of obtaining it, provided that the standard of an ordinary degree in arts is not fixed so high as to make it too severe a test of the general education of a law student. The Governor-General in Council is of opinion, that the standard of an ordinary degree in arts ought not to be, and is not in the committee's scheme, fixed so high as to give any reasonable ground for such an objection.

16. Whether a degree in law shall be made a condition of admission to the bar, or to the judicial service of the company, will be determined by the Government hereafter. The question must be decided solely upon a consideration of what may most reduce to a sound administration of the law, and it would be quite premature to discuss it before the university has come into active operation, and has been proved. The course of study in the university has properly been fixed without reference to the decision which may be taken upon this point.

17. The committee have recommended that the proceedings of the senates of the several universities should be subject to the control of a central authority, such as the Governor-General in Council, so that general uniformity may be observed, and that in the words of the Government, "at each presidency town the same degree of acquirement, in every branch of knowledge, should entitle its possessor to the same kind of academical distinction and honour." This will be very necessary. That the several universities may differ from each other in respect of the particular branch of learning which each may most successfully cultivate, and that with time each will assume a distinctive character and merits of its own, is very probable; but it is essential that the degrees and honours which each will have to confer should respectfully mark the same amount of acquirement and merit.

18. For this purpose, and in order to preserve a general harmony of constitution, but with no desire to enforce rigorous uniformity in matters in which local considerations and the judgment of the Local Governments may beneficially have free scope, it will be necessary that the proceedings of each Senate should be reported to the Government of India, and that all bye-laws and regulations passed by them should receive the sanction of the Governor-General in Council.

19. The draft of a bill for the incorporation of the university of Calcutta, with suitable adaptations for the other presidencies, has been approved generally by the Governor-General in Council, and will be placed in the hands of the Hon. Sir James Colville, whom it is proposed to name vice-chancellor of the university, with a request that his honour will take charge of it in the Legislative Council.

20. The Governor-General in Council is hereby pleased to declare, in anticipation of the Act of the Legislature, that the Governor-General of India for the time being shall be chancellor of the university of Calcutta, and that the governors of Madras and Bombay for the time being shall be, respectively, the chancellors of the universities of Madras and Bombay, and that the chief-governors of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces, the chief-justice of Bengal, the bishop of Calcutta, and the members of the Supreme Council of India, all for the time being, shall be ex officio fellows of the university of Calcutta.

21. His Lordship in Council is also pleased to appoint Sir James William Colville, Knt., Chief Justice of her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature at Calcutta, and late President of the Council of Education, to be the first Vice-Chancellor of the University of Calcutta.

22. His Lordship in Council is also pleased to appoint the following persons to be fellows of the University of Calcutta:—
Charles Allen, Esq., member of the Legislative Council of India.

Henry Ricketts, Esq., provisional member of the Supreme Council of India.

Charles Binny Trevor, Esq., judge of the Sudder Court in Bengal.

Princee Gholam Muhummud.

William Ritchie, Esq., advocate-general in Bengal.

Cecil Beaton, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India.

Colonel Henry Goodwyn, of the Bengal engineers, chief engineer in Bengal.

William Gordon Young, Esq., director of public instruction in Bengal.

Lieutenant-colonel William Erskine Baker, of the Bengal engineers, Secretary to the Government of India.

Lieutenant-colonel Andrew Scott Waugh, of the Bengal engineers, surveyor-general of India.

Kenneth Mackinnon, Esq., doctor in medicine.

Hodgson Pratt, Esq., inspector of schools in Bengal.

Henry Walker, Esq., professor of anatomy and physiology in the Medical College of Bengal.

Thomas Thomson, Esq., doctor in medicine, superintendent of the Botanical Garden at Calcutta.

Lieut. William Nassau Lees, of the Bengal infantry.

The Rev. William Kay, Doctor of Divinity, and principal of Bishop's College.

The Rev. Alexander Duff, Doctor of Divinity.

Thomas Oldham, Esq., superintendent of the geological survey of India.

Henry Woddrow, Esq., inspector of schools in Bengal.

Leonidas Clint, Esq., principal of the Presidency College.

Prosunno Comar Tagore, clerk, assistant of the Legislative Council of India.

Ramapershad Roy, Government pleader in the Sudder Court of Bengal.

The Rev. William Stephenson, rector of St. John's College.

The Rev. James Ogilvie, Master of Arts.

The Rev. Joseph Mullens, Bachelor of Arts.

Moulavy Muhummud Wujeeb, principal of the Calcutta Madrasah.

Ishwar Chandra Bidyassagor, principal of the Sanskrit College of Calcutta.

Rangopal Ghose, formerly member of the Council of Education.

23. The Vice-Chancellor and fellows of the Madras and Bombay Universities will be appointed by the Governor in Council of Madras and Bombay respectively. A list of the Vice-Chancellor and fellows composing each senate will be furnished to this department by the local governments for communication to the Legislative Council, and insertion in the Acts of incorporation.

24. The meetings of the Calcutta university senate can, for the present, with the permission of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, be held in the council-room of the medical college hospital, and the university examinations in the town hall. The senate is authorized to appoint a registrar from among the officers of the education department, on a salary not exceeding Rs. 300 a month, and to provide him with a clerk on a salary of Rs. 50 a month, and two messengers on Rs. 6 a month each.

25. The senate is also authorized to appoint, from time to time, as many examiners as may be required for the examination of the candidates for entrance, degrees, and honours, in the several faculties of the university, and to award to each examiner such remuneration as may be considered sufficient, not exceeding, for the present, Rs. 1,200 a year in any case.

26. The senate will proceed forthwith to promulgate the rules proposed by the committee, and sanctioned by the Government of India, and to pass such other rules, and take such further measures, as may be necessary to give early and full effect to the scheme.

Ordered, that the necessary letters be addressed to the Hon. Sir James William Colville, and the other fellows of the university.

Ordered, that a copy of this regulation be furnished to each of the local governments for information and guidance, and to the several departments of the Government of India, for information and such further orders as may be necessary.

Ordered, that a copy of this resolution be published in the Calcutta and vernacular Gazettes for general information.

CECIL BEADON,

Secretary to the Government of India.

QUALIFICATION IN NATIVE LANGUAGES.

Fort William, Foreign Department, December 19, 1856.—The following resolution of the Government of India is published for general information by order of the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council:—

"No officers shall be employed hereafter in the civil administration of the Hyderabad assigned districts who have not qualified in either the Canares or the Mahrattée language.

"All officers who shall be hereafter employed on duties connected with the civil administration of the Nagpore province, shall be appointed temporarily subject to the condition of passing an examination in Mahrattée.

"G. F. EDMONDSTONE,

AUGMENTATION OF ASSISTANT SURGEONS.

Fort William, January 6, 1857.—The Hon. the Court of Directors, in their letter, No. 193, of the 12th November, 1856, have sanctioned an augmentation of twelve assistant surgeons to the medical establishment of this presidency, and have consequently intimated that they "will add twelve to the number already advertised, viz., ten as required to be filled up by competition in January, 1857."

COURT-MARTIAL.

LIEUTENANT MARTIN GODFREY BRABAZON, 60TH N.I.

Head-Quarters, Camp, Meerut, Dec. 12, 1856.—At a General Court Martial assembled at Umballah, on Tuesday, Nov. 11, 1856, Lieut. M. G. Brabazon, 60th N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in the following instances:

1st. In having, at Simla, on July 20, 1856, been under the influence of drink at a public billiard-table.

2nd. In having, at the same time and place, without having received the slightest provocation, grossly insulted Mr. W. G. H. Wilson, a clerk in the office of the commissary-general, by calling him a liar, damning his eyes, and striking him; thereby provoking Mr. Wilson to retort the lie, and return the blow to him, Lieut. Brabazon.

Finding.—On the 1st instance of the charge, not guilty.

On the 2nd instance of the charge, guilty, with the exception of the words "without having received the slightest provocation," of which it acquits him.

On the preamble of the charge, not guilty, and does acquit him of the same.

Sentence.—To be publicly and severely reprimanded.

Meerut, Dec. 6, 1856.—The finding under the first instance is confirmed.

The exceptional finding under the second instance, and the entire acquittal under the preamble of the charge, are disapproved.

(Signed)

GEORGE ANSON, General,

Commander-in-Chief, East Indies.

Remarks by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India.—The court having rejected the preamble of the charge, and thus recorded an opinion that the gross language and violence of Lieut.

Brabazon in the billiard-room at Simla, on July 20th last, was consistent with the character of an officer and a gentleman, and not to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, virtually acquitted him of any offence over which the court had jurisdiction, and thus deprived itself of all power to award a punishment under the portions of the second instance which the verdict declares to have been established. The finding and sentence are therefore repugnant.

The Commander-in-Chief cannot agree in opinion with the court-martial that Lieut. Brabazon's behaviour was that of an officer and a gentleman, or that he received provocation, even the slightest, from Mr. Wilson, who appears to have conducted himself with forbearance under the unwarrantable interference of Lieut. Brabazon, until this officer so far forgot what was due to his position in life as to give the lie to Mr. Wilson. It is surprising to General Anson how the court can have arrived at the conclusion that Lieut. Brabazon's misbehaviour was not unprovoked, since it appears in evidence that this officer subsequently apologized to Mr. Wilson for his improper conduct towards him—a clear proof that Mr. Wilson really gave no provocation to Lieut. Brabazon.

Lieut. Brabazon should remember that if he chooses to associate on terms of equality with those moving in a lower social circle to himself, he must be careful to respect their feelings, and at the least to treat them with the same courtesy that he would show to his equals in rank; and while the state is applying its energies to raise the uncovenanted service generally to the position it deserves, it cannot be permitted that the respectable members of that service shall be insulted with impunity.

Lieut. Brabazon is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty.

MADRAS.

DEPUTY COMMISSIONER AT HYDERABAD.—We mentioned the other day that the pay of a deputy commissioner at Hyderabad had been increased from 2,000 to 2,500 rupees per mensem, without the sanction of the Court of Directors having been first obtained, and we stated that the Court had in consequence directed the money to be refunded, leaving it with the Governor-General to decide whether it shall be retrenched from the future salary of the authority who ordered the increase, or from the party who received it. It does not require much consideration to be sure that the big man will escape the penalty of his fault, while the little one, who committed none, will be the sufferer, as doubtless he will be restricted to a salary of Rs. 1,500 for the same number of months in which he drew the Rs. 2,500, until the excess paid to him is liquidated. To prevent similar mistakes in future the Government of India, we understand, have issued circulars to the subordinate Governments desiring them in future to hold their respective secretaries personally and pecuniarily responsible for any omission or inattention to the rules relative to the financial matters cited in the Directors' despatch.—Madras Paper.

THE ZEMINDAR OF RAMNAD IN SOUTHERN INDIA, a Hindoo lady, by name Rancee Setupati Parvata Vardani Nachiar, has established a medical dispensary in that town, where advice and medicine are distributed to sick persons, without distinction of caste, rank, or condition. A native surgeon, well instructed in the European science of healing, has been appointed manager of the institution, and a large supply of medicines procured from Madras. The dispensary is a large native house, with accommodation for indoor patients, and a large hall and verandah for those that are not received as such, to wait while their cases are inquired into, and remedies administered. During the month of June there were no less than 281 outdoor and seven indoor patients. It is thus evident that the native prejudices against European medicine are, at any rate, in that part of the country, also rapidly fading away. All the circumstances connected with this dispensary are well worthy of notice. In the first place it has an Indian proprietor; a female, too, departing from the old established Oriental ways of getting rid of her spare cash, and devoting it to a really useful and enlightened purpose. Then we have a native trained by Europeans in European lore, employed by the Rancee to carry out her intentions; not regarded with suspicion as an apostate from the ancient customs of his brethren, but confided in the more for having been able to break through the fetters of prejudice, and engage in a pursuit which, to an orthodox Hindoo of the old school, was an abomination. Next we have a Hindoo institution, established by a Hindoo, for the use of Hindoos, in which distinctions of caste are altogether ignored, and where the sick of all sorts—Brahmin and Soodra, Mahomedan and Pariah—are treated alike, as alike in humanity and suffering. Lastly, we find that the people of the country, far from being scandalized at innovations so enormously heterodox, press forward eagerly to partake in their advantages, and consent to be cured by means (and in company) which their grandfathers would sooner have died than submitted to. Such examples unquestionably prove that a movement towards amelioration is actually beginning among the natives of India, and that the electric current called into existence by the contact of Western civilization already exhibits an influence on their minds and feelings, which, though necessarily slow and partial, feeble in its first manifestations, must inevitably increase and become rapid ere long, since every moment will make the work of the next easier.

DEATH OF MR. BUSHBY.—We regret much to hear that intelligence has been received by electric telegraph of the death of Mr. Bushby, the able and respected resident at Hyderabad.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—In an article concerning the Bank of Madras, and the disposition evinced by the shareholders to exclude natives from the direction, the Athenæum incidentally mentions that out of the 3,000 shares of which the stock of the bank consists, 300 are held by Government, 1,930 by Europeans, and 760 by natives.

A LITTLE WAR IN COCHIN.—The Madras Athenæum promises us a little war in the territories of the Cochin Rajah. Eighty years ago certain Konganies of Cochin, during a time of public disturbance, deposited for safe keeping in Travancore a certain idol of great sanctity. When the disturbances were over the idol was reclaimed, but not given up, as the people of Travancore had learned to worship it, and regard it as their own property. The Madras Government declined to interfere, though repeatedly petitioned; until three years ago certain Kongani devotees stole the idol, and carried it back to Cochin. It was then the Rajah of Travancore's turn to memorialize, but both Sir Henry Pottinger and Lord Harris declined to interpose. The Court of Directors, however, has ruled that the British Government, as the paramount power, cannot escape the responsibility of settling the dispute. The Cochin Rajah has accordingly been called on to restore the idol, as a preliminary to the hearing of his claim. The Rajah replies that he would gladly do so, but is afraid of violence from his subjects. Some troops at Quilon are therefore ordered to be in readiness to march on Cochin, if the final demand of the resident should fail.

THE PAUMBAUM CHANNEL.—The Englishman mentions that Col. Cotton has submitted a further report on the Paumbaum Channel. It may, he says, be opened for vessels of the largest size at a cost of a little less than fifteen lakhs. In the mean time, operations are in progress for deepening the channel to thirteen feet. The excavation of the channel to a depth of thirty feet would shorten the steam route between Calcutta and England by two days.

DEATH OF LIEUT. HOOPER.—A Bellary correspondent says,—“I have to inform you of a most lamentable occurrence that took place at this station last week, which has cut off a promising officer in the vigour of youth. Lieut. and Adj. W. R. Hooper, 34th L.I., son of Mr. Hooper, of the Court of Sudder Adawlut, at Madras, arrived here on the night of the 22nd December, and took up his abode in the house of Captain Hutchinson, superintendent of police, and a relative of his. I must here mention that Lieut. Hooper had an apartment assigned to him adjoining a room in which Captain Hutchinson, who is a photographer, kept his chemicals, and on the following day (23rd) Lieut. Hooper dined at the General's, and returned home at a late hour at night. When about retiring he put some brandy into a tumbler, and called to a servant for some water. The servant stepped into the adjoining room, and finding a bottle containing, as he supposed, water, brought it out and poured some of the liquid into the tumbler of his master, who drank it off, and immediately after fell down in a fit. An alarm was instantly raised, and Captain Hutchinson hastened in, but in a few minutes the soul of the ill-fated man had taken its flight. It was subsequently ascertained that the bottle contained a preparation of prussic acid, or nitrate of silver, used as a bath for immersing a glass with the collodion coating on. The circumstances of the servant fetching a bottle as containing water, will not seem strange, when I explain that Capt. Hutchinson was in the habit of having water kept in the room in question in bottles, and the poisonous mixture was as clear as pure water. The deceased was buried on the evening of the 24th Dec. with military honours.”

A MILITARY BONUS FUND has been established at Madras.

FROM KIMEDY we are glad to hear that the rebel chief Dunda Seenah was captured on Christmas-day. He was escaping into Jeypoor, was discovered and brought in by a party of police. The field-force, it is said, is to be at once broken up; the detachment of artillery, with head-quarters and wing of the 31st L.I., have returned to Vizianagram, and we regret to hear the latter is still suffering very much from sickness, having 200 men in hospital.

THE GODAVERY has again been shown to be navigable; and in its present unimproved condition 1,000 bales of cotton have been brought down from Hingenghaut and the Berar valley to Coconada.

CAPTAIN G. NIGHTINGALE.—We learn that Capt. G. Nightingale, commanding 4th Cavalry, Hyderabad Contingent, has permission to proceed to Bombay on medical certificate, for the purpose of appearing before a Medical Board, with leave of absence from the 25th December, 1856, to the 5th February, 1857, in anticipation of leave being granted by the Government of India.—Madras Spectator, Dec. 27.

CAVARY IN THE DECCAN.—A rumour has been current here for some days past that the 6th Madras cavalry, now on their way from Mhow, to relieve the 8th at Sholapore, will be brought to Poona, and remain here until a dragoon regiment arrives from home. We are unable to trace this report to any trustworthy source; but it is gaining ground, and many persons believe that it has a good foundation.

The Madras papers state that a rumour is prevalent in Bangalore, that on the arrival there of the 12th Lancers, H.M.'s 43rd regt. L.I., now at that station, will have to proceed on service to China.

RESIDENT AT HYDERABAD.—We (Phoenix) have not heard that the Governor-General has made a final selection of a successor to Mr. Bushby; but it is supposed that the choice will be among the following gentlemen, namely, Mr. Edmondstone, Mr. Christian, of the North-West, Mr. D. McLeod, of the Punjab, unless Mr. Beadon is ambitious of the place. Colonel Edwards is also named.

MILITARY TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION.

Head-Quarters, Choultry Plain, December 30, 1856.—The Commander-in-Chief directs it to be notified that at all stations at which the convenience of communicating by electric telegraph exists, advantage will invariably be taken of it to report to Army Head-Quarters * the arrival or departure of troops on the day on which such arrival or departure may take place. The addition of "all well," or "having" † ——— in Camp" being made as the case may be.

BOMBAY.

PERSIA FROM AN INDIAN POINT OF VIEW.

The entire army of Persia does not number 60,000, and is divided into four orchas of 15,000 each. In the orchas are included the redifs or national guards, which amount to 35,000. Two orchas are in the south and are divided as follows:—25,000 are around Bushire, and 5,000 at Gombroon. The army of Bushire, better known as the army of Fars, is eighteen months in arrears, and commanded by Shah Feroze Khan and a renegade Pole, and could be bought over by the payment of arrears and taken into our service. There are no Russian regiments with the army of the south, but there are two companies of artillery with twenty-four 9-pounder field guns. The difficulties to be overcome are not brute force, but the geographical difficulties of the country and the mode of fighting. The only Russian force on the borders of Persia is at Asterra and Ardabil, on the frontiers of Ghilan on the Caspian Sea, and the army does not number more than 7,000 men in a very inefficient condition, being composed of two-thirds militia from the provinces of Heken and Ashiwan. Astrabad itself is garrisoned by 1,500 men from the 2nd regiment of Siberia, under the solemn pledge of its being given up the moment the dispute is settled between England and Persia. Madame Muleyr

Hashim, the unhappy ceciscibe of Mr. Murray, is dead. It is now thought by high military authority that the whole of Persia and Afghanistan can be conquered by 50,000 Indian troops, even if Russia should aid the Sophi against us, for the armies of Georgia and Circassia do not number 60,000 fighting men, and could not bring into action more than 8,000 men, and this remnant is badly armed, having only flint muskets, almost the identical ones used under Diebitch in 1829, when crossing the Balkan. The chances of this army being reinforced from the Volga and Caspian are very small, as the entire Russian fleet there does not consist of more than eight iron steamers of the size of our Phlegethon. These circumstances should be borne in mind as also one other, namely, that 200,000 Russians are yet quartered in Southern Russia to protect Nicolaiëff and watch the movements of Austria in the principalities.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE LONDON MAIL, of Dec. 10th had arrived at Bombay, (per Ganges).

A SINGULAR DOCUMENT.—The Bombay Times has obtained possession of a singular document. It is a copy of an agreement between Meer Jaffir Ali, the nuwab of Surat, and Nussur Ali Khan, heir presumptive to the throne of Oude, in which the latter assigns to Jaffir Ali the sole conduct of his "case." Should the throne of Oude be restored, Meer Jaffir is to receive a pension of three lakhs per annum. Should the Oude prince not succeed in enforcing his claim, a suit in Chancery is to be brought against the East-India Company for all the sums subscribed by the Oude family to the Government loans from 1811 to 1835. If the suit succeeds, Jaffir Ali's pension is to be a lakh and a half. If the king repudiates the contract, the heir apparent is to observe it on his father's death. The agreement was sworn to on the Koran by both parties, in the presence of a large number of witnesses, and is dated Harley House, London, November 7th, 1856.

CHARGE AGAINST THE MEDICAL AUTHORITIES.—The Sindian brings a serious charge against the military and medical authorities at Hyderabad. On the departure of the 2nd Bombay Europeans to join the Persian expedition, the invalids and women and children of the corps were as usual left behind under charge of the civil surgeon. This officer refused to attend to the women, and when sent for to visit a woman who was dangerously ill, stated in writing, that he had nothing to do with soldiers' wives and families. The consequence was excessive mortality. The women and children were decimated twice over in six weeks. Other serious charges are made which call imperatively for an inquiry.

POLICE OF LONDON AND INDIA.—Mr. Forgett, of the Bombay police, mentions, in a report to Government, that in London there is one policeman to 423 persons, costing at the rate of Rs. 1 9 4 for each of those persons. In Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, the figures are respectively one policeman to 238, 1,159, and 533 persons; costing Rs. 0 7 7½, Rs. 0 2 8, and Rs. 0 4 11.

MR. E. W. WEST, of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, has invented a method of preventing railway sleepers from splitting. He simply smears the ends with heated dammer. It is possible that by this means the brab palm and other woods, which we are accustomed to consider worthless, might be rendered valuable. The process costs half an anna for each sleeper.

SIR H. LEEKE.—The Bombay Times mentions a report that Sir Henry Leeke has been recalled by the Supreme Government from the command of the Persian expedition, his appointment having been in direct opposition to a positive order from the Court of Directors of only six years' standing. Sir Henry Leeke's friends argue, that though placed by the Admiralty on the list of officers who are too old for active service, he has contrived to keep the Bombay dockyard in perfect order. This, if true, is an excellent reason for making him superintendent of the dockyard, but it scarcely justifies Lord Elphinstone in sending him in command of a fleet on active service. Still less does it justify the disregard of a service order.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY.—The Bombay Times publishes the prospectus of the "Oriental Inland Steam Company." The projectors propose, with a capital of 250,000*l.*, in 10*l.* shares, "to establish steam navigation upon the rivers of India, especially the Indus, the Ganges, and the Godavery." The prospectus is evidently of Madras origin, and the names Indus and Ganges are only introduced to tempt shareholders to lend their money to an experiment on the navigability of the Godavery. Now the Godavery may be navigable by steamers; and though good professional opinions proclaim that it is not, there is doubtless room for an experiment. But the experiment should be tried by Government, and not at the cost of unsuspecting speculators.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

SINGAPORE.

DEFALCATIONS OF MR. CALDWELL.—A serious case of defalcation, painfully resembling that of Sir Thomas Turton, has been brought to light at Singapore. Mr. Caldwell, registrar of the Singapore Court, had for thirty years borne an unblemished character, passing not only for an honest but a religious man. He suddenly proves a defaulter to the extent of a hundred and twenty thousand dollars, nearly two and a half lakhs of rupees. As in Sir Thomas Turton's case, the sufferers are chiefly widows and orphans. One widow lady loses thirty-nine thousand dollars. Caldwell has escaped to Batavia, under circumstances which expose the authorities to the charge of excessive carelessness.

THE "AURORA."—The Russian frigate Aurora is at Singapore. This is one of the vessels which escaped Admiral Sterling's squadron at Castries Bay, and which he would have captured with her consorts, had he displayed a little more Nelsonian activity.

A SKETCH OF CANTON.

The recent bombardment of Canton and the subsequent attempt to set fire to the factories justify the following sketch (taken from the Friend of India), which is rather an attempt to reproduce the couleur locale than to furnish an accurate topographical description.

The approach to the city from the anchoring grounds of Whampoa has often been described. The singular beauty of the landscape is speedily eclipsed by the attractions of the river. You find that you are gradually entering a floating town. Long before Canton is reached, the banks of the river are completely hidden by a deep fringe of floating habitations. From the skiff-like sampan to the portentous junk, built with the timbers of a seventy-four on the lines of an iceberg, there is every variety of marine and amphibious architecture, from the flower-boat, as gorgeous if not as graceful as Cleopatra's barge, "manned" by women as virtuous though not as comely as the Egyptian queen, to mandarin junks which, with their successive tiers of oars, and soldiers who will not fight, again carry us back to Egypt, and the battle of Actium. The city of floating houses is so vast that the visitor forgets that there is a real city behind it; for though Canton contains at least a million of inhabitants, its walls are so low, and its public buildings generally so insignificant, that the aquatic city easily distracts attention from the real one. Canton itself, however, is far from wanting in a certain metropolitan grandeur. Its low but immensely thick walls, of brick based on a sandstone, surround a vast undulating tumulus of red-tiled roofs, first rising gradually from the river-side, and then climbing the slopes of a lofty hill towards the foot of the quaint pagoda which crowns the whole. But while the visitor is balancing the attractions of the city afloat, and the city ashore, the whole scene suddenly changes. The broad border of floating habitations to the right is abruptly broken by the river frontage of the European "factories," a designation given to thirteen piles of hybrid masonry, meant for palaces, and looking like ambitious barns, crowded into a frontage of 250 yards, each building divided from its neighbour by a narrow lane, and the whole shut out from the reeking suburb in the rear, by an exceedingly high wall.

Each factory has its open space in front, where all day, instead of the bales of silk and the brawling porters one expects to find, there are gardens, avenues of trees, and the stillness of an academic grove, broken of evenings by the gaiety and gossip of a public promenade. The whole European population of the factories has never exceeded 300. They live in a style of luxury more than Oriental, for it is divested of the nuisance of large retinues, one Chinese servant of all-work being enough for the most self-indulgent bachelor. There are no carriages, because there is nowhere to go to, and so the Anglo-Saxons of either gender, pace the prison yards, which they call their pleasure-grounds; with a certain air of quiet desperation which justifies even the locomotive Chinese in their implicit belief that every man, woman, and child of those 300 barbarians has vowed to expiate some unutterable sin by performing a daily penance of "ten thousand steps." But there is a surplus of Anglo-Saxon energy which will not be circumscribed by a ring fence of a thousand yards. It accordingly takes to the water. Merchant princes as fat and as pompous as mandarins, get into their flannel jackets and their wherries, and pull ten miles at a stretch. The Chinese is often insolent on land to the solitary pedestrian, but even a mob of Chinese boats, which is something worse than a floating St. Giles's, opens spontaneously to make way for the quiet Englishman, who, as he rows cross-banded in his tiny wherry, exemplifies "Rule Britannia" by deigning to show only his back to the enemy.

The life inside the factories is, as we have said, luxurious. The establishments are large, for though the servants are comparatively few, the European retainers of each house live under the same roof with the employer. Still the signs of commerce are rare, save the perpetual din of dollars which ever issues from the room of the comptroller. Even in the hours of business each house seems a castle of commercial indolence. There is nothing so gentlemanly in commerce as the Canton tea trade. For balls, and gaieties of that description, people go to Hong-Kong; but there is no lack of social enjoyments, which, if not so demonstrative, are at least more genuine.

Threading one of the paved and well-swept lanes which separate the factories, as quiet and solitary as the walks in a cloister, the pedestrian passes through the rear wall, and plunges into a deluge of active life. There is no crowd, even in Cheapside, to compare with the crowd of the Canton suburbs, and none anywhere so well under control. There the Englishman, if he be not a missionary, is treated generally with civility, and sometimes even with a certain deference; but he fares not as the Englishman in India fares. The Chinese has seen enough of us to recognize the national dignity; but he has not been taught to fawn; and the brawny Chinese porter, grinning under a burthen which would create a sensation even at Constantinople, is more disposed to mind his day's work than his manners; accordingly, if you are in his way, he is not particular in his language so long as he tells you so. The mandarin, looking as though he had a soul above buttons, but really attaching some importance to that official badge, is a person whose insolence you had better anticipate by quietly stepping aside. The blind beggar-girl, whose ingenious parents have qualified her for her calling by searing her eyes with a red-hot iron, practically exemplifies Charles Lamb's theory of the tyranny of the weak. But from one Oriental nuisance the streets are clear. Dogs there are in abundance, but possessing a comestible value, they are kept in cages, where they are too fat and too contented to howl, and too lazy to bark. Should there be a street row, the supply of popular missiles is limited; for it is, or ought to be, a maxim among the Chinese that the worst use to which you can put a dead cat is to throw him at your neighbour. Rats being an article of domestic produce, as well as of domestic consumption, are not exposed for sale in the market; but the entire freedom of the streets from all offensive animals leads the wayfarer to thank heaven that the Chinese nation consumes its own vermin as certain chimneys consume their own smoke.

But while the Saxon from India finds himself for the first time in his life forced to elbow his way through an Oriental street, there is one class whose civility more than compensates for the general indifference of the mob. Fully to describe a Chinese shopkeeper would be as easy as to describe a Chinese shop. His manners are borrowed from every nation under the sun, and engrafted on a vigorous stock of genuine Chinese rascality. Perhaps the worst, because the most highly-cultivated of all his vices, is his politeness. The Bengalee of Radha Bazaar is as oily in manners as in person, so long as there is a bargain in view. But leave his shop without buying, and you see that he would be insolent if he dared. But the much-enduring urbanity of the Chinese shopkeeper is proof against the bitterest disappointments.

We do not attempt to describe the shops or their contents—the curiosity-shops, where the late Mr. Bernal would have sat in fatuous despair; the ornithological-shops, where the present Mr. Blyth might learn more than in his own museum, or the picture-shops, which show even the Pre-Raphaelite that he has been anticipated by the Chinese. The shops have all gaudy sign-boards suspended at right angles from the walls, and giving to each street the perspective of a theatrical stage.

We have only attempted to seize a few features of life at Canton, in the European factories, and in the streets or lanes immediately adjoining them. Further towards the city-wall is the notorious "Hog Lane," the Bow Bazaar of Canton, where all the vices of Europe and Asia meet in one cesspool. Let the reader imagine Bow Bazaar, with its European sailors, but without its European police; let him remember that the profligate Hindu is a moral man compared with the reputable Chinese, and he will not blame Admiral Seymour for bombarding Hog Lane. Further inland, and growing up to the very foot of the city-wall, is the exclusively Chinese quarter. Here the streets, the houses, and the modes of life are identical with those within the walls. The street are short, and irregularly laid out, invariably flagged with broad flat stones, and kept in a condition which in an Indian town would pass for a miracle of cleanliness. Their breadth, which never exceeds sixteen feet, and generally varies from six to ten, prohibits the use of carriages, but is sufficient to admit of the passage of two sedan chairs. The houses of the poor are mere mud hovels. Those of the better class are of brick, with three rooms, one for the males, one for the females, and the third for the common refectory. These houses have a single door, which opens on the street, but those of the wealthier classes, and of the government officials, are surrounded by walls, and their numerous apartments are always spacious, and often elegant. In the exclusively Chinese quarters of extramural Canton the European is generally safe from insolence or ill-usage. Even the Chinese officials treat him with a blunt courtesy, which has its charm. But the common crowd, like an English common crowd, has no respect for persons, and its independent bearing tries the weak nerves of many of the European residents, who find it undignified to jostle shoulders with the Asiatic.

LATTIALS.—The Dacca News gives us a story of lattials. Messrs. Mackay, Barry, & Co., of Serajunge, bought a factory belonging to the estate of the late Dwarkanath Tagore. It had been closed for years, and the zemindar of the soil apprehending that its proximity to his cutcherry would prove a nuisance, warned the purchasers not to attempt to work it. The warning was naturally disregarded, and the zemindar resorted to violence. The servants of the factory were seized and beaten, boats were plundered, and indigo-seed destroyed. The planters were then asked "if they had had enough, and would give up the factory, or be more roughly treated." Of course they refused to yield. The rest of the story is told by one of the planters, who himself had to run for his life before two hundred lattials in the zemindar's employ. Another planter had an equally narrow escape. The police came to the rescue and made some arrests, but the lattials overpowered the police, rescued their prisoners, carried away the factory gomastahs with their money, and finally plundered and destroyed one of the factories belonging to the firm. Mr. Lance, the magistrate of Mymensingh, was entreated to come to the spot. He refused, but sent his deputy, Mr. Cockburn, whose orders are treated with contempt. In short, the police are utterly unable to protect life or property. The fault rests with the planters themselves. It was in their interest that the Affray Bill was resisted. Violence of this kind could be suppressed in a week, were the maintenance of clubmen made, as it would be in England a political offence, punishable with forfeiture of estates.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOP OF AGRA has issued a pastoral letter denouncing the Lawrence Asylum as a place unfit for the instruction of Catholic children. It will be remembered that Archbishop Carew expressed the same opinion regarding the Calcutta Martiniere. Protestants will be tempted to raise the cry of bigotry, but there is a passage in the Agra pastoral in which earnest men of all creeds will concur. "Nothing is more likely to unsettle men's minds, not only on doctrinal subjects, but also as matters of morality, than a weak and vacillating system of religious education, which begins at first by rendering youth indifferent to their respective creeds, and ends in making them wholly reckless about any form of religion." True, but the Catholics, for consistency's sake, must give up inviting Protestant girls to their convents under a pretext of not interfering with their religion.

A CURIOUS ADVERTISEMENT.—A Mussulman lady named Khutteja Beebee, daughter of Cazeed Syed Mahomed Muggurbie, gives notice to her husband, Mooftee Ghiasodeen, "residing at Dharwar or elsewhere," that having received no support from him for seven years, she is on the point of mrrrying again to obtain a maintenance. If the husband objects to the remarriage, he is to give notice to the lady's father within fifteen days. The whole proceeding is, we believe, strictly consonant with Mussulman notions of propriety.

SALE OF SPECIMENS OF INDIAN MANUFACTURE.

WE understand that a sale will take place during the ensuing month (March), at Messrs. Christie and Manson's, of a selection of the articles which were sent over from India for the Paris Exhibition. The collection which has thus been reserved for the hammer contains many choice specimens of Indian art and skill, as well as of manufactured goods, skins, &c.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR ROBERT VIVIAN, K.C.B., AND MAJOR-GENERAL BEATSON.

THE repeated attacks which have been made by Major-General Beatson and his friends upon Major-General Sir Robert Vivian, coupled with the probability that the subject is again to be brought before Parliament, have at length constrained the latter to lay before the public a narrative of the circumstances which brought the two officers into collision. General Vivian, it will be recollected, commanded the Turkish Contingent in the Crimea. General Beatson, on the other hand, had been placed in charge of a body of Turkish irregular cavalry, which he had succeeded in embodying for British service; but the Secretary at War becoming dissatisfied with the imperfect discipline and want of control exhibited by a portion of the men, the corps was deprived of its independent character and attached to the Turkish Contingent. Hence, though the cause of irritation on the part of General Beatson is sufficiently intelligible, it is not easy to discover by what ingenuity General Vivian's name could be possibly connected with the measure which the Secretary-at-War deemed it advisable to adopt. It is nevertheless imputed to this officer that he fathered false and malicious charges, anonymously brought to his knowledge, against General Beatson,—that he ordered a secret inquiry into these allegations,—and that, coveting an increase to his own force, he acted in a spirit of unfairness towards the major-general, with a view to deprive him of his independent command. We feel bound to state that nothing can be more complete than the refutation of each and every one of these charges contained in the frank and temperate narrative which is now submitted to the public. Had General Vivian coveted an increase to his force, he shows distinctly that it was not by the addition of the troops which composed the irregular cavalry that he would have desired to attain his object. These troops had rendered themselves conspicuous by acts of violence and a total contempt of control, and it needed less sagacity than that possessed by General Vivian to foresee that the transfer of General Beatson's cavalry could neither promote the efficiency nor confer honour upon the corps which he commanded. Writing to Lord Panmure a few days after the receipt of the order of incorporation, he says : "I regret most bitterly that now, at the eleventh hour, I am called to take these troops with me to Kertch. Your lordship must not suppose that in communicating my sentiments I am making difficulties ; I am simply representing them, and will do my utmost to overcome them ; but my firm conviction is, that unless in small bodies, when they may be easily coerced, they will be found rather to hamper an army than to afford it any assistance ; and I regret that circumstances should have rendered it necessary for her Majesty's Government to attach them to my Contingent." One of the three charges thus falls to the ground. Evidence more clear and explicit could neither be adduced nor required in support of General Vivian's declaration, that he had no concern whatever in the transactions which led to the transfer of the Irregular Cavalry to the Contingent, and that the measure, so far from having been an object of desire, was diametrically opposed to his wishes. A brief reference to the events which followed will be necessary to the clear understanding of the two remaining charges. Upon the receipt by General Vivian of Lord Panmure's instructions, General Beatson, then at the Dardanelles, was forthwith called upon to furnish to head-quarters certain specific returns of the force under his command. This order was dated the 6th of September, 1855. On the 10th he was further desired to forward a summary of the leading facts connected with the acts of insubordination which had taken place on the part of his men. The two requisitions were alike disregarded, and received no acknowledgment. A few days later, a serious affray took place at the Dardanelles, between some troopers of the Irregular Cavalry and a Turkish guard of the town of the Dardanelles, in which one of each party was severely wounded. Upon this the Pasha called upon General Beatson to enforce stringent measures for preventing his troopers from carrying arms into the town. General Beatson, however, refused to take any steps in the matter ; whereupon he was further apprised by the Pasha, that if he persisted in his determination of non-interference, the entrance of his troopers into the town would be opposed by force of arms. In this emergency the British Consuls addressed the Embassy, in the hope that some interposition on the part of higher authorities might still prevent bloodshed. This communication the Ambassador immediately despatched to General Vivian, with an expression of opinion that the supreme authority at the Dardanelles should be vested in an officer who might be disposed to co-operate with the Pasha and Consuls for the preservation of the public peace. The Ambassador had previously, on more than one occasion, represented the unwillingness or inability of General Beatson to exercise due control over his irregular levies, and General Vivian now felt that he had no alternative but to act upon the suggestion of the Ambassador. Major-General Smith was accordingly selected to succeed General Beatson, who was at the same time recalled to head-quarters. In an interview which followed, General Vivian's conduct was marked by the utmost candour and forbearance. Though in possession of strong opposing evidence, he consented to accept General Beatson's denial of any intention to ignore or evade his authority ; but as General Vivian had, a few days before, conveyed a contrary opinion to Lord Panmure, he directed that a copy of his letter to his lordship should be furnished to the recalled commander. In accepting the assurance given by General Beatson, it is necessary to observe that General Vivian was ignorant of a meeting which had been held at the quarters of that officer on the 30th September, immediately preceding his departure from the Dardanelles, and to this we shall presently revert. In December, the Irregular Cavalry were removed from the Dardanelles to Shumla, where, pending the return of General Smith, who had been compelled to leave from ill health, the temporary command of the corps had devolved upon Brigadier-General Watt. At this juncture, the commander of the Turkish Contingent deemed it desirable to ascertain the state of discipline of the Irregular Cavalry, and Major-General Shirley, being deputed from Kertch, made the necessary inspection, and forwarded the results to head-quarters. Among other matters, General Shirley's report referred to proceedings stated to have occurred at the Dardanelles on the last day of September, and as these involved a serious charge against General Beatson, Brigadier Watt was directed to institute an inquiry into the accusations, and to transmit the result to the Secretary-for-War. The proceedings reported by General Shirley were as follow :—

"When General Smith arrived at the Dardanelles, General Beatson assembled the commanding officers of regiments, and actually endeavoured to persuade them to make a mutiny in their regiments against General Smith and against the authority of General Vivian.

"Two of these commanding officers then left the room, saying they were soldiers, and would not listen to language which they thought most improper and mutinous. These two were Lieutenant-Colonels O'Reilly and Shelley.

"General Beatson subsequently had a sort of round robin prepared by the chief interpreter, and sent round to the native officers and men, in the hope that they would sign it, refusing to serve under any other general than himself. This attempt appears, however, to have signally failed.

"Both of these mutinous attempts are said to have emanated from Mr. Burton, who, it also appears, kept the order from Lord Panmure placing the Irregular Horse under General Vivian, for three whole weeks locked up and unknown to any one but General Beatson ; and the order was not promulgated till after General Smith arrived at the Dardanelles. This is authentic, and can be fully proved and substantiated."

The assertion, then, that the charges preferred against General Beatson were anonymous, turns out to be a pure fabrication ; that the inquiry directed to be instituted was to be of a secret character is equally devoid of truth. The imputation, moreover, that General Vivian fathered the accusations, is ridiculously strained. These, on the 5th March, were simply communicated to Brigadier Watt, a friend of General Beatson, with instructions to investigate their character in such manner as should seem fit in his discretion ; and surely such a reference implies no adoption. General Beatson's friends characterize the charges as false and malicious ; but General Shirley, writing to the War department so late as the 2nd July, 1856, says : "I believe the statement made in General Vivian's letter of the 5th March, 1856, to be perfectly correct ; and of the six officers commanding regiments who were present on the occasion referred to in the letter, five were, I believe, Colonels Brett, Sankey, Morgan, and O'Reilly, and Major Shelley, the sixth having been either Colonel Brennan or Major Kinalley." The writer adds : "Major Shelley distinctly repeated to me in Pera, on the 13th February last, that though he could not recollect the exact words made use of, and which compelled him to quit General Beatson's room, yet that they were of so mutinous a character, that he considered it his duty to leave. His words to me were, 'I considered it direct mutiny.'" But had the case been different, General Vivian could not have acted otherwise. Circumstances had been reported to him involving a serious charge against General Beatson, and it was equally essential to that officer's character as to the public interests, that the affair should be thoroughly investigated. The sequel of the story is soon told. General Beatson's services having been dispensed with by the Secretary-for-War, that officer had already embarked for England; thither General Vivian soon followed him. Shortly after the arrival of the latter, the two officers met in London, and on alluding to the inquiry at Shumla, and finding that General Beatson was in ignorance on the subject, General Vivian, with his accustomed frankness, sought and obtained permission of the War Minister to communicate to him the information contained in his letter to Brigadier Watt. General Beatson acknowledged the document with thanks, but it now became evident that he had placed himself in a critical position. His denial of all intention to ignore or evade General Vivian's authority had assumed a most suspicious appearance, and he had just cause to apprehend that the matter would not be allowed to drop. What was to be done? Something perhaps might be gained by taking the initiative. After the delay of a few days, an expedient was adopted by the General, not unfrequently resorted to by those who find themselves in an awkward dilemma. He assumed the character of the aggrieved party, and took the offensive; and in a letter addressed by him to General Vivian, he modestly concludes by declining his acquaintance. Further comment upon the affair, beyond an expression of admiration at the dignity and forbearance shown by General Vivian, would be wholly superfluous.

THE TRADE OF CALCUTTA AND THE MUTLAH.

ONE of the most important and pressing questions connected with the prosperity of Calcutta is the accommodation afforded by the port for the shipping which resorts to it, and which is rapidly on the increase. Not only has the number of the vessels been increased, but their size and tonnage have also been augmented. For one vessel of 1,200 or 1,400 tons formerly seen in the Hooghly, there are now four or five. The tendency of the age is to the construction of large steamers and sailing-vessels, as a single vessel of 1,500 tons burthen is found to be cheaper than two vessels of half that tonnage. It is also affirmed, though not altogether without controversy, that the bed of the river Hooghly below Calcutta is silting up, by which the perils of the navigation are abundantly multiplied. In the course of nine years, the number of vessels totally lost in coming up to Calcutta amounted to no fewer than 36; the property lost exceeded a million; while the number of accidents arising from the increased difficulties of pilotage, which were recorded, did not fall short of 835. Under these circumstances, the attention of the local government and of the commercial community was turned to the Mutlah, a river to the east of the Hooghly, the head of which is only twenty-five miles from Calcutta. Another, and a more detailed survey of it, was made by Lieutenant Ward, of the Indian Navy, under the orders of Government, the result of which was to demonstrate that this river afforded those peculiar facilities for navigation which were wanting in the Hooghly. It was found that there was much less danger in approaching the mouth of the Mutlah than the Hooghly; the sands did not project so far out to sea, and a lighthouse planted on a sand which divides the channel, if sufficiently lofty, would be seen from a distance of thirty miles, and enable ships to keep clear of surrounding dangers, and even to run into safe harbourage without the aid of a pilot. The channel of the Mutlah is broad, and deep enough even for the leviathan steamer now on the stocks at Blackwall, if she draws only 35 feet, there being but one spot with so little as four fathoms at low water. Such a vessel might lie close in-shore, on the banks of the Mutlah, as this river, for depth of water, is found to equal any harbour in the world. Then again, there are no rapid or whirling tides, and the greatest velocity of the tide at the springs does not exceed four miles and a half an hour. Even if a vessel were to ground, there would be no risk of her rolling over and filling, by the force of the tide; and such calamities have often been witnessed in the Hooghly. No bore breaks in the Mutlah, and there are no shifting sands. The head of the river, where it is intended to establish the port of "Canning," is only sixty miles from the outside sands, and a vessel, with the aid of steam, might easily get to sea, during the neap tides, in a single day. The Mutlah, moreover, can be navigated at much less cost to the shipping. A vessel drawing 22 feet in Calcutta, would, from the difficulty and the delay in getting out to sea, cost Rs. 2,800 in steam and pilotage. In the Mutlah the charge would scarcely exceed Rs. 700. A vessel of 19 feet draught would cost Rs. 1,900 in the one, and not more than Rs. 550 in the other.

The Mutlah is connected with Calcutta by canals, and may therefore be immediately available. During seven months in the year, when the Nuddea rivers which feed the Hooghly are dry, nearly all the traffic of the north-west comes by the circuitous route of the Sunderbunds to the canals; and the goods could be at once shipped on board the vessels at the port of the Mutlah, without being subjected to a tedious and costly passage to Calcutta. A lighthouse and a few buoys, and an establishment of pilots, would at once open it to commerce. Some objections have been raised to the use of the Mutlah by those who are wedded to the old associations of the Hooghly; but the more they are examined the less substantial they appear. Objections have also been started by those who have property on the banks of the Hooghly, which may possibly be deteriorated; but the "partial evil" would be productive of "universal good." Every circumstance, therefore, combines to point out the Mutlah as affording the best facilities for the establishment of an auxiliary port to Calcutta, more especially for the accommodation of vessels of large burden. Nothing is wanting to complete these facilities but the construction of a rail, which might be completed in eighteen or twenty months, at a cost not exceeding 300,000*l*. That such a rail, even at the most moderate Indian rate of freight and passage, would pay a handsome dividend, there can be no manner of doubt, provided always that it be constructed on sound principles.

The realization of the plans connected with the Mutlah has already made considerable progress. The scheme was first opened to the public by a very enterprising firm in Calcutta,—Messrs. Borrodaile and Co., who have pushed it to the position it now occupies in general estimation by the most persevering and laudable efforts. They are now preparing to establish themselves in that locality.

The jungle is disappearing, and large fields of cultivation already give the country an aspect of civilization. Other mercantile firms have followed in their wake, and are now engaged in erecting store and screw houses, and other necessary buildings connected with shipping. A dry dock is likewise in course of construction, which will shortly be able to receive vessels of any size. A small screw-steamer has, ere this, been provided for the conveyance of passengers to Calcutta. Government has also engaged to provide a pilot brig, or floating light, to be stationed at the entrance of the Mutlah, and arrangements are in progress for the establishment of a custom-house at the new port. The amount of tonnage which may be expected in this river during the present season is estimated at 12,000 tons. Before the end of the present year the superior convenience of the Mutlah will become a matter of fact, based upon actual experience, and the rail will become a matter of necessity; and we shall then have a new auxiliary port, fully organized, at the estuary of a hundred rivers.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE INDIA BOARD AND SIR GEORGE POLLOCK.

In the discussion which took place in the House of Commons on Thursday evening, regarding the re-appointment of Sir George Pollock to the Direction of the East-India Company upon the expiration of his term of office, an important principle was enunciated, which does not appear to us to be founded either upon correct data or upon sound policy. The reason given by Mr. Vernon Smith to Sir George Pollock for declining to re-appoint him was this: "I am convinced," he says, "that it was the intention of the Legislature that a fresh appointment, and not a re-appointment, should be the general rule to be followed by the Minister of the Crown." We are at a loss to discover the ground of such an interpretation of the clauses of the Act relating to the subject. The law is thus laid down: "And every person who shall, or but for re-appointment or re-election would, cease to be a director by the expiration of his term of office, shall be capable of being forthwith re-appointed, or of being re-elected at the election holden on the day of the expiration of such term. And it shall be lawful for her Majesty from time to time, upon or after the expiration of the term of office of any director or directors appointed by her Majesty by warrants under the Royal Sign Manual, to appoint or re-appoint a person or persons to fill such vacancy or vacancies." It is, of course, impossible to know what was passing in the breasts of those who were parties to these clauses; but Acts of Parliament are, we presume, to be understood according to their letter and spirit. If it had been the intention of the Legislature, as Mr. Vernon Smith avers, to discourage re-appointments, why introduce clauses directly authorizing the practice? It seems, however, that the President of the Board himself does not seriously take this view of the question; for, in his speech the other evening, he explains that the real point which he felt it his duty to consider upon occasions of Government Directors completing their terms of office was, whether they were fit or not for further service. "It was my duty," he says, "to consider whether Sir Geo. Pollock was a fit person to be re-appointed, and I thought he was not." Without referring to the particular case under notice, further than expressing an opinion that Sir Geo. Pollock was equally able to perform his duties at the end of the two years for which he was appointed, as at the beginning, we freely admit that the more recent rule laid down by Mr. Vernon Smith is a wise and proper one to follow. But while we are glad to find that he has had the wisdom to allow a fair and salutary rule to supersede an unwise and improper one, we cannot help adverting to a subsequent alteration in his plan, which appears to impair its efficiency. "It becomes my misfortune," he says, "to be compelled to supersede a gentleman whom I do not think competent, from his infirmities of age, to discharge the duties of his office;" but he does not consider incompetency a sufficient ground for removal from office. "Nothing," he generously adds, "would have induced me to dismiss Sir Geo. Pollock."

We regret we are unable to congratulate the President upon the felicity of the mode he adopted of complimenting an old and distinguished officer, or upon the clearness and consistency of his principles of action.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.

THE shipping community were somewhat surprised on Wednesday last, the 11th inst., by the withdrawal of the invitation which had been published for tenders to convey two regiments of the line from this country to India. This alteration of plans has given rise to the surmise that the troops were required for the Persian war, and that in consequence of the success of negotiations in Paris between the ambassador Ferook Khan and Lord Cowley, hostilities will be suspended. The alteration, whatever be its cause, was made by her Majesty's Government, and not by the East-India Company. The latter only adopt the necessary measures for conveying to India such of her Majesty's troops as the Government may determine to send thither, provided they are not in excess of the number prescribed by Parliament for Indian service. It must, therefore, have been at the desire of her Majesty's Government that these troops are not now sent. We trust that the reason which we have noticed above is the true one; and we cannot but rejoice that the necessity of embarking troops at a time that would involve their arrival in India at a very unfavourable season has been avoided.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

Parliament was opened by royal commission on the 3rd instant. The following extracts from the royal speech are those alone which require notice in our columns:—

"Her Majesty has concluded a treaty of Friendship and Commerce with Siam, which will be laid before you.

"Her Majesty commands us to express to you her regret that the conduct of the Persian Government has led to hostilities between her Majesty and the Shah of Persia. The Persian Government, in defiance of repeated warnings, and in violation of its engagements, has besieged and captured the important city of Herat.

"We are commanded by her Majesty to inform you that a British naval and military force, despatched from Bombay, has taken possession of the Island of Karrack, and of the town of Bushire, with a view to induce the Shah to accede to the just demands of her Majesty's Government. Her Majesty has seen with satisfaction that the naval and military forces employed on this occasion have displayed their accustomed gallantry and spirit.

"Her Majesty commands us to inform you that acts of violence, insults to the British flag, and infraction of treaty rights, committed by the local Chinese authorities at Canton, and a pertinacious refusal of redress, have rendered it necessary for her Majesty's officers in China to have recourse to measures of force to obtain satisfaction.

"Those measures had, up to the date of the last accounts, been taken with great forbearance, but with signal success as regards the conflicts to which they had led.

"We are commanded to inform you that her Majesty trusts that the Government of Pekin will see the propriety of affording the satisfaction demanded, and of faithfully fulfilling its treaty engagements."

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FEBRUARY 3.

INDIAN COTTON.

Upon the debate on the Address, Mr. Hadfield said, he had prepared an amendment, which he should now postpone to another period, with reference to the production of the raw material for our cotton and silk manufacturers. He contended that a great amount of raw cotton and silk now imported from America and China might be supplied by India.

Mr. Vernon Smith said, he did not expect that the growth of cotton in India would have formed one of the many subjects to which the attention of the House had been called that evening. All that he could tell his hon. friend was, that the attention of the Government had been paid for some time past to the means of increasing the growth of cotton in India. Since the committee which sat upon the subject in 1848 there had been a steady progress in the growth of cotton in that country. The best means of increasing its growth was to secure for it a ready sale in England. It was perfectly well known that the cotton of India was inferior to that grown in America, and that it was only resorted to when there was a deficiency in the supply from America. But he did not deny that the Indian cotton was capable of considerable improvement. Machinery had been already sent out to India by which the improvement of the cotton was greatly facilitated, and its supply made more regular. The committee which sat in 1848 reported that no great improvement could be effected with respect to Indian cotton until the means of transport were increased. His hon. friend was perfectly aware that since 1848 great additional railroad communication had been provided in India, and he (Mr. V. Smith) confidently hoped that it would be the means of improving the cultivation of cotton in India. The people of Manchester asked the Government to guarantee them against loss if they should undertake the growth of cotton in India, but he should like to see its growth developed, not by Government guarantees, but by private enterprise, and he had no doubt that that enterprise would be well remunerated. He would be happy to receive any communications from his hon. friend on the subject.

FEBRUARY 4.

INDIAN COTTON.

Mr. Hadfield took the opportunity of objecting to the present form of communication from the Throne to the House. His chief objection was that in the last, as in most other communications of that description, there was not the slightest expression of sympathy towards our colonial fellow-subjects. The apathy of the Government in respect of our immense colonial possessions was astonishing, especially when it was remembered that for the supply of cotton—a matter of vital interest to this country—we were almost entirely dependent upon the United States, while in India we possessed territories where that article could be most extensively grown if the Government would only devote some little attention to the subject. He did not ask the Government to grow cotton or silk. He only made this reasonable request, that they should open a field in which the capital and skill of English manufacturers might be advantageously employed. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. V. Smith said, the question raised by the hon. member for Sheffield was of such importance both to this country and to India, that he should be extremely sorry to show indifference even in appearance, but he did not know how he could add anything to what he said last night. He did not exactly see what it was his hon. friend wished to have done. If his hon. friend would make a specific motion he should be ready to meet it. The accusation was general, that the Government of India had completely neglected the growth of cotton. That statement was exaggerated. A select committee had reported favourably of the efforts of the Government to introduce the cultivation of cotton into India, and since that time those efforts had not been relaxed. He supposed the hon. member, as a freetrader, would not have the cultivation of cotton made compulsory, and in the way of encouragement nothing had been left undone. Experiments as to the growth of American cotton in India had generally resulted in failure, and it was his belief that the indigenous plant ought to be cultivated in preference. It was true there was a deficiency of roads, but the Government had done all they could to promote railways and branch roads in order to facilitate the transmission of produce to the coast. The difficulty of the soil and the magnitude of the expense had, however, prevented the progress of railways in India being as rapid as was wished. The hon. member had opened up the whole question of land tenure in India. The subject was too large to discuss then, but he admitted that it was worthy of consideration whether, to induce the employment of capital, it might not be well to make the charges on land fixed instead of variable. (Hear.) He was anxious to see capital embarked in the development of the resources of India, and he should be glad to hear of companies being formed for the purpose. The complaints by the missionaries of the judicial and police systems were under investigation by the Government, and, in his opinion, that was a better mode of inquiry than by a commission, which might excite vague hopes and embarrass the Government.

FEBRUARY 6.

THE PERSIAN WAR.

Mr. H. Baillie inquired of the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any agreement had been entered into with the Indian Government respecting the expenses of the Persian war, and whether any or what portion of those expenses is to be paid out of the revenue of India; also whether her Majesty's ministers have admitted the claim of the Indian Government for the expenses of the last Chinese war, what the amount of the debt is, and why it has remained for so long a period undischarged.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer.—The arrangement which has been made by her Majesty's Government with the East-India Company in respect to the expenses of the Persian war is this—that her Majesty's Government shall propose to this House to grant payment of one-half of the extraordinary expenses of the Persian war out of the national exchequer, and the remaining half of the expense is to be borne by the East-India Company. This arrangement has received the approbation of the Court of Directors. In answer to the second question of the hon. gentleman, I have to state that the payment of the expenses of the former Chinese war has been so long postponed in consequence of a difference that existed between the Court of Directors and her Majesty's Government in respect to the terms of that settlement. The Court of Directors had understood that her Majesty's Government were to pay the entire expenses of that war, while the Government, on the other hand, considered that they were only bound to defray the extraordinary expenses. The matter remained unsettled until last year, when it was brought to a conclusion upon the principle that the extraordinary expenses of that war should be defrayed by the Imperial Government, those extraordinary expenses being understood to include everything beyond the ordinary expenses which the East-India Company would have had to bear for the maintenance of their fleet and army. The result of that settlement is that a sum of 590,693*l.* is due from the Government to the East-India Company; but, at the same time, I may inform the House that the East-India Company owes to the Government a larger sum than 590,000*l.* (a laugh), and therefore no money will have to be paid out of the exchequer this year on account of the last Chinese war.

FEBRUARY 12.

GENERAL POLLOCK AND THE INDIA BOARD.

Captain L. Vernon moved for copies of all correspondence relating to the removal of General Pollock from the direction of the East-India Company.

Mr. V. Smith.—My answer to the motion of the hon. gentleman is simply this:—There is no official correspondence in existence as to the non-reappointment of Sir G. Pollock. Sir G. Pollock never was removed from his office, and therefore the hon. member is doing Sir G. Pollock a wrong in speaking of his removal. (Murmurs.) That, sir, would be a sufficient answer to the motion of the hon. gentleman to prevent it being put from the chair, but he has entered with considerable detail into a question upon which I think it is my duty to follow him. As regards the preliminary part of his speech, in which he spoke of the achievements of Sir G. Pollock, it is utterly impossible for any one to deny the splendid victories achieved by Sir G. Pollock in Afghanistan, and I should be the last man to attempt to do so. I had occasion to mention them in public when I met Sir G. Pollock at a dinner at the East-India House, upon which occasion I said that that gallant officer had executed that magnificent manœuvre which drove the Khyberies from their precipitous fastnesses, and that Nadir Shah had only accomplished by corruption what Sir G. Pollock had done by force of arms. There is no statement which can be made of the glory of that officer's career which I am not ready to endorse. If the honours which Sir G. Pollock has received from the Crown have been an inadequate reward, the proper course would have been to move an address to the Crown, praying that further honours might be bestowed. I must say I have the greatest reason to complain of the conduct of the hon. member towards me. This is the first instance in my experience in which an hon. member has thought it his duty to read private letters, without first giving notice to the person whom they chiefly concerned. Those letters were private, as all who know the course pursued relative to the exercise of the patronage of the Crown are well aware. The hon. gentleman did not say whether he had the consent of Sir G. Pollock to read them, and I should doubt much whether that gallant officer would have sanctioned such a course. That, however, is a question between the hon. member and myself, but, nevertheless, it leaves me completely disarmed, as I have had no opportunity of referring to any notes of my own to ascertain whether there were other letters than those which have been read. As far as I recollect, the circumstances were these:—I knew I should be called upon in April, 1856, to appoint a director of the East-India Company. Several private communications took place between myself and the chairman of that Company, who asked me whether I intended to reappoint Sir G. Pollock; to which I replied, decidedly not; and in conversation I expressed to him, what I now repeat to the House, my extreme pain that I should not find it consistent with my duty to reappoint that gallant officer. I put the question whether Sir G. Pollock was willing to make any intimation to me, or whether he had any wish to be reappointed, but I never heard either from the chairman or Sir G. Pollock upon the subject. I am sure the House will believe that the most painful situation a public man can be placed in is when he is called upon by his public duty to act with what may appear harshness towards a person for whom he entertains the highest respect. If it is a charge against me that, in endeavouring to soften as much as possible any feelings of irritation which Sir G. Pollock might entertain, I went too far in the letter which has been read, I bow to the charge, and say, I would have gone thrice as far to avoid causing him pain. My impression in writing that letter was that I was paying Sir G. Pollock every compliment I could think of. (Laughter.) I repeat it. It was my duty to consider whether Sir G. Pollock was a fit person to be reappointed, and I thought he was not; and in writing that letter, I did all I could to lessen any irritation which he might feel. It was a painful duty to make such a communication to a man of his rank and character, but I did not choose to shrink from it. In 1853 a discussion took place in this House upon the India Bill, in which I and others who took part in it expressed opinions that the object to be gained by a Government nomination of East-India directors was the infusion of fresh blood into the direction; and my hon. friend the member for Huntingdon, went so far as to propose that no person should be elected a director who had been absent more than five years from India. Thus, when it became my duty to make a selection, I felt I could not recommend the appointment of Sir G. Pollock, and in his place I recommended Sir H. Rawlinson, a man of world-wide diplomatic and military character. Soon after Mr. L. Melville died, and I then recommended the appointment of General Vivian, upon the sole ground of advantage to the State. Surely I cannot be charged with improper motives or sinister objects in making those recommendations. If I had wished to consult my own convenience, there are no directors a President of the Board of Control would prefer to a gentleman who never interferes with him. The hon. member seems to consider the Board of Directors as a place of honourable retirement. ("No!") The hon. gentleman asked, was that a reward for Sir G. Pollock's services? No one thought it was a reward. His rewards were the dignities conferred upon him by his Sovereign and country. My duty was to supply the direction with new blood, to select the most useful men for the office. I have done so. The public and the press at home and in India have approved my choice. This motion is a proof of the difficulty which a minister experiences in the performance of his duties. There is an outcry for administrative reform, and hon. gentlemen are continually watching the actions of the Government to see whether they put "the right man in the right place;" and yet, when it becomes my misfortune to be compelled to supersede a gentleman whom I do not think competent, from his infirmities of age, to discharge the duties of the office, I am charged with an improper dismissal. I did not dismiss Sir G. Pollock, nothing should have induced me to do so; but the two years for which he was appointed having expired, I declined to reappoint him. The hon. member says I should thank him for having brought this matter forward; but I do not think he has given either Sir G. Pollock or myself any reason for thanks, as he has compelled me to state things which I have been most unwilling to say. My only desire has been to avoid wounding the feelings of Sir G. Pollock. (Hear, hear.) If I outstepped prudence in proposing that he should resign instead of not being reappointed, or if there be anything illogical in my letter, it arose from that motive. I shall never regret, nor am I now ashamed of the suggestion I made, or of the course I pursued. I consulted my noble friend at the head of the Government, and am convinced that I acted rightly in placing in the direction of the East-India Company men who are able to carry out with vigour those schemes of improvement which all Indian reformers press upon us, and which cannot be accomplished if the direction is allowed to become an effete and languid body. I presume the hon. member will not press his motion, as the papers are private documents which he has obtained I know not whence, but which I cannot believe, unless he tells me so, that he has obtained from a gallant and honourable officer like Sir G. Pollock. I should be sorry to put into any paper a statement that Sir G. Pollock was removed,—which, I repeat, never was done. His time of service had expired, and I did not shrink from what I believed to be my duty to appoint a person better qualified by great abilities and greater activity. (Hear, hear.)

After a few words from Mr. Disraeli and Lord Palmerston the motion was withdrawn.

THE PUNJAB RAILWAY.

It will be well for our capitalists to ponder seriously the facts and the figures stated in the prospectus of the above railway, and weigh well the grave risks of further compromise in the fortunes of foreign speculations. Let them look at home and home projects, where the gains are not of less promise, and of incomparably better assurance, than any of foreign origin. We should all feel how inseparably are the fortunes of every portion of our vast empire linked together, and how magnificently above all has India retributed with hundreds of per centages the comparatively few millions which the parent state has hitherto devoted to the partial development of her still incalculable and unexplored resources. We must all hail the welcome announcement by Mr. W. P. Andrew, of the Punjab Railway, in extension of the Scinde to Lahore and Umritsir, the two great political and commercial capitals of the Punjab, an extension of 230 miles. Having consummated all the preliminaries for his railway, by the Euphrates Valley through Asia Minor, to the head of the Persian Gulf, for which General Chesney has now secured the Imperial firman of the Grand Seignior, with the concession of important and exclusive privileges and securities for dividends, the "Old Postmaster" has lost no time in putting the finishing stroke to his grand enterprise, promised from the first for connecting and landing Europe, by one continuous line of steam power, rail and ship, on the north-western frontier of our own great India; from thence to radiate by other lines to the Ganges, and the mouths of the Ganges at will, or elsewhere by fresh lines and steam navigation, as the network links of the great Indian system are forged and perfected. It cannot fail to be perceived how tenaciously Mr. Andrew adheres to his happy original combination of the rail and the river routes, and how unreservedly now he carries all the world with him, from the Thames to the Indus and the Ganges. The new Punjab line cannot fail of success in such hands, hitherto no less favoured by fortune than by desert. Lancashire, above all, should be most deeply interested in, and, therefore, should be disposed most largely to contribute to, the success of this, as of his other undertakings. Blackwood enumerates among the most signal merits, or as the merit above all, of Lord Dalhousie's administration, the organisation and promotion of railways. But whilst his lordship's claims on that score need not be depreciated, it may be permitted to state that the "Old Postmaster" has prior and paramount claims to the honour of the initiation of an Indian railway system. Years ago, and before, or quite as early as the advent of the Governor-General, he was laying the groundwork, fighting the up-hill fight against ignorance and routine, of railways for India in England, and finally triumphing in success, aided by the Times, which, with rare sagacity, opened its world-read columns to the mighty work.—Manchester Courier.

NAVIGATION OF A SHIP.

A cause, Hartley v. Ponsonby, of considerable importance to the shipping interest, was heard in the Court of Queen's Bench, on the 13th Feb. The defendant had promised to pay the plaintiff, at Liverpool, 40*l.*, for taking a ship called the Mobile from Port Philip, Australia, to Bombay. The defendant was captain and part owner of the Mobile, a large ship of 1,000 tons burden, and having a complement of thirty-six hands. The plaintiff shipped on board the vessel at Liverpool, and signed articles at 3*l.* per month. The voyage was from Liverpool to Australia, and thence, if required, to the Chinese seas, and so home again. The ship took out emigrants to Australia, and arrived at Port Philip in October, 1852, when out of the thirty-six men, seventeen of them left the ship, and refused to sail any longer, it being the habit of the men to leave the ships and go to the diggings. The captain, when he found the seventeen men who had left would not return to their duty, made a proposal to the remaining crew, that if they would consent to work the vessel to Bombay, their wages should be increased to 12*l.* per month; but out of the nineteen men who constituted the remaining crew, there were only five able seamen. The captain gave the following document;—"I promise to pay Hartley 40*l.*, provided he assists in taking the ship from this port to Bombay, with the crew of nineteen." The defendant pleaded that he did not make this agreement; then that the plaintiff was bound by ships articles to perform the voyage irrespective of any new agreement. The plaintiff contended that the crew were incapable of navigating the vessel. When the vessel sailed the men were compelled to adopt one continued watch. The hardship and risk were extreme, and were endured by the men on the faith of the promise given by the captain. Upon the arrival of the ship at Liverpool the defendant refused to pay the plaintiff, and this action became necessary.

Mr. Justice Erle said, there were three questions: first, whether the men did not, in fact, refuse to go on the voyage from Port Phillip to Bombay, unless additional wages were agreed to; secondly, whether the captain could reasonably have obtained additional hands; and, thirdly, whether it was unreasonable and improper for the captain to proceed on the voyage with the reduced crew. A verdict was given for the plaintiff.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

LING v. CROKER.—CRIM. CON.—The plaintiff sought to recover damages for criminal conversation with his wife, and he laid his damages at 4,000*l.* The only plea was "Not guilty."

The plaintiff at the time of his marriage was a lieutenant in the 14th light dragoons, which regiment was then in India, and he was twenty-five years old. His wife was the daughter of Sir John Littler, the distinguished Indian officer. She was at the time of her marriage eighteen. The defendant, Major Croker, had been on the staff of Sir John Littler. The marriage took place in July, 1849. The plaintiff's regiment was then quartered at Lahore. In 1851 the plaintiff came to England with his wife and remained at home a year, during which time there was perfect harmony between them. The plaintiff and Mrs. Ling returned to India in January, 1853. In 1855, the plaintiff was sent home again with a detachment of his regiment. His wife embarked with him, and Captain Croker was a passenger. The vessel arrived in England in September, 1855, and at that time Sir John Littler had retired, and was residing at Bigadon, near Totnes, in Devonshire. On their arrival in England they were received at Bigadon with open arms. The plaintiff afterwards joined the 91st regiment, and obtained a commission in the Osmanli Irregular cavalry, better known as the Bashi-Bazauks, with the local rank of major; and in December, 1855, he left his wife and children at Bigadon, and proceeded to the seat of war. The plaintiff remained in the Crimea until late in 1856. His wife and two children were at Bigadon, and a very anxious feeling arose in the family from it appearing that a very active correspondence was going on between the plaintiff's wife and the defendant. Lady Littler became acquainted with circumstances that made her request that her daughter should leave Bigadon, and she therefore went to reside at Cawsand, near Plymouth. Shortly after she left Bigadon, a letter came from Major Croker, which Lady Littler thought it necessary to open, and that letter contained the most complete evidence of criminal intercourse having taken place at that early period. Major Croker continued to clandestinely visit Mrs. Ling, and to reside in the same house with her at several places; at Cawsand, near Plymouth, and in London. They finally were found living together as man and wife, under the assumed name of Thompson, at Allsop-terrace, New-road. To support the case of the defendant, letters were read purporting to be in the handwriting of Lieut. Ling, which showed that he was aware of the intimacy and correspondence that was going on between his wife and Major Croker. Evidence was produced by the prosecution to show that none of them were in the handwriting of Lieut. Ling. Mr. Justice Willes summed up, and said that if the jury believed that the letters had been written by the plaintiff, they would then consider whether they implied his consent to the adultery. If so, the verdict must be for the defendant. If they thought that the letters had been written by the plaintiff, but had not such an implication, then they must give a verdict for the plaintiff; but probably they would think the smallest coin in the realm would be sufficient damages. If they thought the letters forgeries, they would then say what was the amount of damages, aggravated as that amount must be by the defence set up. Verdict for the plaintiff—damages, 1,000*l.*

COURT OF EXCHEQUER, FEBRUARY 10.

COLLEGE DEBTS AT HAILEYBURY.—WOUFFE AND ANOTHER v. PROPERT.

The following case illustrates the nature of the temptations held out by tradesmen to induce students at college to run up bills and saddle their relatives with extortionate charges. By the verdict, debts incurred at school by students under age, without permission of their relatives and friends, are pronounced not recoverable by law.

The plaintiffs, tailors in Conduit-street and Misories, brought their action to recover 107*l.* for clothes supplied to the defendant, (who is the son of a surgeon in New Cavendish-street,) while a student at Haileybury College. The defendant pleaded infancy, and the plaintiffs replied that the clothes were necessities.

Woulfe the plaintiff deposed that in October, 1854, Proport gave him an order, and the clothes were sent down to Haileybury. All the articles in the bill were furnished except some which, although put down as clothes, were money lent and silks furnished. The bill was made out to go to the defendant's father in that shape. Woulfe lent Proport various sums at different periods, and received his I.O.U. Nothing was then said about the loan being entered as goods. The fictitious items amounted to 13*l.* 13*s.*

The Chief Baron, on summing up the case, observed that it was one which had given him great pain and mortification on many accounts. He grieved that the father of the defendant should be placed in the position in which he was by the extravagance of his son, and he was shocked to see one who was described as a respectable tradesman admit that he had conducted himself as the plaintiff had done in his dealings with the defendant while a student at Haileybury College. It was also painful that counsel should attempt to gloss over such conduct; and he, for one, must enter his protest against it, for he could not but consider it as highly discreditable. There were certain actions against which it was high time that a firm stand should be made by judges and jurors. The actions against husbands for goods supplied to extravagant wives, and for goods supplied to an excessive extent to infants, which were virtually actions against their parents, were such actions. This action was of the latter class; and the question was whether the goods for which it was brought were necessities, the defendant being clearly an infant at the time of their sale. In his opinion, a father, and not a tailor, was the proper judge, in point of law and fact, of what were or were not necessary articles of clothing for his son while in statu pupillari. Nor was the son the judge. He was not at liberty to contract debts and extravagant habits, because other young men did the same with whom he associated. What he should lay down to the jury now was, that if they believed the plaintiff dealt with the defendant as he somewhat unblushingly admitted he did, knowing that he was not of age, and was contracting debts which were unjustifiable, and for clothes which were not wanted, then they ought to find for the defendant. With respect to the loans, which were falsely charged as goods to the extent of thirteen guineas, the plaintiffs could not recover them in any form. When the character of the plaintiffs' dealings first came out, he (Sir F. Pollock) was more than surprised; he was shocked at the idea of an apparently respectable person so conducting himself in his business. Such transactions were about as dishonest and fraudulent as could well be. They sapped society and morals at the very roots, and were not less serious than the offences which had lately shocked the world. With regard to the rest of the bill, if the jury thought the plaintiff Woulfe went down to the inn near Haileybury to inveigle the students into giving him extravagant orders, and induced the defendant to give such orders, and lent money to the defendant with the design of charging it as goods, and knew that the supply of clothes was one which the defendant's father would not sanction, then he was of opinion that the plaintiffs could not recover even those items which were for goods so supplied. Where the supply is secret and fraudulent, the plaintiffs ought not to be allowed to enforce their claim. As to the mode in which the plaintiff had sworn the affidavit, it was, to say the least, very careless, and it was no excuse for him to put it on his attorney, and to say he swore it as a mere matter of form. The jury would look at the whole case, and say what they thought of it, and whether the goods were necessities.—Verdict for the defendant.

SIR FREDERICK CURRIE will be the next deputy-chairman of the East-India Company.

APPOINTMENTS.—Dr. Sandwith, whose name is so well known to the public in connection with the siege of Kars, has been appointed Colonial Secretary of the Mauritius, in the room of Mr. C. J. Bayley, now Governor of the Bahamas; Mr. Herbert Irving Bell to be Consul in the Mauritius for his Majesty the king of Sardinia; E. W. Alexander, Esq., to be Colonial Surgeon to the Island of St. Helena; T. Havers, Esq., to be a Member of the Executive Council of the Falkland Islands, during the absence of J. R. Longdon, Esq.; W. Forgan, and J. Aldous, Esqrs., to be Members of the Legislative Council of the Island of Prince Edward.

DIRECT CADETS.—We understand the following direct Cadets passed their examination for admission into the Company's service at Addiscombe on the 3rd instant, viz.—Messrs. E. A. Arbuthnot, F. S. S. Brind, J. G. Cloet, W. Cleland, A. E. Downing, J. Ducat, L. C. C. Daniell, S. De B. Edwards, J. Forsyth, C. J. O. Fitzgerald, J. H. Gordon, E. G. V. Holloway, W. Hamilton, P. D. Henderson, H. S. Johnson, A. Lindsay, A. F. Loughton, W. R. Martin, R. E. Maxwell, F. W. Merritt, C. P. Newport, A. Ollivant, A. P. Palmer, J. Wilkinson, H. F. Wilson, W. F. F. Waller.

THE SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY.—The report just issued by the directors of the Scinde Railway Company states that it is contemplated to merge the Punjab Railway Company into the Scinde Railway Company, in the event of the India authorities deciding upon the construction of the extension in question.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The report to be submitted to the proprietors on Thursday states that important progress has been made in the Company's undertaking. The first section of sixty-five miles of the South-West Line, from Madras to Arcot, was opened for traffic on the 1st of July last, and has been since at work uninterruptedly. In April a further opening of the line will take place to Vellore, and by October to Goriatta, fifteen miles farther.

MINISTERS AT FOREIGN COURTS.—The salaries of ministers at foreign courts amount to 124,222l. a year.

LIEUT. JOHN JEFFERIS, Madras Artillery, is about to send in his papers preparatory to resigning the service.

TEA DUTIES.—An Act, which was passed in 1855 to suspend the tea-duties on account of the war, will reduce the tea-duties to 1s. 3d. the lb. from the 5th of April next for twelve months, and thenceafter to 1s. the lb.

STEAM BETWEEN BOMBAY AND HONG-KONG.—The Peninsular Company has announced its intention of running steamers between Bombay and Hong-Kong, with branch steamers to Shanghai, in correspondence with the departures of the 20th of the month from Southampton onwards, and on the 9th of the month from Calcutta homewards. This extra service will commence with the steamer leaving Southampton on the 20th March, and be continued monthly till further notice.

TWO THOUSAND YOUNG SOLDIERS will shortly leave Chatham to join the head-quarters of their regiments in India. Each man has been instructed in the use of the Enfield rifle. Those corps on the Indian establishment in want of men to complete their strength, will be augmented from regiments which are above their prescribed establishment.

THE QUEEN'S BAYS AND 3RD DRAGOON GUARDS, in Ireland, have been ordered to hold themselves in immediate readiness to proceed to India. The 2nd Dragoon Guards embark for India in the spring. Several infantry regiments are also under orders for Indian service.

SILKWORMS.—At the meeting of the Society of Arts, Feb. 4, a paper was read "On experiments with silkworms, with a view to improve the present silk-yielding of Bengal," by M. F. Bashford, of Surdah, East-Indies. After having devoted his attention to silk-reeling in Bengal for nearly twenty years, with the view of producing a thread as fine and as well suited for manufacturing purposes in Europe as French and Italian silk, he had succeeded so far as to merit the medal of the Society of Arts for his superior quality over other Bengal, having surpassed China, and come up very close in the finer sizes to middling Italian. He gave some account of the various species of silkworms known in Bengal. It requires 10,000 of the best cocoons to produce one pound of good silk; in France 2,500 produce the same quantity. With a view to improve this produce, Mr. Bashford imported a large quantity of the best French, Italian, and China eggs, to engraft upon the different species of the Bengal race. Various details of the experiments were then given, but Mr. Bashford sums up by saying, that as he had spent three years in trying ineffectually to engraft a superior nature and invigorate the common stock, he felt discouraged, and would gladly have the opinion of naturalists as to the probability of his object ever been attainable, and the proper steps to be taken for realizing it. The paper concluded with some remarks upon the mode of rearing silkworms, practised by the natives in Bengal.

AN APPEAL FROM BENGAL, "Cochrane v. Hurosoondurric," has been concluded before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Appeal dismissed with costs.

A DIVIDEND of about 2s. in the pound, it is hoped, may at the expiration of two months, be declared on Syers, Walker, and Co.'s estate.

THE KING OF HOLLAND, as a mark of his satisfaction with the army of the Dutch colonies in India, has nominated his son, the Prince of Orange, a lieutenant-colonel in a regiment of infantry in that army.

DUTY ON TEA.—A public meeting of importers and dealers in tea was held at the London Tavern on Monday, at which resolutions were carried protesting against the proposed resolution of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, by which a war duty is to be retained on the above important article of general consumption, contrary to the Act of Parliament of 1855.

The Amount Insured was £2,752,197 7s. 2d.
The Annual Income was £118,557 10s. 3d.
Two Bonuses have been declared (in 1848 and 1853), adding nearly two per cent. per annum on the average to sums assured, and by which a Policy of £1,000 issued in 1842 on a healthy life, is now increased to £1,260.
Since the last division of Profits in 1853, the accumulated funds have increased by more than £105,000, offering considerable advantages to present assurers.

Profits divided every five years—next division in 1859.
The Society, since its establishment, has paid claims on 651 Policies, assuring £254,008.

Assurances are effected at home or abroad on healthy lives at as moderate rates as the most recent data will allow.
Indian Assurances at very moderate rates, and great facilities given to assurers.

Invalid Lives assured on scientifically-constructed tables.
Policies issued free of stamp-duty, and every charge but the Premiums.
Agents wanted for vacant places.
Prospectuses, Forms of Proposals, and every other information, may be obtained of the Secretary, at the Chief Office, or on application to any of the Society's Agents in the country.

C. DOUGLAS SINGER, Secretary.

A Bonus of Twenty per cent. from realized profits has been declared for the present year to all policy-holders on the profit scale who have paid five years' premium.

The advantages of this Society are as follow:—

Low Rates of Premium, calculated on the best and most recent investigations of mortality in India.
Annual participation in the profits after payment of premium for five years, by parties assured on the profit scale.

Immediate reduction of premium to the English rates in the case of a party assured proceeding to Europe for a permanency, and reduction after one year in the case of the party visiting Europe for a short period.

The civil rate only charged on the lives of parties in the military service, holding civil offices, as long as they continue in such office.

The Society also grants Deferred Annuities and Endowments payable at any given period.

Tables and full information may be had at the Office in Chatham Place; or on application to the Secretaries at Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or to the Agents of the Agra and United Service Bank, at the other Indian Presidencies.

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS, FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

THE First Number of the Overland Newspaper, which is to supersede the CIRCULAR hitherto forwarded to India by Messrs. W. THACKER and CO., was published and will be continued upon the day of the departure of each succeeding Overland Mail.

ON THE 10TH OF JANUARY, 1857,

In entering upon the field of competition with established Journals having the same object in view, it will be required of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. that they should explain on what peculiar ground they lay claim to public support.

Their long and intimate connection with the Anglo-Indian community entitles them to believe that every confidence will be placed in their assurance, that they will endeavour to deserve the preferences they seek to obtain; but they are aware, that even amongst their oldest and warmest friends, some practical demonstration of an intention to achieve superiority is expected.

Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. beg, therefore, to state that in their OVERLAND NEWS they propose to aim at a more perfect CONDENSATION of General News than has hitherto been attempted, that they may be enabled to devote a greater portion of their space to COMMERCIAL and MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The peculiar constitution of British Society in India, and the immense impulse that has been given of late years to Railway Speculation, Agricultural Improvement, and Commercial Enterprise in that vast Empire, suggest the importance of a close attention to all these matters, which bear particularly on the interests of the great classes concerned.

From several channels of information, hitherto closed or neglected, the fullest details will therefore be sought.

LITERATURE in all its branches, as bearing essentially on the experience of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., will receive, as hitherto, the minutest care; and as they have been able to secure the services of a gentleman who moves much in literary circles, occasional items of pleasant gossip, which do not find their way into the public journals, will embellish the pages of the OVERLAND NEWS.

Upon all subjects connected with Indian politics, the interests of the Services, contemplated Local Changes, the arrival in and departure from this country of Passengers, by Ship or Steamer, the retirement of Officers of all classes, &c., the greatest attention will be bestowed; while the intelligence from Europe, of a general nature, will be presented in a striking form, accompanied by such Commentaries as may be expected from the pen of an experienced Journalist.

In a word, Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. hope that their Paper will be all that the best papers have hitherto been—AND SOMETHING MORE.

The Publication will be of the same size as the ordinary English Overland Papers, viz., a folio of Twenty-four pages, with Supplements when necessary, and it will be issued in time for transmission to India by each Fortnightly Mail, via Marseilles. The Price, inclusive of postage, will be Rs. 8 per annum, payable in advance. Orders to be addressed to Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., 87, Newgate Street, London; Messrs. THACKER, SPINK, and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Calcutta; Messrs. THACKER and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Bombay; and Mr. JAMES HILL, Lucknow.

J. C. particularly solicits those gentlemen who despair of obtaining comfortable Boots, as from his great success and consequent increase of business, he is confident of their becoming regular customers. The leather used is dressed so as not to draw the feet or become hard in wear, although it requires blacking in the ordinary way. Established 1825.

SURVEYING ARMY APPOINTMENTS IN INDIA. OFFICERS at Home on Furlough, and GENTLEMEN CADETS, desirous of qualifying themselves for the Diplomas in SURVEYING and ENGINEERING, may obtain the requisite information by applying to Mr. HENRY JAMES CASTLE, Associate of the Institute of Civil Engineers, and Lecturer in Surveying and Levelling at King's College, London, who is at all times prepared to give Private Instruction (or to form a class for practical Field-work) in the uses and application of the several instruments required for Surveying and Levelling. If desired, one or two Pupils could reside with the Lecturer.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS matchless remedies for Inveterate Ulcers.—Mrs. Anne Edwards, of Gloucester, was a great sufferer for nearly twelve years with several obstinate ulcers in the legs, accompanied with a continual and preternatural discharge, corrupting the entire system, resisting every mode of treatment devised by her medical attendant and others of the faculty. Having heard of the numerous cures effected by Holloway's Pills and Ointment, she was induced to give them a trial, and to the astonishment of herself and friends was quickly and soundly cured.

Sold by all Medicine Vendors, and at PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY'S Establishments, 244, Strand, London, and 80, Maiden Lane, New York; by A. Stampa, Constantinople; A. Guidicy, Smyrna; E. Muir, Malta; and by East Indians.

UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF ROYALTY AND THE ARISTOCRACY THROUGHOUT EUROPE.

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, an Oriental botanical preparation, for improving and beautifying the Complexion. It eradicates all redness, tan, pimples, spots, freckles, discolorations, and other cutaneous visitations. The radiant bloom it imparts to the cheek, and the softness and delicacy which it induces of the hands and arms, render it indispensable to every toilet. During the heat and dust of summer, or frost and bleak winds of winter, and in cases of sunburn, stings of insects, chilblains, chapped skin, or incidental inflammation, its virtues have long and extensively been acknowledged.—Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

SOUND and WHITE TEETH are not only indispensably requisite to a pleasing exterior in both sexes, but they are peculiarly appreciated through life as highly conducive to health and longevity by the proper mastication of food. ROWLAND'S ODONTO; or, Pearl Dentifrice, compounded of Oriental ingredients, imported by the Proprietors at a great expense. This Powder is of inestimable value in preserving and beautifying the teeth, imparting to them a pearl-like whiteness, strengthening the gums, and in rendering the breath sweet and pure.—Price 2s. 9d. per box.

CAUTION.—The words "ROWLAND'S ODONTO" are on the label, and "A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, HATTON-GARDEN," engraved on the Government stamp, affixed on each box. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

WATCH, CLOCK, and CHRONOMETER MANUFACTORY. 33 and 34, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON. ESTABLISHED 1749.

J. W. BENSON, MANUFACTURER of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES of every description, construction, and pattern, invites attention to his magnificent and unprecedented display of Watches, which is admitted to be the largest and best selected Stock in London. It consists of Chronometer, Duplex, Patent Detached Lever, Repeating, and Vertical Movements, Jewelled, &c., with all the latest improvements, mounted in superbly-finished engine-turned and engraved Gold and Silver Cases. The designs engraved upon many of the cases are by eminent artists, and can only be obtained at this manufactory. If the important requisites, superiority of finish, combined with accuracy of performance, elegance, durability, and reasonableness of price, are wished for, the intending purchaser should visit this Manufactory, or send for the ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, published by J. W. BENSON (and sent post-free on application), which contains sketches, prices, and directions as to what Watch to buy, where to buy it, and how to use it. Several hundred letters have been received from persons who have bought Watches at this Manufactory, bearing testimony to the correct performance of the same. The following extracts from the opinions of the Press will, it is hoped, be a sufficient guarantee to the public that they may secure at this House a good Watch at a reasonable price:—

NEW GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

OF

AND OF THE

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq., Author of the "History of the British Empire in India."

The work has been compiled by the authority of the Court of Directors, and though comprised within a single volume, it will be found to contain the great mass of information comprehended in the four volumes of the "Gazetteer of India," published by the same author in 1854. This result has been obtained by retrenching some few redundancies, and by adopting an enlarged page and distributing the matter into two separate columns. By these means space has been also acquired for the insertion of much new matter, rendered necessary by the political and territorial changes which have more recently taken place within our Eastern Possessions.

On the character of the work a few remarks will be sufficient. Its chief objects are,—

- 1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and
- 2ndly. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these will be added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which could not otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The volume, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has yet been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India. Its merits have been frequently discussed in the General Courts of the East-India Company, where successive Chairmen have borne ample testimony to the utility of the publication, and where it has been characterized by the best-informed among the Proprietors as "a complete history of India, untainted in any degree by political bias."

INDIAN DIRECT INFANTRY APPOINTMENTS.—With the sanction of the Hon. the Court of Directors, CLASSES will be formed at the Military College, Addiscombe, during the ensuing Christmas and Midsummer Vacations, to prepare for examination Gentlemen who have received, or may receive, nominations to Direct Infantry Appointments.

For further information, apply to I. T. HYDE, Esq., Addiscombe, Surrey.

HINDUSTANI IN CLASSES.

THE REV. G. SMALL, believing that many Ladies and Gentlemen, though aware to some degree of the desirableness of acquiring, at least, the rudiments of Hindustani before going to India, are yet deterred from doing so by the usual expensiveness of a course of private lessons under a competent teacher in this country, proposes to form CLASSES for the study of that most useful language, on very economical terms, for Ladies as well as Gentlemen.

A Class for the latter is now being made up, and will take its first lesson on THURSDAY next, at 4 P.M. in Mr. Small's Oriental Class Room, No. 3, Leadenhall-street.

For Terms, &c. address, 1, St. John's-grove, Croydon.

N.B.—Mr. S. has been a Teacher of Languages for upwards of 20 years, ten of which were spent in India.

ILFRACOMBE, NORTH DEVON.

THERE are VACANCIES in a select Establishment, where only a limited number of Pupils are received. For Children from India, or others, where ENTIRE CHARGE is required, the situation and domestic arrangements will be found to possess peculiar advantages. References of the highest respectability forwarded, on application to MISS BLUNDELL, Montpellier House, Ilfracombe.

Dec. 5th, 1856.

MRS. PARKER, assisted by her sister, Miss BARBER, RECEIVES CHILDREN whose Parents are in India, from the earliest age till they attain their tenth year.

Terms, exclusive of clothing and medical attendance:—

- Under four years 45 guineas.
- Four till eight 55 guineas.
- Eight till ten 65 guineas.

Mrs. Parker and her Sister have had great experience in the management and education of Children, and are permitted to refer to their uncle, Captain James Barber, a name well known to the Indian community. Other references will be given if desired.

Their residence is spacious and airy, and the locality the most healthy part of St. John's Wood.

No. 2, Springfield Place, Abbey Road.

BOARD and RESIDENCE, JERSEY.—An Officer on furlough, married, or a single invalid, may find a HOME in the house of an officer's widow, replete with English comforts, in this desirable climate, on the low terms of 25s. per week; a small room, less. The family is private.

Address to N. G. G., Mr. Walter's Library, Queen Street, Jersey; or Messrs. White and Co., East-India Agents, Haymarket, London.

HOLLAND-HOUSE MILITARY COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH.

T. KIMBER, M.A., London, Principal.

R. THACKERAY, A.B. St. John's, Cam., Resident Master.

Terms, 60 and 80 guineas per annum; 12 ditto per month.

Referees:—The Rev. Dr. Jelf, Principal of King's College, London; Lieut.-Col. Arbuthnot, Madras Cavalry, &c. &c.

The "Outline of Education" sent post-free from Holland House, or the Publishers of Mr. Kimber's works, Wivingshoe, Waterloo Place; and Parker and Son, 440, West Strand.

HANWELL COLLEGE.—PREPARATION for ADDISCOMBE and DIRECT APPOINTMENTS.

The TERMS of this long-established, economical and successful Institution, will be sent on application to the Rev. J. A. EMERTON, D.D., Principal.

"Hanwell College is fully sustaining its high character."—United Service Gazette.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

By the Mail just arrived, we have intelligence from China to the 15th January. A large number of war-junks having been previously collected in the creeks of the river, the Chinese on the 4th of that month made an attempt at low water to retake one of their captured forts, generally known as the Macao or Tea-Totum Fort. In endeavouring to quit her anchorage off the factory ruins, her Majesty's steamer Encounter unfortunately grounded, and the assault of the Chinese was sustained by the fort, the steamer Coromandel, and sundry men-of-war's boats, until the rise of the tide, when the Encounter being enabled to join in the fight, the junks were immediately withdrawn into shallow water, beyond the range of the British guns. Mr. Pearn, master's assistant, of H.M.S. Calcutta, in charge of one of the cutters of his ship, was struck down during the action by a twenty-pound shot from the Chinese. Surgical assistance was obtained from the Encounter, but the wound proved mortal, and Mr. Pearn lingered only a few hours. This gallant youth had been in charge of the same boat throughout all the previous operations, and was looked upon as an officer of high promise. The wounded consisted of six seamen and one boy of the first class, who was severely burnt on board the Coromandel, whilst in the act of screwing in a rocket-staff, which accidentally ignited. The loss on the side of the Chinese is concluded to have been considerable, as the Minié rifles of the marines were observed to commit fearful execution. A few days later, the British authorities at Canton deemed it indispensable to the public safety to destroy the suburbs west of the city, and on the 12th the whole of these were burned to the ground. We regret to add, that in the performance of this service a party of H.M.'s 50th regiment missed their way, and, approaching the city wall, were fired upon by the Chinese, having two men killed, eleven severely wounded, and ten slightly wounded. It was stated in our last Summary that the postal steamer Thistle had been attacked by Chinese war-junks whilst towing the London, laden with valuable bale-goods, and had narrowly escaped.

destruction. That which open force failed to effect was, however, subsequently accomplished through the instrumentality of insidious foes. A band of assassins in disguise had mingled with the native passengers of the Thistle, and contriving to avoid suspicion, fell suddenly upon their unsuspecting victims and barbarously murdered the foreign crew and every European on board. The ill-fated vessel was then carried off, and after being dismantled was finally burned. We transcribe the details of the frightful tragedy from the Overland Friend of China:—

“With the shot-holes in her bows, and stack temporarily plugged, Capt. Weslien, undaunted by the attack on him on the night of the 22nd ult., again proceeded with the Thistle on Sunday last on his customary voyage to Canton. The up trip was concluded successfully. On the way down, the water being low in French River, the vessel took the mud, and so choked her feed-pipes that a little below Whampoa, on Tuesday morning, it became necessary to anchor for the purpose of cleaning them. The steamer had not long been under way, when the captain left the upper deck with a Manilla man sununny at the wheel, and proceeded towards the engine-room hatchway, where he was in the act of stooping forward, looking down, when an assassin from behind stabbed him with one of those short pointed swords of which every China householder in Hongkong has one or more pairs. The first engineer, Mr. Abraham, an American, was on the other side of the hatchway at the time, and was similarly assailed; two Manilla men sununnies were working at a hand-pump below, and soon shared the same fate—one man got into one of the coal bunkers, and there, afterwards, unable to get out when the vessel was set on fire, was burnt to death. A passenger in the cabin, a Portuguese gentleman, whose name we do not publish until further assured of the person, together with his servant, a Portuguese, were also murdered, as was a sick artilleryman who was lying down forward, and who was the first victim. The captain on being stabbed ran aft, but fell before he reached the cabin-door. The mate, Petersen, succeeded in getting into the cabin, and fired several muskets at the wretches as they attempted to get hold of him. A stink-pot thrown into the cabin at last drove him overboard, and he will have been drowned, as he was never seen to rise. The Manilla man at the wheel was killed from behind, without seeing the hand that wielded the weapon. In all, eleven persons were thus disposed of, and search was made for the Chinese boys employed in the cabin, one of whom, by jumping overboard and hiding under the counter of the vessel, succeeded in escaping, as did the others in other ways. The Chinese firemen were then directed to remain at their work, and the vessel was steered up the creek called by the Chinese Chowmee, to the village of Lamkongtow, distant some half a dozen miles inland. There her wood-work was set on fire, and when that was destroyed, every particle of brass-work that could be removed was taken away; in fact the vessel is so much disabled that it is questionable whether it is worth while to repair her. The assassins, said to have numbered under a dozen in all, lost no time in walking off with the heads of their victims in handkerchiefs, and, at Canton, we suppose, will receive the rewards said to be offered for such commodities by the gentry and people.”

We stated in our last that Admiral Seymour was busily engaged in strengthening his position in the locality at Canton designated “The Gardens.” Later advices inform us, that he had decided on blowing up the Dutch Folly, retiring from the Gardens, and making the Birds-nest fort his outpost, where it was anticipated he would be able to remain until the arrival of reinforcements. At Hongkong serious apprehensions were entertained with regard to the disposition of the native population. The police force of the colony had been consequently augmented, and precautionary measures adopted against incendiarism. On the morning of the 15th January an attempt was made by a Chinese baker, named Esing, to poison the foreign community by mixing arsenic with his customers' bread. All who partook of the bread were seized with the usual vomiting, but, at the latest date, no deaths had ensued, although great numbers had been seriously ill. No trace had been obtained of Mr. Cowper, who, it will be recollected, was kidnapped at Whampoa. The French admiral had, in the most handsome manner, offered the services of the crews of La Virginie and steamer Catinat whenever they might be required. The Americans had also landed a guard. In answer to a deputation of merchants who waited upon Sir John Bowring in reference to the question of compensation for property destroyed or abandoned at Canton, Sir John replied, that the matter had been submitted for the decision of the home Government.

From Persia the intelligence is to the 17th January. There, active operations appear to have been succeeded by a comparative calm; and the course of affairs has been marked by little progress subsequently to the date of our previous advices. An attack on the British troops encamped near the city of Bushire had been expected, but up to the latest date the British camp remained unmolested. A detachment, consisting of British cavalry and horse artillery, had been despatched to a distance of twenty-two miles from camp, for the purpose of destroying a depôt of Persian stores and ammunition, an object which was effected without a casualty on the part of the assailants. The task was intrusted to Colonel Tapp; and the masterly manner in which he executed it is thus acknowledged by the general in command:—

Major-General Stalker tenders his best thanks to Lieutenant-Colonel Tapp and the officers and men of the detachment, which has so entirely and satisfactorily carried out the object of destroying the enemy's depôt at Chakotah, and returning to camp last night, after marching a distance of forty-four miles. The major-general begs that Major Wray and Lieutenant Ballard, C.B., who accompanied the party, will also accept his best thanks.

Up to the latest date from the Persian Gulf, the soldiers, though complaining of the discomfort arising from the extremes of cold and heat, were, on the whole, in the enjoyment of good health, the 2nd Europeans forming the only exception; but this regiment, it will be borne in mind, were suffering from severe sickness on leaving Sind. Supplies were plentiful, the town of Bussorah being the principal source, though the Persians themselves were more serviceable in this respect than could have been anticipated, and were bringing in forage, grain, carrots, and other vegetables of fine quality.

A new five per cent. loan has been opened by the Government of India. The amount is limited to three crores of rupees, or three millions sterling.

At Bombay no relaxation had taken place in the energetic preparations which we have previously noticed for the organization of additional reinforcements for service in the Persian Gulf. General Outram, it will be recollected, left Bombay to join the expedition on the 17th January.

Since the departure of the general (says the Bombay Times), the 14th light dragoons and 78th Highlanders have left Bombay. A battalion 1,000 strong, consisting of the light and left flank companies of ten of our native regiments, is preparing for embarkation, to be commanded by Lieut.-Col. Le-Grand Jacob, one of the ablest officers in the presidency. The Sind horse are on their way, the Southern Mahratta horse under Col. Malcolm, who so distinguished himself at Gozerat in 1849, when in command of a portion of the Sind horse, were on their way to the presidency for despatch, when they were, for the present, countermanded. The 26th N.I. sailed on the 19th January, and a portion of the 23rd N.I. and the light battalion are on the point of embarkation; the whole of the infantry from Neemuch and Nusseerabad and the Rajpootana, consisting of the 87th, 10th, 21st, are under orders for the presidency, their places to be supplied from Bengal; and these are nearly all that Bombay can supply.

Madras, by this Mail, furnishes no intelligence deserving of particular notice.

DEATH OF COLONEL WHITTIE.—The circumstances attendant on the death of Colonel Whittie are so distressing that we have hitherto refrained from noticing the sad event at all. Our Deccan contemporary having broken silence on the subject, we may now mention the following particulars, as contained in a letter of one of the passengers. Col. Whittie had for a considerable time past been suffering from severe indisposition, during which symptoms of mental aberration frequently made their appearance. It was hoped that by protracting his stay in the Deccan, these might become mitigated, and he was averse to leave on surgeon's certificate so long as his departure could be deferred. He left on the 10th of January, by the Seringapatam, and for some time seemed to improve. Shortly after quitting the cuddy-table on the 18th of the same month, where he had dined and conversed with the other passengers, he retired to his own berth, called for pen and ink, and having written a few hurried lines, stating that, "through a frightful confirmed insanity, existence had become insupportable to him," he made his way through the port-hole to the main chains, and there cut himself several times in the neck with a penknife. He seems to have hung on by one hand for some time, when faintness from bleeding or a lurch of the ship caused him to drop into the sea. A boat was immediately lowered, and the poor sufferer picked up before life had become wholly extinct. He breathed his last a few minutes after being taken into the boat. By this casualty Captain (Brevet Lieut.-Colonel) T. W. Hicks, 1st Lieut. R. H. Keatings, and 2nd Lieut. F. F. Sheppee, will be promoted to the grades of major, and captain, and 1st lieutenant, respectively.—Bombay Times.

PERSIA.

INTELLIGENCE FROM BUSHIRE.

Our (Bombay Times) correspondent at the seat of war has favoured us with the following letter per steamer Bombay. It is with much regret we notice the sickness prevalent amongst the 2nd Europeans:—

"Bushire, 15th January, 1857.—The arrival of her Majesty's ambassador from Bagdad is the only event of importance since my last. The Hon. Mr. Murray has taken up his quarters with Commander Jones in the fort, and our future proceedings form the subject of daily council between them and our military and naval chiefs. Of course, nothing can be definitely settled until further reinforcements arrive; and even then cattle must be had to advance into the passes with, for from our present limited mode of conveyance nothing more than the regular daily camp duties can be expected, and that they are so well performed is entirely owing to the very efficient commissariat establishment that was selected to accompany this force. We must look to local supplies, all that Bombay can afford in the way of camels and bullocks will scarcely remove the provisioning department; but men must have more than their daily food to look to. Their kits must be carried, tents must be moved along with them, medical ordnance and engineer stores also require conveyance; and if we are to place our sole dependence on Bombay, the warm season is sure to find the army still encamped on the sandy plain before Bushire. Our information from the interior is certainly of a nature little to be depended on. We hear one day that the Shah has offered to subscribe to our terms at any price, even the sacrifice of his sea board key; and the next that he has sent from five to fifteen thousand men to attack our entrenchments. These rumours have the effect of keeping the troops on the alert. As a necessary precaution, our general sends out reconnoitering parties to the foot of the hills. These have certainly never met with opposition, probably none was expected, yet the information acquired is useful; and in a recent order the major-general publicly commended the valuable services of our cavalry chief, Colonel Tapp, who conducted one of these parties.

"A couple of forts were likewise blown up some twelve or eighteen miles from this, in one of the recent expeditions. Powder and other warlike ammunition were found there in quantities, and stores of grain; of the latter, some was received before the train was set on fire. A move of the whole force, leaving a few guards in camp, was made the other day in the direction of Rushire, where the men were allowed to rest, and then taken towards the inner creek, whence they marched into camp in the evening. All the politicals accompanied the force, but they did not meet any armed parties in their progress. The few villagers about us are mostly of the Arab race, and appear to gain a living in the fishery trade. We had a false alarm during the dark nights, when the troops were kept under arms for some minutes, and it was ascertained that one of the horses had broken loose from the outlying pickets, and had galloped pell-mell into camp. Although it is evident that there is no body of armed men about us, it is equally clear, that in the fort still lives a disaffected rabble who are not reconciled to our invasion. A few nights ago, the sentry of the 20th N.I., on the captured arms in the fort, was set upon by a number of Persians, the foremost of whom made a cut at him and mutilated his hand. The noise roused the sergeant-major of the Rifles, who was in charge of the prize-property, and who, with the guard, succeeded in chasing off the ruffians. One of the bazaar sentries was similarly attacked and butchered a few nights ago. The arsenal has been established in the citadel, lately occupied by the Dehria Beg in the fort, where it has been found prudent to close the gate at sunset. The camp has been thoroughly entrenched under the directions of our indefatigable chief engineer, and the captured guns placed in position complete in all respects. Under the superintendence of Mr. John Furlong, late of Dapoorie, a garden has been marked out, and it is confidently expected that in a few months the force will be supplied with vegetables therefrom. We had a few showers yesterday, but not before they were wanted. A strong wind has sprung up to-day, and the clouds of sand that are being blown about are perfectly blinding. The health of the troops is, with the exception of the 2nd European regiment, fairly reported on; the 64th have about two per cent. on the sick list, but the 2nd regiment has nearly half its strength prostrated by fever. It was a shame to send such a regiment on service. The natives feel the cold acutely at night, and were it not for the care with which warm clothing was sent up by the Bombay Government, no doubt we should hear of many of the poor fellows knocking down."

THE FLEET AT BUSHIRE.

We subjoin an extract from a local contemporary on the share taken by the fleet in the capture of Bushire. The statements of the writer are in perfect accordance with all we have heard on the subject, falling considerably short on some points of what is currently believed. The term "ignorance and sycophancy of the Bombay press" applies to a single paper only; all the other journals spoke distinctly and firmly, though in a tone of studied moderation, on the deficiencies of the commander of the fleet. The gallant admiral was, through the most injudicious kindness of his friends, placed in a false position, and his successes were infinitely less than was apprehended. However unpopular he may be with the service over which he presides, or however much he may merit unpopularity, his personal respectability and private character are such as to command the esteem of his critics. The naval despatches are said by naval men to be fanciful beyond conception. It is asserted that the ships commenced the cannonade without any order from the shore, and that General Stalker, with all his suavity, felt compelled to remind his colleague afloat that it was to the general, and not the admiral, the conduct of the expedition had been committed. So far from any breach having been established, the engineer who examined the defences after the surrender is understood to have affirmed that he failed to perceive the effects of the shot on the walls at all. Although the Persians had above sixty guns in their possession, only six of them, it is affirmed, could be made to bear upon the fleet. The gallant admiral's ship was so far away, that her guns required to be elevated to an angle of 30 deg., and so utterly demolished their own carriages, that they were all, on her return, sent into store. They are said at this elevation to have thrown shot to a distance of 2,800 yards, and to have endangered our own troops advancing from the other side. Had the land force advanced as the fleet got into position, and the gun-boats been turned to account, not one of the garrison could have escaped, and the whole of the arms and property carried away before our eyes would have become booty of war. The Harry o' the Wynd system of fighting, every man to his own hand, might do very well in the days of single combat, it is not quite so suited for modern tactics; and much more would have been effected had Harry of the Fleet thought a little more of Poster o' the Force:—

"In your issue of the 30th December, I see you have a most fulsome editorial remark on the capture of Bushire, censuring the Crimean generals for their want of success, and praising the wonderful celerity of the present operations. Without at all desiring to determinate or diminish the éclat so justly due to the commanders, naval or military, of the Persian expedition, yet your extraordinary laudation of the gallant actions performed here must, in the opinion of all well-informed men, throw contempt on the whole affair; as first, there is as much difference between the fortifications of Sebastopol and Bushire as between the little Augusta pilot schooner, and the gallant admiral's ship the Assaye, and under any circumstances Bushire is not capable of making a long defence, while the enemy has command of the plain outside, and likewise the sea, as in the town they are dependent on the rain of heaven, and on wells two miles outside their gates for a supply of water. Up to this time there has been no rain this winter, consequently the reservoirs within the town are empty, and the wells were in our possession, and beyond the range of the guns from the town wall; so what defence could they have made without water to drink. This is one thing which has been overlooked or otherwise wilfully concealed in the exaggerated reports of the capture of this miserable place. Between the lower gates and the walls there is a rising ground with a large tower surrounded by a trench; this may have some slight resemblance to the Malakoff, and in the hands of a resolute enemy capable of making a most vigorous defence; but it was abandoned at the approach of our troops—the only fighting was at Bushire, which place was occupied by some Arabs of the Darlta and Tongostone tribes. They made a bold defence, but were overpowered by the number and gallantry of our troops; and you may judge by the number of unfortunate officers who fell through their own impetuous zeal that there was sharp work at that place,—but there the fighting ended. The firing from the ships did not silence the batteries or do any injury to the town walls, and it is plain to anyone here that such is the truth. Sir Henry Leeke says in his dispatch that he intended to breach the town walls ready for the general to enter without delay, but whatever his intentions were, there is no breach in the walls sufficient to admit a cat, or even a mouse: what might have been done afterwards is impossible to say, but one thing is certain, that if the gunboats and small steamers had been sent round to the creek inside of the town they could have prevented the Persian troops escaping by water with their arms—what most of them did do. It is reported that the Persian cavalry was cut to pieces in attempting to escape; the true story of which is this,—as one army advanced across the plain of the Isthmus towards the town walls with the line extended from sea to sea, nine Persian sowars were observed to leave the gate and advance slowly towards our line, walking their horses. Our officers supposed that they were coming to surrender, and did not fire on them; when within a few paces of our line, they dashed right through. Seven of them were pursued and shot dead, one was wounded and had his horse shot under him, and was taken prisoner; the other gallant fellow escaped. All the officers I have spoken to, say it was the most gallant thing they could possibly imagine. I have to add that the fortifications of Bushire are by no means despicable; and held by a resolute enemy, supplied with water and provisions, could have made a bold resistance. I rather think that the Government never expected much resistance, or they would have sent a larger force. I have seen Sebastopol, and have walked round the walls of Bushire, and rode round this second Malakoff, but to compare one with the other as you have done, Mr. Editor, will only expose the whole affair to the contempt of foreigners. The French frigate Sibylle I hear is coming up; if so, how her officers will laugh at the gross exaggerations in the public despatches, and at the ignorance and sycophancy of the press in Bombay. I am an old tar myself, and glory in the success of my country's arms. I have often witnessed the valour displayed by the red jacket and the blue, but at this place the defence was too contemptible to make a boast of it. I fear many a gallant heart will cease to beat before the British flag is planted on the walls of Shiraz, let alone Teheran, although you, Mr. Editor, think it a very easy matter."

BENGAL.

THE DEPUTY MAGISTRATE OF JUMALPORE.

The deputy magistrate of Jumalpoore has been dismissed. Mr. Cockburn, it will be remembered, came about ten months since into conflict with the military authorities. In that instance he was turned out of his own house by military force, and we considered him unjustifiably oppressed. His subsequent proceedings place him in a very different light, and we fear justly fully his summary dismissal.

Certain sepoys of the 6th N.I. were, it appears, accused of participation in a dacoity near Jumalpoore. The accusation has been declared by the zillah judge to be without foundation, but whether the charge were true or false it was of course the deputy magistrate's duty to inquire into the matter. They were accordingly demanded from the military authorities and forwarded in due course to the thannah. There they remained for different periods, in no case less than three days and nights. And there it appears they were subjected to torture to extort a confession of their crime. The evidence as to this point is apparently irresistible. The sepoys themselves who bring the accusation were subjected by the magistrate of Mymensing to the most rigid cross examination. Their accounts, however, never varied; their descriptions of places and persons were never inaccurate, and but one man erred in his calculation of the time during which he had suffered. Four of them in particular deposed that they were taken on board a boat by the Darogah, and there pinioned and beaten with a heavy ruler over different parts of the body. The crew of the guard boat admitted their presence, though of course they refused evidence against the Darogah. The fact of their being put into the stocks was not denied. The Amlah admitted that they had heard of their being beaten, and the magistrate himself found a wound on one of them. They still refused to confess, and on being carried to the deputy magistrate's bungalow, charged the Darogah, they say, with the offence. This, however, is denied. What is certain is that they were returned to the thannah without examination, but with the remark from Mr. Cockburn, "Are these your confessing witnesses?" It will be remembered that the Thannah is used ordinarily as the Cutcherry, that Mr. Cockburn attended it every day, that his bungalow was only a few yards off, and that there was not the slightest necessity for the delay even of an hour in conducting the inquiry.

We have given only so much of the facts as appear to be proved beyond even the possibility of doubt. A multitude of additional charges seem to us totally superfluous in the presence of such an accusation. Whether Mr. Cockburn's countercharges against the officers of the Sixth are correct or not, does not signify one jot. If correct, they amount to this, that the adjutant was very tardy in surrendering his men, and that he uttered a strong opinion about the "zubburdustee" character of the proceedings. If they are unfounded, they only prove that Mr. Cockburn's watch had stopped, and that he placed an unintelligible reliance on native gossip. The fact of torture is demonstrated, as far as evidence can demonstrate anything, and it is sufficient to justify the most summary measures. Mr. Cockburn, we doubt not, is totally innocent of any intention to torture, even the four men whose case was so clearly proved. He, like others, may be the victim of his native subordinates. But even in this view—a view the officers who conducted the inquiry might pronounce too lenient—it is still impossible to acquit him of culpable indifference. The men were detained beyond the longest time allowed by law. They were left entirely to the police. No attention can have been paid to the wounds apparent on their persons when brought up to confess. Such carelessness, under such circumstances, is almost as guilty as the offence itself; and the Government of Bengal, in prosecuting the police and dismissing Mr. Cockburn, has given a warning which we trust will not be ineffectual. If the European is held responsible for his negligence, torture must cease.

ANOTHER FIVE PER CENT. LOAN

Was opened on the 16th instant. It is offered on the usual conditions, but is limited to three millions sterling, and is not to be paid off for sixteen years. The terms are sufficiently favourable, but it appears to be doubted whether the loan will fill even at this rate. The doubt is perhaps without foundation, but it is not unnatural, for the public which subscribes to loans is deeply disappointed.

It is useless now to discuss the wisdom of Lord Dalhousie's financial operations. Whether sound or speculative they have been judged by the event, the best, if not the only test of statesmanship. And so judged they failed. It is time that that failure should be acknowledged, and in part, at least, repaired by the Government of India in 1854. The public, with seventeen millions sterling of apparent balances, accepted the conversion as a wise, though somewhat harsh, measure of economy. It so accepted it, because it understood that four per cent. was to be thenceforward the official rate of interest. Had the Russian War not occurred the rate would, as we believe, have so remained. The four per cents. would have risen above par, and Lord Dalhousie would have been quoted as the model of an economical financier. The opening of the public works loan destroyed this impression, and was declared to be a violation of the pledge which had tacitly, though not expressly, been given to the holders of the debt. That loan, however, was small in amount, was raised to meet a special emergency, and was admitted in the end to be a blundering attempt to remedy a mistake, caused by almost inexcusable ignorance.

There was still a chance of an improved position, but the new loan finally destroys the last hope of the unfortunate holders. The empire is again at war. The loan is in part at least a war loan. There is no probability that the demand for money will be speedily at an end, little chance of such continued peace in Europe as would again render an attempt at reduction profitable or possible. The holders of the converted fours, therefore, and they hold, be it remembered, a large portion of the debt, have been amerced in one clear fifth of their property. It would be difficult for them, even if satisfied that the conversion was justified by circumstances, to accept such a loss without a feeling of bitterness. Men do not readily reason themselves into the belief that they ought to lose. Believing, as they do, that the conversion was not justified, that it was a broker's coup, and not a stroke of financial statesmanship, the difficulty becomes insuperable. It is this feeling which produces what the enemies of the Government call distrust, a permanent irritation which we had hoped the Government would remove. They ought to have accepted the teaching of the event, acknowledged the blunder, and in part repaired it by accepting fours as part subscription to the loan. As it is, although the new loan will probably fill, the impression that Government will obey any necessity for money, without regard either to the interests of its debtors, or to ordinary principles of finance, is not, as it might have been, permanently removed. The Indian Government after effecting a conversion in 1854, has, in 1857, outrun its income by six millions sterling.

Public Works Loan.....	£2,500,000
Four and a half (say)	300,000
New Loan.....	3,000,000

Total..... 5,800,000

If the war and public works are both to continue, the loan will be the first of a series, and it is essential to their success that the last vestige of irritation should be removed.

It is reported that the Government of India has had no option in the matter. Orders were received from England to open a loan at five per cent. The statement, if correct, should be promulgated officially. We can imagine no form of interference more dangerous to our credit, or more disastrous in its influence on the prestige of the local Government. The home authorities know little of the market, nothing of our local necessities. Their orders, if such a system is continued, may upset every plan, as their drafts do already upset every calculation. The first reform for which Parliament should be asked is a resolution compelling the court to draw their bills month by month, and to leave Indian loans to the Indian chancellor of the exchequer.—Friend of India.

The LONDON MAIL of Dec. 10 arrived at Calcutta Jan. 21 (per Bengal). The Bentick left Suez on Feb. 7, with the London Mail of Jan. 26, for Calcutta.

LIEUT. W. E. COX, of the 1st European Bengal Fusiliers, has been permitted to resign the service from November 10th last.

MR. G. BLUNT, civil and session judge of Meerut, is about to resign the Company's service.

WUZERABAD is to cease from being a military post.

BREV.-MAJOR MORRISON, 63rd N.I., has been permitted to retire on pension of a major from the 15th January.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF THE PUNJAB has been compelled to suspend its operations for a year, for want of funds.

THE LIEUT.-GOVERNOR left the presidency for Darjeeling on the 15th January.

MR. HERSCHELL.—A Berhampore correspondent of the same journal states that the men who mobbed Mr. Herschell, the joint magistrate of Nuddea, have been all acquitted by the sessions judge save one, the jemadar who actually struck Mr. Herschell with his sword. Mr. Herschell, it will be remembered, was attacked while inquiring into a quarrel about some lands.

LIMITED LIABILITY.—The Indigo Planters' Association has memorialized the Supreme Government against that portion of the Limited Liability Bill which proposes to give jurisdiction to the Company's Courts in winding up Insolvent Joint Stock Companies.

THE KING OF OUDE.—The Hawaru understands that his majesty the King of Oude has taken the wise step of selecting an English gentleman of family, the inheritor of a name already famous in Eastern diplomacy, and who has himself acquired considerable personal celebrity in connection with state affairs in India, to be his majesty's principal agent in London.

MR. C. B. SAUNDERS.—The Lahore Chronicle states that Mr. C. B. Saunders, formerly secretary to the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab, has declined to resume the appointment, as the salary has been reduced from Rs. 2,500 to Rs. 2,000 during his absence on furlough. Civilians must learn to be less nice. When secretaries like Mr. Temple can be procured for Rs. 2,000 a month, it is not wise to provoke unfavourable comparisons.

MASONIC ENTERTAINMENT.—The Hawaru complains that at a Masonic entertainment about to be given to Colonel Ramsay "none but the most highly respectable of the craft" are to be admitted. According to our contemporary "the beautiful realities of Freemasonry disappear as the disreputation of the universality of its brotherhood." That is a fine sentence, but where are the "beautiful realities?" It rather looks as though sensible Masons had grown tired of the cant of equality where every one knows that none exists. Because all men are equal before their Maker they are not therefore equal at a dinner-table.

PUTTEALAH.—According to the Englishman certain subjects of the Rajah of Puttealah have complained to the Punjab authorities regarding the irregularities of the native Revenue system. They clamour for the introduction of the Company's Revenue system. They are probably cognizant of the improvement which a few months of British management has effected in the condition of the Mamdot people.

DR. K. MCKINNON.—A dinner was given on the 7th January by the medical service to Dr. K. McKinnon. Dr. A. Grant, as chairman, paid a just tribute to the high services Dr. McKinnon has rendered to medical science in this country. Some of his monographs are the first authorities on Indian disease:—"As an author, Dr. McKinnon is best known by his admirable Treatises on Public Health, and the Diseases of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces. But throughout his whole service he has been a frequent contributor to the Medical Periodical Literature of India, and some of his recent contributions to the Annals of Medicine are of high value, as the results of his matured experience."

THE LAHORE DITCH.—A correspondent states that the ditch which surrounds the city wall of Lahore is to be filled up without delay. The project has long been under contemplation, but it will cost several lakhs to carry it out.

MR. DOWLEANS.—The Englishman speaks of Mr. Dowleães' appointment to the municipal commissionership as a job, but admits that he is "eminently qualified" for the post. We admit the job. Mr. Dowleães had no claims to the appointment except his qualifications. That is, he was neither superannuated, nor useless, nor impracticable, and he was nobody's nephew or son-in-law. Claims from length of service he had none, and his appointment has disgusted numbers of respectable persons, and given us precisely the man that Calcutta wants.—Friend of India.

MR. JAMES HUME, senior magistrate of Calcutta, has been elected president of the Bethune Society in succession to the late Dr. Bedford.

THE BANK OF BENGAL raised its rates two per cent. "all round" on Thursday, January 8. The rate on deposit of Company's paper is now eight per cent. There seems every probability that it will rise still farther.

NEW PENAL CODE.—In the Legislative Council on Saturday, Jan. 10th, the New Penal Code was referred to a Select Committee, composed of the Chief Justice, Sir Arthur Buller, and Messrs. Peacock, Elliott, and Grant.

MR. HARRINGTON will, it is said, succeed Mr. Allen as representative of the North-West Provinces. As the one Regulation lawyer of the Provinces, Mr. Harrington has claims to the position.

A COMMERCIAL TRIBUNAL.—The Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, appointed to consider the propriety of establishing a commercial tribunal for settling disputes by arbitration, has held a meeting, and reported progress. The opinions taken are in favour of the tribunal, and a Sub-Committee has been appointed to settle the preliminaries. It is composed of Messrs. Fitzwilliam, May, and Kilburn. If the Committee wants practical advice, it should choose a Hindoo member. No man knows more about arbitration than the Marwarrie merchant.

MR. E. GOWER, engineer of the East-India Railway Company, has taken out a patent for a self-acting punkah.

MAJOR G. R. SIDDS, who retired from the 1st light cavalry on the 1st inst., died of apoplexy on board the Sir Frederick Currie six days afterwards.

MR. JAMES HUME has been elected president of the Bethune Society in room of the late Dr. Bedford. The Hurkaru, in mentioning the circumstance, says: "Anticipating the brilliancy of some friendly wit, we are prepared to hear that, after Abel East's bad luck at our late meeting, he was obviously the very fittest man to be put at the head of the beaten society!"

LADY CANNING returns to England next month. The Hon. Mrs. George Anson, likewise, proceeds to the same destination about the same time.

RUMOURS.—The Lahore Chronicle reports that Mr. C. Jackson, Acting Chief Commissioner of Oude, will accept the Residency of Hyderabad. It is not yet known who will succeed him, but Mr. Raikes is indicated as the most probable candidate. Mr. Raikes displayed qualities at Lahore which peculiarly qualify him for a non-regulation Province. He is one of the few officials in India who know how to combine strict conscientious justice with a disregard for its forms.

GEORGE SHAW, a steward on board the Southampton, undertook to accomplish the following feats within an hour, and performed his task in fifty-seven minutes with great ease:—1st. To leap 20 hurdles, 3 feet 6 inches high, placed 10 yards apart. 2nd. To walk one English mile. 3rd. To trundle a coach-wheel one mile. 4th. To pick up 30 eggs with his mouth, placed one yard apart, and deposit each singly in a basket at the starting post. 5th. To walk backwards one mile. 6th. To throw 20 half cwt. over his head with one hand, viz., either right or left. 7th. To pick up (singly) 40 stones placed one yard apart, and deposit each in a basket at the starting post. 8th. To hop one hundred yards. 9th. To run one mile.

A BILL FOR RAISING FUNDS FOR MAKING AND REPAIRING ROADS IN THE SUBURBS OF CALCUTTA AND THE STATION OF HOWRAH has been laid before the Legislative Council. It is similar in its construction and purposes to that for the levying of a horse and carriage tax in Calcutta. It will be noticed at length hereafter. The estimated expense of repairing the suburban roads is Rs. 50,000 per year. The carriage and horse tax is likely to produce more than half that sum. The difference is proposed to be supplied by an addition to the rate of assessment levied under the Chowkedarree Act, the provisions of which are to be extended by this act.

SIRDAR LALL SING.—What may a few years not bring about? On the 18th of December, 1845, Sirdar Lall Sing commanded the Sikh army that attacked the British position at Moodkee. The year after he was brought to trial for endeavouring to subvert British authority in the Punjab, found guilty, and banished to Agra. From Agra he was permitted to proceed to Mussoorie and Dhera, and towards the end of 1856, we hear not only of his addressing the visitors at the examination of the Dhera school, under the superintendence of the American Presbyterian Mission, but of his making a very sensible speech on the occasion. What next? The high priest of the Sikh temple at Dhera was also present at the interesting meeting.

THE THERMOMETER was at 39° on the morning of January 21, in the neighbourhood of Calcutta. This is lower than has ever been before observed in this part of India. The old Indians are asking if the Hooghly will be frozen over.

A MEDICAL OFFICER of nineteen years' standing in the Company's service offers to sell his prospective annuity of 300*l.* for a present payment of 100*l.* per annum.

BEHAR OPIUM averaged Rs. 821, and Benares Rs. 773 at the sale held January 13.

GENERAL ANSON, the Commander-in-Chief, left Agra hurriedly for the presidency and arrived about a week ago, having been summoned, it is said, by the Governor-General, who needs his professional advice in the council chamber; but nevertheless it is not quite impossible that the exigencies of the public service have less to do with General Anson's advent, than the departure for England by the steamer to-day, of Mrs. and Miss Anson, whom the general escorted from Agra!

THE DELHI BANK has established an agency at Kurrachee in Scinde, under charge of Mr. D. M'Iver.

SIR H. M. LAWRENCE has, it is said, been appointed chief commissioner in Oude.

MR. MEREDITH TOWNSEND has commenced a periodical publication, entitled The Annals of Indian Administration, of which the Press speaks in high terms.

EUROPEAN SERJEANTS FOR NATIVE REGIMENTS.—It is suggested, they say, that a European serjeant be attached to every company of Sepoys in the native army.

MRS. HERITAGE, a young widow who was to have been married on Wednesday, was accidentally drowned yesterday (Sunday, January 18) alongside the ship in which her intended husband was proceeding down the river ignorant of her fate.

MR. WORCESTER, an old purser in the Peninsula and Oriental Company's Service, has joined the great Calcutta House of David Wilson and Co., a combination of the Tavistock in Covent Garden, Farrances at Charing Cross, the Virginia in the City, Twinings in the Strand, and the tobaccoists in Regent Street.

MR. ELLIS, C. S., lately arrived, will, we understand, officiate as Commissioner of Sinde, until Mr. B. Frere arrives in India. The latter gentleman is expected about April or May next.

MR. WILLIAM SARGON, 3rd Class Inspector in charge of the Electric Telegraph office at Nassick, we hear, has been appointed Acting Inspector in charge of the office at Bombay, until the arrival from Madras of Mr. Avery, in the place of Mr. Blacknight, resigned.

INTIMATION was received on the 29th ult. by electric telegraph, that Mr. W. Vears, on his way to join his appointment as deputy post-master at Ahmednuggur, was murdered between Nuggur and Khairgaum by robbers.—Telegraph and Courier.

MR. H. E. LEEKE has been appointed acting assistant superintendent of police at Tanna, during the employment of Lieut. Harpur on other duty, or until further orders.

MR. E. C. JONES, collector and magistrate, is, it is reported, about to resign the service; and that Mr. T. Loughnan will be appointed to succeed him.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

NEW FIVE PER CENT. LOAN.

Fort William, Financial Department, Jan. 16, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the sub-treasurers at Fort William, Fort St. George, and Bombay, the several residents at native courts, and the several collectors and other officers in charge of treasuries under the several presidencies and Governments, and in the provinces subordinate to the Government of India, have been authorized to receive from the date of this notification any sums of money in even hundreds of not less than Co.'s Rs. 500, which may be tendered on loan to the East-India Company, at an interest of five per cent. per annum, subject to the provisions hereinafter specified.

All authorized public demands, including audited bills for arrears of salary and bills of exchange to the public treasuries, these last being subject to a deduction at the rate of five per cent. per annum for the period they may have to run, will be received as cash at par.

The paymasters of the army under the several presidencies are also authorized to transfer any demands which may be payable by them respectively to this loan, and to grant drafts for the amounts in Bengal and Madras on the accountant-general, and in Bombay on the military paymaster-general, which drafts shall be received by those officers in payment of subscriptions to this loan, on being tendered to them for that purpose.

The several public officers authorized to receive subscriptions into this loan will grant acknowledgments, in the following form, for all sums received by them respectively:—

"I hereby acknowledge that A. B. has this day paid into the East-India Company's treasury the sum of Company's rupees for which he is entitled to receive a promissory note, bearing interest from the 28th of February or 31st of August next (as the case may be), of the tenor and subject to the conditions of the loan specified in the advertisement published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 16th January, 1857."

The accountant-general at Fort William will, on the said acknowledgments being delivered, forthwith cause to be prepared and issued to the parties entitled thereto promissory notes, under the signature of the secretary to the Government of India, in the following form :—

"Fort William, the 28th February, 1857.

"Promissory note at five per cent. for Company's rupees.

"The Governor-General of India in Council does hereby acknowledge to have received from A. B. the sum of Company's rupees as a loan to the East-India Company, and does hereby promise for and on behalf of the said Company to repay the said loan, by paying the said sum of Company's rupees to the said A. B., his executors or administrators, or his or their order, on demand, at the General Treasury of Fort William, after the expiration of three months' notice of payment, to be given by the Governor-General of India in Council, in the Calcutta Gazette, and to pay the interest accruing on the said sum of Company's rupees at the rate of five per cent. per annum, by half-yearly payments, at the General Treasury of Fort William, to the said A. B., his executors or administrators, until the expiration of three months after such notice of payment as aforesaid, when the amount of interest due will be payable with the principal, and (such notice being considered equivalent to a tender of payment at the period appointed for the discharge of the note) all further interest shall cease.

"Signed by the authority of the Governor-General of India in council.

"Secretary to the Government.

"Accountant General's Office Registered as No. of.

The several officers authorized to receive subscriptions will, on application from the holders of acknowledgments, transmit them (free of every expense whatever) to the accountant-general at Fort William, to be exchanged for promissory notes bearing interest from the 28th of February or 31st of August next ensuing after the date of subscription. The interest accruing on the broken period of the half-year that may intervene between the date of subscription and the 28th of February or 31st August next ensuing, as the case may be, will be paid up at the time of granting the acknowledgment.

Proprietors of notes or acknowledgments, who may desire to have the interest payable at any other public treasury than at the general treasury of Calcutta, shall be entitled to receive it accordingly, provided they notify their wish to the accountant-general at Fort William, and transmit the notes or acknowledgments to him, to have an order for the payment of interest at the said treasury written on the face of the notes under the signature of the said officer or that of his assistant; and after such order shall, on the application of the proprietor, be inscribed on any note, the interest shall be payable only from the said treasury, unless the proprietor shall present the note with an application for the purpose of transferring the payment elsewhere to the accountant-general at Fort William.

The promissory notes of this loan shall not be renewed, subdivided, or consolidated, except by the accountant-general of Fort William. The practice and rules heretofore in use in regard to the renewal, sub-division, and consolidation of promissory notes will be adhered to.

This loan is limited to three crores of rupees. No part of this loan will be paid off before the 16th January, 1872, nor without a previous notice of three months, to be issued at any time after the 15th October, 1871.

The Four-and-a-half per Cent. Loan, opened under notification dated 30th August, 1856, is closed from this date at the public treasuries in Calcutta, and at all other treasuries under the several Governments from date of receipt of this advertisement, after which dates no further subscriptions to that loan will be received.

Secretary to the Government of India.

PUBLIC WORKS.

Fort William, Public Works Department, the 9th Jan. 1857.—In modification of notification No. 172, dated 8th October, 1856, the Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct, that the two sections of the former Umballah division of public works shall henceforth be designated the upper and lower Sirhind divisions, instead of the upper and lower Umballah divisions.

THE SIKH INFANTRY.

Fort William, Jan. 19, 1857.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct that the four "local corps of Sikh infantry" shall henceforward be designated regiments of "Sikh infantry," omitting the term local, which has become inapplicable to them.

MADRAS.

The LONDON MAIL of Dec. 10 arrived at Madras Jan. 17 (per Bengal steamer).

THE COURT OF DIRECTORS have disapproved of the allowance of Rs. 800 per mensem as salary to Mr. J. Ouchterlony, principal suder ameen at Ootacamund. They see no reason why a distinction should be made in his favour, and a higher salary granted to him than that of other principal suder umeens, viz. 500, and have refused to sanction the allowance.

MADRAS CLUB.—An attempt to make the Madras Club take out a license for the sale of liquors as a place of public resort has failed, Mr. Clarke, the magistrate, having dismissed the case.

NEW RESIDENT AT HYDERABAD.—Captain Thornhill, of the Madras cavalry, has been appointed by the Government of India to officiate as resident at Hyderabad.

MR. ALLAN WILSON has been appointed an executive officer engineer in the Hyderabad assigned districts, and posted to the Raichore Doab.

THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT has sanctioned a redistribution and an increase in the number of teachers in the normal school.

TANJORE.—The Supreme Government has directed the restoration of the private property belonging to the Ranees of Tanjore and others to the rightful owners. Mr. Forbes and Mr. Cherry have left that place, the former for Madras, the latter for Salem; and Mr. Phillips has been appointed acting resident. Mr. Bourdillon the able, liberal, and enlightened revenue secretary, is about to seek in England a temporary relaxation from his heavy duties.

THE OFFICERS OF THE MADRAS ARMY complain of the systematic way in which they are thrust aside when laurels are to be earned, the last instance in point being the Persian expedition, in which, with the exception of the Sappers and Miners, not an officer or regiment of this army has been directed to serve.

MILITARY ON-DITS.—We learn from Jaulnah that the 6th Madras cavalry was expected to reach that station on the 6th Jan.—The 2nd L.C. are to leave for Sholapore on the 15th or 20th.—The left wing of H.M.'s 12th lancers, under the command of Captain Prior, have arrived from Amoor, and are encamped on the esplanade opposite the camp-equipage dépôt.

THE MERCHANTS AT MADRAS are adopting the Saturday half-holiday system. All the members of the Chamber of Commerce have agreed to close their offices at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

BONUS FUND.—A meeting of officers has been held at Madras to establish a bonus fund on the basis of that proposed by Lieut.-Colonel Burn for the Bengal army. A committee was appointed, and preliminary measures were taken.

THE PRESS.—The Madras Spectator, now a daily newspaper, has adopted a new form: it is now a single sheet of moderate size. No difference is more marked among the presidencies of India than the amount of news their newspapers contain. The Bombay papers are always full of local items. The Calcutta papers, except at intervals, have usually something of some kind to record. The Madras journals alone are totally deficient in incident. To judge from their columns, nothing ever happens among twenty millions of people. The difference does not spring from any accidental absence of ability on the press. The Madras Athenæum may claim at least equality with any journal in India, yet it is not once in a month that our search through its columns is rewarded with a nugget.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH is being extended within the presidency as rapidly as circumstances will permit. Under instructions from the Government of India, the local Government has directed the accountant-general to make arrangements for a further sum of Rs. 15,000 in the Hyderabad Residency treasury, and Rs. 10,000 in the Bellary treasury, being held at the disposal of Mr. Mayes, deputy superintendent of electric telegraphs, to meet the expenses of the Hyderabad and Bellary line. Permanent masonry pillars, capped with massive granite blocks, are to be erected along the whole line from Bellary to Kurnool, and thence to Hyderabad. The Kurnool station, distant ninety-six miles from Bellary, will, in a few days, be brought into direct telegraph communication with Bellary, and through it with all other telegraph stations. The quantity of wire at present in this country not being sufficient to extend the line quite to Hyderabad, the connection of that station with Kurnool will be delayed until further supplies are received from England. Her Majesty's Government has given its approval to a proposal for laying down a telegraphic cable in the Persian Gulf, and by connecting it with that already laid down in the Mediterranean, placing the whole of Europe in direct communication with Asia. The project is said to be still under consideration at the East-India House, but there need be no apprehension that a measure of so much importance will be delayed by the Leadenhall-street authorities.

A EUROPEAN RAILWAY GUARD, at Madras, lately found six educated Hindoos in a railway-carriage of higher class than they had paid for. He of course ordered them out; and the Rising Sun thus describes the occurrence:—"The Hindoos left their seats rather than have anything to do with an ignorant man. But if we had been there, we would have made him to understand that he was nothing but a hired man; and if he did not understand his duty, we would have knocked sense into his head." There is the Hindoo theory of the "dignity of labour."

NATIVE EXCURSIONISTS BY RAIL.—The Athenæum (Jan. 27) says:—"Large crowds went down on Saturday and Sunday to the Pougul festival at Trivelloor. The trains were so crowded that third-class passengers were allowed to occupy second-class and even first-class carriages. On Sunday there was a special train. On Saturday and Sunday the passengers amounted to 3,400. Trivelloor itself was swarming with people from all parts of the country; the young, the hale, the old, the wrinkled, the leprous, the barren, the blind—a many-voiced crowd urged by various hopes and fears—came to bow themselves lowly before their idol. On Saturday evening there was a succession of rockets sent up for hours on the brink of the tank in front of the grand pagodas. Floating illuminations were on the water. There were processions of devotees, whose wild maniacal faces grinned hideously under flashing torches. There was every variety of native feasting, as well as fasting. There were singers, jugglers, and stall-keepers, plying their trades in every direction; and in the thickly-packed streets an occasional elephant, covered with ornaments of a dingy dirty splendour, solemnly made its irresistible way through the crowd, which burst like billows before it. On Sunday the car containing the idol was set in motion. The only living soul allowed to accompany it was a most holy Brahmin; and in the procession might be seen the dark eyes and handsome features of the damsels whose fascinations are reserved for that favoured caste. Then fanaticism was at its height. Shrieking, yelling, piping, blowing of enormous horns, ringing of bells, hammering on tom-toms, produced a horrible din, but perhaps solemn and overwhelming enough to all who either participated in it, or listened with the ears of worshippers. The idol's car was drawn only through a portion of the town, but the row was kept up at intervals all night. The festival continues ten days, of which Sunday was the fifth. Large numbers of persons returned yesterday morning. Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Church were up and down the line, and everywhere generally the natives into the carriages; and, it must be added, showing invariable courtesy from the highest to the lowest person present. The third-class carriages were filled to overflowing; and had not these gentlemen considerably allowed numbers of third-class passengers to occupy the first and second-class carriages, those numbers must have been left behind, to their loss and other inconvenience. The great weight of the Saturday's afternoon train delayed it, and it reached Trivelloor an hour and a half after the usual time."

BOMBAY.

The LONDON MAIL of Dec. 26 arrived at Bombay Jan. 23 (per Singapore). The London Mail of Jan. 26 left Suez for Bombay on Feb. 7 (per Aden).

THE RAIL.—Under Mr. Faviell and Mr. Bray, contractors for two portions of the Great Peninsular Railway, forty thousand natives at present find work in preparing the commencement of a line which before ten years are out will connect the Bay of Bengal at two points with the Arabian Sea. The administration of these gentlemen is perfect, as is the example they set in everything that is praiseworthy and excellent to those around them. The people are earning in money, well and punctually paid, four times the income they ever did before, and the ends of civilization advanced by the grand civilizer Industry, under the stimulant of gain.

COIN FOR PERSIA.—The artificers of the Bombay Mint have been called on to perform three hours' extra work daily in order to supply the demand for coin to send to Persia.

A LIGHT BATTALION is to be formed out of the light companies of the regiments within reach of Bombay. The companies will be brought up to 80 rank-and-file, and the total will amount to 800 men. They ought to be specially instructed for a few weeks in the use of the Minié rifle.

PARSEE WOMEN.—The Rust-i-Gofar, a Parsee newspaper, mentions that Parsee women now drive in their carriages without shutting the venetians. He commends the practice as conducive to health, and favourable to the gradual emancipation of the sex. He calls the existing habit of seclusion a Mogul barbarism, and praises a son of Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy for setting it at defiance.

SLAVERY.—An Arab Syud is in custody at Bombay, charged with shipping four boys and seven girls as slaves on board of a vessel bound for Arabia. The children had been brought to Bombay from Hyderabad in a covered cart. The prisoner has been committed to the sessions.

THE DEATH OF THE RAJAH OF HINDOOR, one of the protected Sikh chiefs, is announced. His estate lapses to Government.

A MAHRATTEE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for native females has been started at Bombay. The contents of the first number are as follows:—"The Duties of Mothers and Daughters; a Good Woman.—Queen Victoria; My Friend's Wife; the Results of Internal Quarrels; the Punjab; the Sandy Desert. Miscellaneous.—Canine Affection, Advantages of a Kind Temper, Flattery, the Wealth of the World, the Evils of Procrastination, a Deception Detected, the Benefits of Salt. Songs."

LIEUT.-COL. CARSTAIRS.—We understand that Lieut.-Col. D. Carstairs (new promotion) is, on being relieved by Brigadier Stuart from Sholapore, to be appointed to the important command of the frontier station of Shikarpoor, in Scinde, rendered vacant by Colonel Scott having proceeded to Europe on furlough. In these stirring times of war, we want the right man to be put into the right place.—Observer, Jan. 17.

MAGISTRATE OF POLICE.—We understand that Mr. T. Thornton, second magistrate of police, has, owing to continued bad health, sent in his application for a pension. We have no doubt there will be many candidates for this appointment; but we apprehend the allowances will be considerably reduced when Mr. Thornton retires, as the salary of the senior magistrate of police is to be cut down to Rs. 1,500 a month on the next vacancy.

CIVIL CHANGES.—The Poona Observer has been informed that the following changes in the judicial department will take place upon Mr. R. Keays being confirmed in the appointment of puisne judge of the Sudder Court:—Mr. C. M. Harrison, judge of the Konkun, to be judge of Poona and agent for sirdars; Mr. T. A. Compton, judge of Sholapore, to be judge of the Konkun; Mr. H. P. St. G. Tucker, acting judge of the Konkun, to be judge of Sholapore; Mr. D. C. R. Leighton, recently returned from furlough, to be senior assistant judge of the Konkun, for the detached station of Rutnagherry.

MR. G. H. WALKER AND MR. A. SANGSTER were sworn in before the chief justice, and admitted attorneys and solicitors of the Supreme Court on the 26th January. Mr. Walker joins the firm of Pollock and Faithful, under the denomination of Pollock, Walker, and Faithful.

BREVET CAPTAIN W. H. R. GREEN, 19TH N.I., has been recorded for promotion to the rank of major in the army, as soon as he shall have obtained the regimental rank of captain, on account of his services before Sebastopol, and in the dominions of the Sultan.

CAPTAIN LAWSON, of the ship Ocean Monarch, at Bombay, has been fined Rs. 500 for attempting, by a bribe of Rs. 143, to induce Mr. Hunt, a preventive officer, to make a false return of the weight of certain old copper. The evidence as published is clear enough against the defendant, but it is not explained why the bribe exceeded by Rs. 100 the utmost amount of duty the captain could have saved by means of the false return. The case has been appealed to the revenue judge of Bombay. It appears that Mr. Hunt, when the offer was made, replied, "I will see,"—then went ashore, gave information to his official chief, and, acting on his instructions, returned to the ship, made out the false return, received the captain's cheque for the amount of the bribe, cashed the cheque, and then completed the information. For thus obeying orders he is denounced by Mr. Barton, the defendant's counsel, as a "liar," a "rascal," a "confounded rogue," and something worse. Is that the legitimate privilege of counsel? Even if it were, Mr. Barton should have remembered that proving Mr. Hunt to be a rascal was not precisely the way to benefit the reputation of his own client.—Friend of India.

THE FOLLOWING ADDITIONAL SHIPS have been engaged to convey the second division of the Persian field force:—The Ocean Monarch, Hamoudy, Nadder Shaw, Golden Era, Fuzel Curreen, Lord George Bentinck, Carmenta, Hibernia, Eliza, Saldanha, Ruby Castle, Belgravia, Tornado, and Thomas Campbell.

THE INAM COMMISSION.—It is whispered about, that the Inam Commission in the Deccan and southern Mahratta country is to be placed in abeyance for the present, or its functions in some way or other subdued. If what we hear be true, the Bombay Government is likely to be saved the trouble of issuing a notification to this effect, in so far as the last-named province is concerned—the people there seeming to be quite equal to the “situation” themselves. Some recent resumptions have, it is said, been regarded with extreme distrust, and the last straw has broken the camel's back. Captain Cowper will, we hear, be sent into the disturbed districts to quiet the alarm. We wish him well out of his mission.—Observer, Jan. 17.

CHOLERA has been very violent at Mazagon, near Bombay, and almost unprecedentedly fatal. It has of late been prevailing in the lines of the 15th—the deaths being reported at nine a day.

DEATH OF DR. C. D. STRAKER.—We regret to announce the death of Dr. C. D. Straker, M.D., C.B., Physician-General of Bombay. The melancholy event occurred on the 17th Jan., at ten a.m., at his son-in-law, Lieutenant Coles's, bungalow, Esplanade, Bombay. His remains were interred at half-past four in the afternoon of the same day, with the military honours due to his rank. Dr. Straker was appointed assistant-surgeon on the Bombay Medical Establishment on the 4th August, 1824, and obtained the rank of surgeon on the 5th June, 1839. He served as superintending surgeon of the Bombay column of the army of the Punjab in 1848-49; was present at the siege and surrender of Mooltan, battle of Goojrat, and pursuit and surrender of the Sikh army. For this service he had obtained the order of Commander of the Bath, and medal with two clasps. By this casualty Dr. E. W. Edwards, surgeon-general, will become physician-general, and Dr. Mahaffy, the first on the list of assistant-surgeons, will obtain the rank of surgeon.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

INFANTRY BRIGADES.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, Jan. 14, 1857.—With reference to G.G.O., No. 31, dated the 13th instant, the Commander-in-chief is pleased to direct that the infantry brigades of the 2nd division therein referred to shall be composed as follows:—

- 1st Infantry Brigade.—H.M.'s 78th Highlanders; 26th N.I.
- 2nd Infantry Brigade.—23rd regt. N.L.I.; Light Battalion.

SCHOOL OF MUSKETRY AT POONA.

Bombay Castle, Jan. 16, 1857.—No. 60 of 1857.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to notify that the following establishment has been fixed under the sanction of the Government of India for the School of Musketry at Poona.

- 1st. A commandant on a salary of Rs. 200 per mensem.
- 2nd. An officer instructor, who has been instructed at Hythe, and reported qualified, to be selected indiscriminately from the royal and Company's service, on a staff salary of Rs. 100 per mensem.

Each regiment of European infantry is to furnish one officer and five non-commissioned officers, privates, and each regiment of native infantry one European officer, one native officer, and five non-commissioned officers and sepoys for instruction.

3rd. An officer to perform the duties of adjutant and quartermaster during the practice season, on a salary of Rs. 100 per mensem.

4th. The depôt is to be provided with 200 rifle muskets, and the necessary quantity of ammunition.

TUNIC UNIFORMS.

Head-Quarters Bombay, Jan. 23.—With reference to G. O. C. No. 1, dated 25th July, 1855, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to announce that the Government have authorized tunics being worn by all officers who are at present without dress coatees.

Tunics for the officers of the several branches are to be of the patterns prescribed for the royal army in the Dress Regulations issued from the Horse Guards.

STRENGTH OF NATIVE REGIMENTS.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, Jan. 23.—With reference to the circular letter from the Adjutant-General of the Army, No. 2, dated the 14th instant, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to announce that the Government of India has authorized the strength of all the native infantry regiments of his Presidency, including the Marine Battalion, to be raised to 800 privates, and those from which Light companies have been drawn for the formation of the Light Battalion for service in Persia, to 900 privates.

LIGHT BATTALION MESS.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, Jan. 28, 1857.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has been pleased to sanction the establishment of a mess for the officers of the Light Battalion, on service in Persia, with an allowance, as is granted to an European corps, and has further directed that the officers thereof be relieved, during their actual employment with it, from the payment of the regulated mess contributions to their own corps.

THE GOVERNOR OF THE STRAITS has obtained permission to erect a palace at Singapore.

INSURRECTIONARY CONDUCT OF THE NATIVE SHOPKEEPERS.

—On the holding of the Criminal Session for January, the Recorder addressed the following remarks to the grand jury:—"There was one case of a very aggravated nature in the coroner's list,—the murder of a police informer at the very threshold of the police office, the perpetrator of which was still at large. His lordship trusted he would yet be brought to justice. The Recorder next adverted to what had occurred on the preceding day, when the native population had closed their shops and manifested a determination to resist the law. His lordship observed that the court was open to afford redress to any persons who thought they had cause to complain of any act or proceeding on the part of the police, and they might be assured that full justice would be done; but it was not to be tolerated that illegal means or combinations should be resorted to by any class of the population in order to procure the repeal of any measure which they might consider obnoxious."

CHINA.

MR. MAY resumes his duties as Superintendent of Police.—Dr. BRIDGES accepts the Acting Assistant Police Magistrateship.—An ordinance for registration of the Chinese inhabitants is under the consideration of the Legislative Council, and may be tendered to "barbarians" in a Gazette Extraordinary to-night.—A portion of the crews of the United States ships of war in harbour will be trooped in the Naval Store Compound, and act under the direction of our superintendent of police, if called on in an emergency.—North China Herald.

NORTH CHINA.—As it is probable that within a month from this that we shall be in a state of siege, and unable to obtain either provisions or servants in any but sparing quantity from the main land, it is but commonly prudent in us to cast about for the means of averting excessive inconvenience. To this end we would suggest the importation of re-lays of waiting men from the north—people who, having no sympathy with the natives of Kwantung, may be depended on through whatever vicissitudes the colony may have to pass. Most of the Canton washermen have already left the place, and, bearing in mind the fact that their families may be destroyed root and branch if they attempt to remain here, we cannot see that it is just in any one to be angry with them, and think they have committed a great impropriety.—North China Herald, Dec.

MARTIAL-LAW RECOMMENDED AT HONG-KONG.—Unless Sir John Bowring instantly directs an efficient registration of the Chinese inhabitants, and a driving out of the many doubtful characters by whom we are surrounded, wretches who keep up within the breasts of peacefully-inclined citizens a feeling of perpetual terror, we would advise an early and general requisition to the commandant of the garrison to assume the responsibility of declaring the colony under martial-law, and then to proceed to a registration.—Friend of China, Jan. 3.

HONG-KONG.—Some anxiety being felt among the community in the present unsettled state of affairs in the neighbourhood of Hong-Kong, it has been thought advisable by the Government to adopt certain precautionary measures for securing the peace of the city, and the safety of the inhabitants and property. The police force has been increased, and his Exc. the Governor has given his best consideration to a proposal made by certain gentlemen who recently waited on H. E. and the Executive Council, and has resolved to invite the respectable members of the community to form themselves into a special constabulary, from which it is in contemplation to organize a fire brigade. The peace and security of the colony are further considered by an ordinance or proclamation, the chief article of which refers to the issue of Government "passes" to the inhabitants, according to the following form:—"This is to certify, that the bearer hereof [name] is authorised to pass and re-pass during the night season from and to the house of [employer's name] in [street or road] Victoria, during the period of days from the date hereof. Dated this day of , A.D. 1857. [Seal] (Signed)

A. B., Superintendent of Police."

SCINDE.

THE RAILWAY.

We are privileged to make an announcement which will be hailed with sincere pleasure by every one interested in the progress of this province. The line for the Scinde Railway has at length been definitely settled, and in accordance, we are proud to say, with those views which we have so freely and fully expressed in the columns of the Sindian. Our readers are aware that we have done our utmost to place before them an array of facts in connection with this important subject, which could only have been collected by great care and trouble. So far as we were capable of forming an opinion on the relative merits of the various proposed routes, we distinctly and decisively pronounced in favour of the line to Kotree, as being that which presented not only for the present but for the future, the greatest advantages, whether regard be had to the length, cost, working expenses, or local traffic. That line has been judiciously selected for construction by those to whose final decision the matter was referred, and we rejoice at being able to state that the gentleman who represents the Scinde Railway Company at Kurrachee, has received instructions from Government to proceed at once with the permanent surveys and estimates of that line which passes near Gharra, about nine miles to the north of Tattah, and twelve west of Jerruck.

It is doubtless known to some of our readers that a proposition, emanating from one of the highest officials in the province, was sometime since made to remove the town, or rather the people, of Tattah from the present position to a more favourable locality. It is one of the ancient capitals of Scinde, and is situated on the débris of three old cities. Owing to its being built on low ground, which becomes a complete swamp during the inundation, the inhabitants are peculiarly subject to endemic diseases, and as it is feared that no sanitary improvements whatever are likely to render the spot healthy, the only remedy is to be found in the removal of the inhabitants to a more salubrious part of the country. A better opportunity for carrying this project into operation could scarcely present itself than on the commencement of the railway works in its neighbourhood. A large number of the population will find employment on them, and will necessarily require to reside in closer proximity to the line than they can do by remaining in the existing town. It would therefore be a comparatively easy matter gradually to remove the whole of the townspeople adjacent to the railway station which will be formed in the neighbourhood, and there a portion of ground may be plotted out for the proposed new town.

But to return to the subject more immediately before us, we may mention that a large number of the railway staff left Kurrachee on Monday afternoon last, in anticipation of the receipt of final orders regarding the line, for the purpose of renewing the survey. They will now be able to go on with the work at once; and from the energy and perseverance they have formerly displayed, we have every reason to hope they will do their utmost to complete the survey during the present working season; and if they succeed in doing so, we will have the pleasure to see the construction of the permanent way commenced with vigour long before the close of the current year.

In the meantime we beg to congratulate the shareholders and the public of Scinde on the important advancement that has now been made in the progress of this truly national work. The great battle of procrastination has been fought and won by those who had common sense and practical experience for their guide. Under the able administration of Mr. Neville Warren, we may confidently rely that the work will be pushed on vigorously, and that former delay will give place to increased activity.—Scindian, Jan. 21.

THE VAKEEL TO THE EX-KING OF OUDE, MAJOR BIRD, AND OURSELVES.

IN another portion of our paper will be found two letters addressed to us, in our editorial capacity, complaining of certain comments introduced into the article "The Extinct Dynasty of Oude," which appeared in our impression of the 30th January last. One of these communications bears the signature of Mahomed Museeh Ooddeen Khan, the accredited Vakeel to the ex-king of Oude, and the other that of Major R. W. Bird. The former charges us with a misrepresentation of facts in stigmatising the character of Saadut Khan, the founder of the late dynasty, with treachery, and in ascribing pusillanimity to one of his successors, and avarice and extortion to another. We plead in justification the truth of our statement. Museeh Ooddeen Khan asserts that the charge of treachery against Saadut Khan rests entirely upon a memorandum furnished by Capt. Fletcher Hayes, assistant to the Resident at Lucknow, and that this gentleman is not trustworthy, inasmuch as he quotes as his authority a Mahometan author who died a century before Saadut Khan came into existence. We have nothing to do with Capt. Hayes or his authorities. A stroke of anachronism by a British subordinate does not invalidate the testimony of the Persian historians. The facts of the case are related with great minuteness in the "History of Hindustan," translated from the Persian by Col. Alexander Dow. In a revised edition of this work, published in 1803, and at page 424 of the second volume, the parting interview between Saadut Khan and the Persian emperor, Nadir Shah, is thus described: "The king of Persia, finding himself in possession of Delhi, called the Nizam and Saadut into his presence, and addressed them in the following extraordinary manner: 'Are not you both most ungrateful villains to your king and country; who, after possessing such wealth and dignities, called me from my dominions to ruin them and yourselves? But I will scourge you with all my wrath, which is the instrument of the vengeance of God.' Having spoken these words, he spit upon their beards, the highest affront possible to Mussulmen, and turned them with every mark of indignity from his presence." Museeh Ooddeen Khan will now be satisfied that the treachery of Saadut Khan rests upon something more than the memorandum furnished by Capt. Hayes. We pass to the second point. It was stated in the article of the 30th January, that in the battle with the Rohillas fought in his behalf by Col. Champion, Shujah-ud-Dowlah, the vizier of Oude, betrayed the most dastardly pusillanimity. Museeh Ooddeen Khan now informs us, that it was perfectly understood between Col. Champion and Shujah-ud-Dowlah, that the troops of the latter should only act in case of extreme emergency, and that his little army was consequently regarded merely as a corps de réserve. A more barefaced assertion was probably never hazarded. The understanding which subsisted between the Vizier of Oude and the British commander was distinct enough; but it was precisely the reverse of that indicated by Museed Ooddeen Khan. The Colonel shall speak for himself. In a letter written shortly after the battle, and which we transcribe from the third edition of Mr. Mill's "History of British India," vol. vi. p. 508, Col. Champion states the facts, and at the same time favours us with the estimate he had formed of the good faith of his ally. "I wish," says he, "I could pay the Vizier any compliment on this occasion, or that I were not under the indispensable necessity of expressing my highest indignation at his shameful pusillanimity; indispensable, I say, because it is necessary that the administration should clearly know how little to be depended on is their ally. The night before the battle I applied to him for some particular pieces of cannon which I thought might prove of great service in the action; but he declined giving the use of them. He promised solemnly to support me with all his force, and particularly engaged to be near at hand with a large body of cavalry, to be used as I should direct. But instead of being nigh me, he remained beyond the Gurrah, on the ground which I had left in the morning, surrounded by his cavalry and a large train of artillery, and did not move thence till the news of the enemy's defeat reached him." Then, however, observes Mr. Mill, his troops began to be active, and effectually plundered the camp, "while the Company's troops, in regular order in their ranks, most justly (says their commander) observed, 'We have the honour of the day, and these banditti the profit.'" One other point remains to be noticed. The charge of extortion brought against Saadut Ali is declared by Museed Ooddeen Khan to be unjust and unfounded. The Nabob, he admits, amassed treasure to the amount of thirteen millions sterling; but ascribes his means of realizing these almost boundless hoards, not to the oppression of his subjects, but to an intimate familiarity on the part of the Nabob with the principles of political economy. We have no wish to detract from the scientific acquirements of Saadut Ali. All we have to deal with is the mode in which he reduced his political economy to practice, and upon this point the evidence is conclusive. "The same abuse and mismanagement," observes the historian of British India, "the same frightful extortions which disgraced the revenue collections under the former government, continue to prevail undiminished in extent and atrocity under that of Saadut Ali." "The records of the presidency," observes Lord Dalhousie, "show that, notwithstanding the stipulations of the treaty, the landholders were nevertheless exposed to the systematic extortions of the contractors to whom the Nabob farmed the assessments, and whom he authorized to levy their demands by the most violent and oppressive means." So much in answer to Museed Ooddeen Khan. We would address a parting word to the second of our assailants. Major Bird professes to believe that the object of the article complained of was to strengthen the cause of annexation by casting aspersions upon the characters of the individual members of the royal race. This is not the fact. The intention was to show that the vices of the Oude government were inherent in its constitution; that the misgovernment of its rulers was incorrigible; and that had the native dynasty been continued, there was not the remotest prospect of improvement. "It seems to me," says Col. Grant, "as hopeful a task to rear heart of oak in a dark cellar, as to bring up under a foreign protectorate a capable ruler in the palace of such a dependency as Oude." But whatever may have been the shortcomings of the various princes of Oude, however degrading their vices or oppressive their administration, Wajid Alee Shah is not answerable for the misrule of his ancestors. That prince has been deposed because he was unfit to rule. His unfitness must, therefore, be deduced exclusively from the character of his own acts, and it is by these alone that the justification of the Government of India in depriving him of his kingdom can be tested. With the view of enabling our readers to form a sound judgment upon this point, we shall in our next number give a brief sketch of the reign of Wajid Alee Shah, the last of the kings of Oude.

THE OPIUM REVENUE OF INDIA.

On the 15th of January last, a meeting was held at Freemasons' Tavern, convened by the Society for the Suppression of Opium-smuggling in China, when a petition was adopted for presentation to both Houses of Parliament. The object of the petition is to obtain the interference of Government for putting an end to the opium monopoly of the East-India Company, and to the illegal trade now carried on in China in that drug. The simple answer to the petitioners is, that they seek an impossibility. The monopoly of the East-India Company may, indeed, be abolished; but this, so far from diminishing the contraband trade in opium, would only lead to its extension. The suppression of the traffic is altogether beyond the control of Parliament. A few remarks will suffice to make this perfectly clear. Two-thirds only of the territories on the continent of India belong to the East-India Company; the remainder is in the possession of native princes, who are altogether independent in the internal administration of their principalities. Within the Company's dominions, the revenue derived from opium is realized by means of a State monopoly, and no person is permitted to grow the poppy except on account of the Government. In the native states, the cultivation of the poppy is altogether free; but the drug, when manufactured, is subjected to a heavy pass-tax, levied by the British Government on its transit to Bombay for shipment to China. Of the total export to China, now amounting to about 80,000 chests per annum, the East-India Company contribute 53,000 and the native states 27,000; and for this supply the Chinese are content to pay about six millions sterling. Now it is obvious, that if the interference of Parliament be exercised in restraining or interdicting the manufacture of opium, such interference must be restricted to the possessions of the British Government. We have neither the right nor the power of dictation within the dominions of native princes. Suppose, then, the monopoly of the East-India Company to be abolished, and the opium revenue to be surrendered, what would be the consequence? The poppy, now confined within narrow limits, would be grown in every part of India, and as free competition leads to the reduction of profits, a superabundant supply would be offered to the consumer at something like one-third of its present price. These are the natural effects of free production and free trade. But suppose the monopoly to be abandoned, and prohibition to be substituted for free production, what then would be the result? The interdict being necessarily restricted to the Company's territories, the suppression of cultivation in Bengal, with the consequent increase of price, would but have the effect of stimulating production in Central India. Malwa and Mewar are capable of affording an unlimited yield; the market would be equally well supplied; eighty thousand chests of opium would then, as now, find their way to China; and the only difference would be, that the revenue at present derived by the East-India Company would go to fill the coffers of the native princes of Central India. An increase of the pass-tax would be no bar to the export of Malwa opium. That tax has already been raised to the highest amount that can insure the transit of the drug through British territory, and any attempt to restrain production by prohibitory pass-duties would but have the effect of forcing the trade through the more circuitous routes of native states. The present system, then, appears to be the best that can be devised for checking the extended use of opium, and as such, deserves the warm support of its zealous opponents, instead of the opprobrium which they endeavour to cast upon it. A craving appetite has grown up in China for the opium of India; the people offer the sum of six millions sterling per annum for its gratification, and the mode of supply has been so contrived as to give them the smallest possible quantity for their money. The monopoly price acts as a powerful check upon consumption. Take away the monopoly, and allow free competition, and the number of chests now supplied will be trebled for the same amount of money. Take away the monopoly, and prohibit the growth of the poppy, and the provision of opium for the China market will be simply transferred from Bengal to Central India. Follow up the step, and increase the transit-duties on Malwa opium until they amount to prohibitory rates, and the trade will be diverted from the shipping ports of the East-India Company on the coast of Bombay, to those of native princes in Guzerat and the ports of Cutch. No imaginable change can be suggested which would not be productive of greater evil. Even the substitution of a system of excise would be followed by an enlarged home consumption, and in a short time the Bengalee would doubtless vie with the Chinaman in his desire for the use of the drug. Hateful as is the term monopoly in English ears, its leading features—increase of price to the consumer and restriction on the employment of capital and industry—are those which the friends of humanity must desire to see applied to the opium system of India; and the best interests of both India and China are manifestly best consulted in the continuance of the scheme which secures the largest returns with the smallest possible outlay. Our limits will not permit us to enter at large into the moral objections which have been taken to the use of opium. We would merely observe that it is not the use, but the abuse, of opium which is to be denounced. It has no place in the category of poisons the elements of which are deadly to the human constitution. Its use is not to be classed with any habit the character of which is essentially vicious. Taken in moderation it acts as an agreeable stimulant, and so far from producing any noxious effects, it conduces greatly both to comfort and health. To those who desire more minute information upon these points, we would recommend the perusal of a small pamphlet entitled "The Opium Revenue of India," in which, and within the space of two or three dozen pages, every objection put forward by the Anti-Opium Society is fairly met, thoroughly sifted, and utterly demolished. So completely, indeed, is the subject exhausted, as to leave nothing to be desired in this respect. Rumour ascribes the little work to a civil servant of the East-India Company, formerly a Member of Council at Calcutta. It is stated by the writer that opium-eating is not the kind of excitement which the large contraband importation into China goes to supply. Opium, he observes, though chewed in Europe and in India, is for the most part in China smoked like tobacco.

"As much as one helps oneself to of mustard is laid on a tin or silver perforated holder, which fits into a long reed pipe, and, the drug being ignited, the white pure flame is drawn through the pipe in two or three whiffs, which are sufficient to produce an exhilaration that lasts through the day. This is the enjoyment of which the taste has now so spread in China, that from the palace to the hovel there is scarcely a man that does not seek it. So taken, opium-smoking is not more injurious than tobacco. There is scarcely a Chinese shoemaker in Cossitulla, the street of Calcutta where Chinese congregate, that does not begin his day with these three whiffs; yet these men are all industrious artisans, the very picture of health and comfort. To deprive these men of their morning enjoyment is surely no part of the duty of beneficent moral government. Why then take measures to interdict this gratification to the Chinese."

This testimony to the innocuous effects of opium, administered in moderation, is fully corroborated by the experience of Mr. Meadows, the Chinese interpreter at Hong-kong. In a passage from a book recently published by this gentleman, and quoted in the opium pamphlet, the author observes:—

As to the morality of the opium question I am fortunately able to give the home reader by analogy, and in a few words, as exact an idea of it as I have got myself; smoking a little opium daily is like taking a pint or two of ale, or a few glasses of wine daily; smoking more opium is like taking brandy as well as beer and wine, or a large allowance of these latter; smoking very much opium is like excessive brandy and gin drinking, leading to delirium tremens and premature death. After frequent consideration of the subject during thirteen years, the last two spent at home, I can only say, that, although the substances are different, I can, as to the morality of producing, selling, and consuming them, see no difference at all: while the only difference I can observe in the consequences of consumption is, that the opium-smoker is not so violent, so maudlin, or so disgusting as the drunkard. The clothes and breath of the confirmed and constant smoker are more or less marked by the peculiar penetrating odour of opium, and he gets careless, in time, of washing from his hands the stains from his pipe. But all this is not more disagreeable than the beery, vinous, or ginny odour, and the want of cleanliness, that characterize the confirmed drunkard. In all other respects the contrast is to the disadvantage of the drunkard.

Evidently the question is one which lies altogether between the Emperor and his subjects; and we have no business whatever to interfere in its settlement. The Emperor interdicts the importation of opium because a small percentage of his subjects smoke to excess. On the other hand, the nation at large protests against the deprivation, on the ground that its moderate use supplies an innocent luxury. Victory has declared in favour of the masses, and the law has become a nullity. The nation is clearly in the right. Opium with the Chinese is now a necessary of life, and with the gradual spread of the taste for the drug, the people have thriven and fattened with progressive increase, until at length the Celestial empire boasts a population exceeding in amount four hundred millions of souls.

COTTON AND INDIAN RAILWAYS.

It was stated lately, at the annual meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, that the lines of railway which had been sanctioned for India were selected by the East-India Company for political and military, and not for commercial purposes. Such a statement must have been made in total ignorance of the facts of the case, and it is much to be regretted that a gentleman in the high position of President of the Association should not have been better acquainted with a subject upon which he professes to be deeply interested, and upon which he should be an accurate authority. We have always understood that, in the selection of the lines of railway, the chief object of the Indian authorities has been to combine, as much as possible, political with commercial advantages. It would, indeed, be difficult in the matter of Indian railways, to separate the demands of commerce from the requirements of Government, as the main channels of communication must serve both purposes. The chief political line, namely, that from Calcutta to the north-west frontier, might have been conducted along the course of the present direct trunk road, but, in order that it might afford every possible convenience in a commercial point of view, it was carried by the circuitous route of the Gangetic valley, and will thus keep the trade of that part of the country in its original channel. But there are some lines which have been sanctioned chiefly for commercial purposes. We would mention that which traverses the cotton districts of Kandeish and Berar, whose terminus is at the great emporium of trade—Nagpore. The line, also, from Surat to Baroda and Ahmedabad was sanctioned for the purpose of developing the resources of the cotton districts of Guzerat. The railway from Madras to the opposite coast is another line which has been constructed principally with the view of opening up the resources of the country, and of giving every facility to trade. We do not deny that political advantages must be gained by any line of railway in India connecting one place of importance with another; but the Indian authorities have been most anxious that these undertakings should prove remunerative, in order that European capitalists might be induced to embark capital in these and similar works, and have consequently studied in what manner they would best subserve the interests of trade and develop the agricultural and mineral wealth of the country.

THE RAILWAY.—We learn by a letter from Allahabad that the line of railway between Allahabad and Bhurrawaree, a distance of about 28 miles, is nearly ready for traffic, and that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, on his return from Gorraonpore, which is expected about the 31st January, will formally inaugurate the opening of the line,—the ceremony which took place some time ago having been merely in honour of the completion of a small portion of it.

DR. HONIGBERGER asserts that he has discovered a means of preventing cholera by inoculation on a principle similar to that of vaccination for small-pox, and he has solicited government, in order to test the truth of his pretensions, to allow him to inoculate the prisoners in those jails most subject to the disease.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—I shall feel obliged by your inserting the enclosed letter in reply to the article headed "The Extinct Dynasty of Oude," which appeared in your journal of the 30th ult., which I send by the hands of Syed Abdoolah, attaché to the Oude embassy; and I shall feel obliged by your inserting the same as an act of justice to the Royal Family of Oude, whose particular wish is that it should appear, and by whose command I have the honour to write to you to this effect,

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

MOHD. MUSEEH OODDEEN,

Accredited Vakeel to H.M. the King of Oude.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—I beg to send you a few observations upon an article headed, "The Extinct Dynasty of Oude," which appeared in your issue of the 30th January, 1857. I trust that you will have the fairness to give them insertion.

The writer of that article commences by saying, "It would not be easy to furnish from the world's history another example in which the happiness and prosperity of a country have been so utterly disregarded by its rulers as in that of the recently-annexed kingdom of Oude." Now, I apprehend the difficulty would be to find in the world's history another instance of a country which has been victimized by a powerful neighbour, as Oude has been by the East-India Company. When, actuated by a love of conquest, other nations have subdued the object of their ambition by force of arms, and justified the act by the right of the stronger: the Company's acquisitions are made by far different means, their policy being to plunge the unfortunate state which they covet into irretrievable pecuniary difficulties, and to make the disorders and grievances resulting therefrom a hypocritical pretence,—first, for interference; and then for annexation: in other words, their system is, the skilful application of the process by which cunning men create debtors, and then force them at once to submit to their most exorbitant demands. If ever there was one system more Machiavelian, more appropriative of the show of justice where the basest injustice was attempted, it is the system by which the government of the different states of India has been wrested from the hands of their respective princes, and collected into the grasp of the British power.

Passing on to the writer's notice of the character of each reign, his first assertion, viz., that "Saadut Khan, the founder of the family, closed his career, as governor of Oude, by an act of treachery against his liege lord, the Mogul emperor, which led to the sack of Delhi by the Persian monarch, Nadir Shah;" that "Nadir, though profiting by the counsels of Saadut, held the Nawaub in such base contempt, that, after upbraiding him for his disloyalty, he spat upon his beard, and banished him from his presence;" and that "Saadut, unable to survive the ignominy, swallowed poison," appears to rest entirely upon a memorandum furnished by Fletcher Hayes, assistant to the Resident, and to be found at page 76 of the Blue Book of papers relating to Oude, 1856. Mr. Hayes commences his minute by stating, "The founder of the dynasty of Oude was Mahomed Ameer, better known as Saadut Khan, and also as Boorhan-ool-Moolk: the treachery of this subordinate to his sovereign of Delhi is familiar to all who have read the annals of Persia. As this historian was born in the year 1570; completed his history in 1611, and died in 1626; and as Saadut Khan's date is 1739, any mention of the latter by that author is an impossibility; a fact of which the writer of the article in question was either cognizant or not; in the one case, he has been guilty of wilful misrepresentation; in the other, of the most disgraceful ignorance. I leave him the choice of either horn of the dilemma.

The real facts of the case are, that Boorhan-ool-Moulk, who was commonly called Saadut Khan, also Meer Mohumud Ameer Khan, and who is described by Elphinstone, not as "an infamous Persian Peolar," but as "originally a merchant of Khorasan, who had risen to a military command," was descended from the family of Ali, the renowned hero, cousin and son-in-law of Mohumud the Prophet, and who was made caliph, A.D. 656. Saadut Ali was born at Neshapore, in the kingdom of Ispahen, during the reign of Mohumud Shah. In 1719, he visited India, and entered the service of the King of Delhi. His eminent and statesmanlike qualities, and his brilliant valour, more particularly displayed during the formidable insurrection of the Seids, which broke out in 1720, and spread terror throughout the capital, gained him the favour and confidence of the monarch, who, as a reward for his distinguished services, appointed him viceroy of Oude in 1722.

Towards the close of the year 1738, Nadir Shah advanced to Delhi; Saadut Khan gave him battle, and the result was the complete defeat of the Indian army, the commander-in-chief, Khan Douran being slain, and Saadut Khan made prisoner. Teir-vol Mutakherin and Ummadool Saadut, the popular Mahomedan historians, relate that while the conflict was at its height, the elephants which carried respectively Saadut Khan, and his nephew, Shere Jung, furiously attacked each other: that upon one of them running away, the other pursued him into the enemy's lines, and that in this manner the two nobles were made prisoners, and conducted before Nadir Shah. The Shah received them with much courtesy, showing them every mark of respect due to their rank, and it was through their mediation that a friendly meeting was effected between the conqueror, Nadir Shah, and the vanquished, Mohumud Shah. So far from Saadut having committed suicide, the historians, Seir-ool Mutakherin, Mirroot Aftal Noomah, Zuffer Namah, Nadir Namah, and Yadgar Bahadorree assert, upon the best and most undeniable evidence, that he died of a cancer in his back. The accurate Elphinstone also, speaking of his death, merely states, "His (Nadir Shah's) first adviser was Saadut Khan; that nobelman died soon after at Delhi:" not a word about suicide.

His Majesty the King of Delhi was so satisfied with the loyalty, integrity, and uniform good conduct of this eminent man, that, upon the recommendation of Nadir Shah, and with the unanimous approval and consent of his own courtiers, he appointed his nephew, Suffdur Jung, to succeed his uncle as Viceroy of Oude. This recommendation, on the part of Nadir Shah, is as complete a refutation of the slanderous report of his having offered Saadut Khan the indignity of spitting upon his beard, as the King of Delhi's appointment of his nephew to succeed him in the vice-royalty of Oude is of his alleged disloyalty to his royal master.

Speaking of Shujah-ud-Dowlah, the writer of the article says,— "Shujah, though ambitious, lacked the decision and courage which usually characterize the successful usurper. At the battle with the Rohillas, fought on his behalf by Colonel Champion, in 1774, he betrayed the most dastardly pusillanimity. It had been arranged that he should support the colonel with a strong force of cavalry. Instead, however, of fulfilling his engagement, the prince encamped in the vicinity of the field of battle, and remained a passive spectator of the contest." It was perfectly understood between Colonel Champion and Shujah-ad-Dowlah, that the troops of the latter, consisting of irregular cavalry, should only act in the case of extreme emergency, a measure of the greatest prudence, when the great difference between the military movements of European and Indian troops is considered. Shujah's little army was consequently regarded merely as a corps de reserve.

Equally unfounded and unjust is the charge of avarice which the writer of the article brings against Saadut Ali, in these words:—"Saadut died in 1814. The essential part of his engagement he had never performed. Avarice was his ruling passion; and to enable him to gratify its illimitable demands, he had rendered himself a complete adept in the art of extortion. In the thirteen years which elapsed between the conclusion of the treaty of 1801 and his death, Saadut contrived to amass treasure to the amount of thirteen millions sterling, exacted from a territory which, during his reign, gave only a million and a half of revenue."

Saadut Ali ascended the throne in 1798, and for four years the revenue of the country amounted annually to not less than thirty millions of rupees, or 3,000,000*l.* sterling. The nawab being well versed in the principles of political economy, and, moreover, of prudent habits, succeeded in saving, without thereby oppressing his subjects, considerable sums, which were still further increased by the vast property left him by his wealthy brother, Ausufud Dowlah; and by the riches which came into his possession by right, in consequence of several of the Begums, slaves, eunuchs, like Almas, Allie, and others, dying intestate. It was in this manner that the thirteen millions sterling were accumulated and not by extortion as asserted above.

The charge of misrule and mismanagement brought by the writer of the article against Ghazee-ood-deen, the son of Saadut, and his successor, Nusseer-ood-deen, I shall take the liberty of answering, in the words of Mr. Malcolm Lewin, late second judge of the Sudder Court of Madras:—"With the constantly recurring demands of the Indian Government in the Oude treasury, it is not surprising that the revenues of the country should be found insufficient to meet the ordinary charges of Government,—that the king should be unable to defray the expenses of his army,—that under the confused and vacillating system of internal administration established by us, crimes should go unpunished and unrepressed; and, lastly, that these results should display themselves, which naturally arose out of the vicious system we had devised and forced upon the king as the certain means of his destruction."

The system of employing residents at the native courts has contributed more than any other measure to bring about the evils so hypocritically deplored by those who have turned them so much to their own advantage. What a Resident is shall be described in the words of the immortal Burke:—"That he (the native prince) should have no want of assistance, a civil gentleman, called a Resident, is kept at his court, who, under pretence of providing duty for the pay of these (the Company's) troops, gets assignments of the revenue into his hands. Under his provident management, debts soon accumulate; new assignments are made for these debts; until, step by step, the whole revenue, and with it the whole power of the country is delivered into his hands." "The interference of the Residents," observes the Hon. Frederick John Shore, in his "Notes on Indian Affairs," "has been almost always exerted for evil; indeed, so extremely difficult is it to discover the slightest benefit arising to any class of people from the establishment of Residents at the native courts, that there is even ground for the supposition that the measure has been adopted and maintained for the express purpose of promoting misgovernment and confusion in the different principalities, so as to afford plausible excuses and opportunity for our taking possession of them."

As to the insinuation with which the writer of the article concludes, that some justification for annexation is to be found in the personal character of the princes of the Oude dynasty, it is by no means a safe principle that the vices of a sovereign justify his deposition, for if so, the tenure of certain thrones in Europe, at this very moment, would not be worth a year's purchase.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

MOHD. MUSEEH OODDEEN KHAN,

Accredited Vakeel to H.M. the King of Oude.

Harley House, New-road, Feb. 14, 1857.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—In your paper of the 30th January, 1857, appears an article on "The Extinct Dynasty of Oude," the writer of which appears to think that he is strengthening the cause of the "annexationists" of that kingdom, by casting stigmas upon the character of every ruler of Oude who has existed from the time of Saadut Khan down to the reign of the present King, Wajid Ali Shah. Abuse is not argument; and were a retaliation to be made by quoting, on the authority of the Indian Blue Books, the various acts of injustice committed by the East-India Company upon native rulers ever since the year 1601, when their first charter was granted, one constant systematic course of treaty-breaking could be exhibited against them. Suppose that for every "illustration" given in the article above-mentioned, a parallel instance of conduct on the part of the Company was quoted in rejoinder by the King of Oude in the following manner:—

"Saadut Khan, the founder of the family, closed his career as Governor of Oude by an act of treachery against his liege lord the Mogul Emperor. This occurred in 1739."

"On the 9th of February, 1757, an agreement was entered into between the Governor and Council of the East-India Company and Seraj-ood-Dowlah. Shortly after the conclusion of the treaty, a combination having been made by the principal officers of Seraj-ood-Dowlah to depose him, and place Meer Jaffier Ali Khan on the throne, the Bengal Government joined the confederacy."—Return of Treaties, 16th June, 1853, page 13.

Now, sir, I put it to you whether such a course of procedure would in any way support or controvert the justice or injustice, the legality or the illegality of the measure of annexation? Do such wanton attacks or retaliatory defences affect the real question? The result would simply be, that any person acquainted with the history of India would naturally inquire, how it came to pass that the East-India Company, with the knowledge of the treachery of the then existing rulers of Oude, made a treaty with them on the 16th of August, 1765, establishing sincere friendship and firm union between these very rulers of Oude and themselves, and this at a time when your paper declares that "the vizier threw himself unconditionally on the clemency of his victors!"

Mr. Thackeray has lately given some very marked illustrations of the reigns and characters of the four King Georges of England; the short-comings imputed to them might as well be brought forward as grounds for remark on our Most Gracious Queen, and arguments thence derived reflecting on her Government, as the attempt be made to justify the annexation of the present time by alleging bad administration on the part of bygone Nawabs of Oude.

Much has been written in abuse of the Kings of Oude, in order to prepare the public mind for annexation. Lord Dalhousie himself felt the difficulty attendant on taking such a step, and shrank from the personal responsibility of such a measure. In the "Papers relating to Oude," presented to Parliament in 1856, at page 184, paragraph 58, Lord Dalhousie writes:—

"The King may be required to abdicate the sovereign powers he has abused, and to consent to the incorporation of Oude with the territories of the British Crown. Although the dynasty of Oude is a thing but of yesterday, sprung from treachery at the first, only reared to kingly rank by ourselves; and although I firmly believe that the incorporation of that territory with the British dominions, and the total extinction of its sovereignty would be the happiest issue that could be devised for the interests of all connected with it; yet I do not counsel the adoption of that measure by the Government of India."

In fact, if the East-India Company attempt to base their right to annex the kingdom of Oude, either upon rights conferred on them by treaties, or upon any principles of law or justice, their case must utterly fail, and the King of Oude may have his own again. But if "expediency" is to be their plea, and an affectionate regard for the welfare of the people of Oude is to be set up as a screen, under cover of which this "measure of expediency" is to be supported, then the King's hopes of justice must rest upon an appeal to that spirit of honesty and fair-play which has always so pre-eminently characterized the British nation.

I think, sir, I have put the case fairly before you and the public. If you or your correspondents will have the goodness to bring forward arguments in support of the measure of annexation, well based upon any of the treaties, or on any other good grounds, support the legality of the act, and at the same time abstain from abusive remarks and vituperation, many will be happy to be convinced by them of the propriety of a measure which otherwise must be considered as one by which a stronger Government, and a professed friendly ally, has taken advantage of a weaker power.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

R. W. BIRD.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

The Marquis of Clanricarde called attention to the evils arising out of the double government of our Indian possessions, and concluded by moving that the system under which the government of her Majesty's territories is administered in India is no longer suitable to the condition and prospects of that vast empire, or the development of its resources and the improvement and welfare of its inhabitants.

The Duke of Argyll defended the Indian Government, commenting upon the great progress already effected, and the remedial measures now in contemplation for the benefit of the inhabitants of our Oriental empire.

The motion was negatived without a division.

FEBRUARY 21.

HOSTILITIES AGAINST CHINA.

The Earl of Derby moved the following resolution respecting the late proceedings at Canton:—

"That this House has heard with deep regret of the interruption of amicable relations between her Majesty's subjects and the Chinese authorities at Canton, arising out of the measures adopted by her Majesty's Chief Superintendent of Trade to obtain reparation for alleged infractions of the supplementary treaty of the 8th October, 1843.

"That, in the opinion of this House, the occurrence of differences on this subject rendered the time peculiarly unfavourable for pressing on the Chinese authorities a claim for the admittance of British subjects into Canton, which had been left in abeyance since 1849, and for supporting the same by force of arms.

"That, in the opinion of this House, operations of actual hostilities ought not to have been undertaken without the express instructions previously received of her Majesty's Government, and that neither of the subjects adverted to in the foregoing resolutions afforded sufficient justification for such operations."

After considerable discussion the debate was adjourned till the 26th instant.

HOSTILITIES AGAINST CHINA.

The adjourned debate on the resolutions proposed by the Earl of Derby being resumed, a lengthened discussion ensued, at the close of which their lordships divided, when there appeared for the motion—

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FEBRUARY 20.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

Mr. Oliviera asked the President of the Board of Control whether the Indian Government would extend the system of a guaranteed rate of interest upon further capital proposed to be invested in railways in India beyond that already agreed upon, several railway schemes having been recently submitted to the public, upon which the question of a guaranteed rate of interest upon capital was left in doubt.

Mr. V. Smith said, the Indian Government had laid down no positive rule as to future guarantees. They would consider each case as it was brought forward, but, having guaranteed interest on 20 millions of capital to be laid out in railways, they were not very desirous of extending their liability. He sincerely hoped some companies would be found to promote railways in India, as they would be very profitable undertakings without any guarantee at all.

FEBRUARY 23.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE IN INDIA.

Sir E. Perry presented a petition signed by nearly all the European residents in Bengal unconnected with Government, consisting of indigo planters, landed proprietors, and Calcutta merchants and traders, calling the attention of the House to the state of the Company's courts in the interior, and deprecating the proposed measure of the India Law Commissioners, which withdraws Europeans from the protection of her Majesty's courts, and places them under the jurisdiction of the Company's judges. The petitioners stated that the East-India Company's criminal courts are the dread and terror of the people; are used as instruments of revenge and oppression, convictions in them are regarded as evidence quite as much of misfortune as guilt, and the public have no confidence in them. On the other hand, no merchant or capitalist in Calcutta will ever lend or invest money without an agreement that the contract shall be solely under the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Supreme Court, and capitalists in the interior resort to the same expedient. They therefore prayed that the jurisdiction of her Majesty's courts should be extended to the interior.

FEBRUARY 24.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. Deasy asked the President of the Board of Control whether any reduction had taken place, or was contemplated in the number of appointments in the civil service in India open to public competition?

Mr. V. Smith said there could not be any reduction, as a certain number of places were open to competition by Act of Parliament. If there happened to be fewer appointments, that circumstance was owing to accidental causes, such as fewer deaths occurring in the service.

FEBRUARY 26.

Mr. Cobden moved the following resolution:—

"That this House has heard with concern of the conflicts which have occurred between the British and Chinese authorities in the Canton river; and, without expressing an opinion as to the extent to which the Government of China may have afforded this country cause of complaint respecting the non-fulfilment of the treaty of 1842, this House considers that the papers which have been laid upon the table fail to establish satisfactory grounds for the violent measures resorted to at Canton in the late affair of the Arrow; and that a select committee be appointed to inquire into the state of our commercial relations with China."

A debate ensued, which at a late hour was adjourned until the 27th instant, on which day, after further discussion, it was again adjourned until the 2nd of March.

HER MAJESTY'S LEVEE.—The following presentations to His Royal Highness Prince Albert took place at the Levee held on February 26: Mr. Brooke, on leaving England for Borneo, by Earl Grey; Lieut. W. J. Cottam, on appointment to the Madras Artillery; Mr. A. Lewis, on appointment as Advocate-General of Bombay, by the Chairman of the East-India Company; the bishop of Graham's Town, by the Rt. Hon. H. Labouchere. Ens. J. Y. Hayter, on appointment to the Hon. East-India Company's Service by his uncle, Sir George Hayter; Mr. Probert, by Viscount Boyne. Lord Vivian, on appointment as Lord Lieutenant of Cornwall. Major-General Sir R. Vivian, on nomination to the order of the Bath, by Lord Panmure. Mr. E. H. C. Monckton, by the Right Hon. Vernon Smith.

THE LATE MR. DYCE SOMBRE AND THE NATIVE COURT OF AGRA.—An application was made a few days since to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council to revive certain appeals by the committee of the late Mr. Dyce Sombre against the judgment of the native Court of Agra, in Bengal, in suits against the East-India Company to recover the value of large effects belonging to the late Begum Sombre, which had been seized by the East-India Company. The committee of Mr. Dyce Sombre had died, and Mrs. Dyce Sombre applied to have her name and the names of the two sisters of the late Mr. Dyce Sombre substituted for the committee. The application was granted.

LIEUT. H. BRIMFIELD, LATE 18TH B.N.I.—This officer, we regret to state, is now the inmate of a lunatic asylum. Upon his first arrival in this country he exhibited signs of madness, but his friends hoped that by a change of scene the malady would be removed. It now appears that during one of his fits he resigned the service without claiming the pension to which he was entitled, and his friends only became aware of the fact very recently. They have made a representation to the Court of Directors upon the subject with a view to obtain the pension.—Grindley's Home News.

MEDICAL SERVICE.—An examination of candidates for admission into the medical service of the East-India Company will take place at the India House, on Monday, July 13. The probable number of vacancies will be fifteen.

ESTATE OF MR. C. R. THOMPSON.—The first dividend of 3d. in the pound on this estate has been declared, payable any Thursday at Mr. Stainfields, Basinghall-street.

MR. C. ALISON, now Oriental Secretary at Constantinople, has been appointed Secretary to her Majesty's Embassy at the Porte.

THE WILL OF THE LATE SIR HENRY POTTINGER has been proved in London, the personality within the province of Canterbury being sworn under 70,000l.

COLONEL OUSELEY, professor of Persian at Haileybury, has proceeded to Paris, by the direction of the Government, to assist at the negotiations now being carried on with Ferukh Khan.

MR. G. H. FAIRFIELD has been appointed consul at Port Louis in the Mauritius, for the United States of America.

ENS. A. PRESANT, LATE 18TH BOMBAY N.I., has been allowed to receive the pension of his rank from Lord Clive's Fund, in consideration of the condition of his health when he retired.

THE EASTERN STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, in their report, read at the annual meeting on the 19th ult., express a confident conviction that, before the next half-yearly meeting (in August), the Leviathan ship they are building at Blackwall will be launched, and the purposes of the company so far realized.

THE NORTHERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—We have to direct attention to a prospectus which appears in our advertisement pages, of a new undertaking of a promising character, proposing to carry out an extension of the East-Indian Railway to Denajepore and Darjeeling.

ROBBERY AT THE EAST-INDIA HOUSE.—A person named Miller was charged at the Mansion House with having, together with another person, son of Mr. Ruggles, one of the messengers at the India House, stolen a cash box, containing a sum of money in bank notes and coin to the amount of between 60l. and 70l., the property of Mr. Ruggles, sen., the father of one of the prisoners. The case was remanded.

THE VEDANTA PRIZE.—A gentleman, lately in the Indian service (Mr. J. Muir), has lodged with the Royal Asiatic Society a sum of 300l. as a prize for the best essay on the Vedānta system, as a philosophy and as a religion. The essay is to be in French or German,—and the competition is open to all the world.

STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS.—The chairman of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company, accompanied by Capt. Eastwick, paid an official visit, on the 20th February, for the inspection of the building just completed as a home and lodging-house for Asiatic seamen in the West-India Dock-road, Limehouse. Col. Sykes was informed that the institution needed funds to effect the completion of the building.

LIEUT. J. C. PATERSON.—The Court of Directors of the East-India Company, in consideration of the good character maintained by Lieut. J. C. Paterson, late of the Bengal army, have granted that officer a pension of £70 per annum, from the date of his arrival in England.

MADRAS MILITARY FUND.—It having become known that the actuary has reported against the advisability of granting half-pensions to annuitants remarrying, considerable disappointment has been felt, and it is said that a representation will be made to the directors at Madras upon the subject, in the hope that the measure will be adopted without delay. —Grindley's Home News.

LIEUT. R. G. WATSON, 2nd Bombay Eur. Light Inf., left England on the 20th February to join his regiment at Bushire, via Marseilles, Constantinople, and Asia Minor. He was to travel on horseback from Samsome on the coast of Anatolia to Mosorel on the Tigris, a distance of 500 miles, and thence by raft to Bagdad. He was provided with the necessary instruments to ascertain the altitude and position of the various places along his route for the information of the Geographical Society.

PRIZE MONEY AT THE INDIA HOUSE.—In the Vice-Chancellor's Court, Feb. 24th, a Mr. Leon obtained an ex parte injunction to restrain payment of certain prize-money at the India House to a navy-agent named Edwards, who had bought up the prize-money in question, and in September, 1853, had given a power of attorney to the plaintiff, Mr. Leon, to receive all moneys due to him, there being a running account between them.

MEER JAFUR ALEE has addressed us a letter, stating that there is no foundation whatever for a paragraph headed "A Singular Document," which appeared in our last number (Indian Mail, p. 120), copied from the Bombay Times. The paragraph alluded to asserted the existence of an agreement between Meer Jafur Alee and Nussur Ali Khan, heir-presumptive to the throne of Oude, in which the latter assigns to Jafur Alee the sole conduct of his "Case," and promises to reward his services with a pension.

DIRECT CADETS.—The following gentlemen passed their examination on the 17th February, for admission into the Company's army as direct cadets:—Messrs. T. R. Trevor, J. Wilkinson, H. F. Wilson, Q. S. A. Jameson, H. Blair, T. F. C. Rochfort, C. Mainwaring, F. S. S. Brind, J. Forsyth, F. S. Goad, P. H. M. Wynter, N. Macdonald, F. Henderson, G. H. Oakes, J. R. Pearson, A. Olivant, A. Hogg, F. H. Tyrrell, A. F. Laughton, S. D. B. Edwardes, D. Wright, G. H. Bonnor. George Western, veterinary surgeon.

MESSRS. GLADSTONE AND CO., merchants, in Austin Friars, recently, in the court of Common Pleas, brought an action to recover the amount of a promissory note for 1,000 rupees made at Calcutta, on the 1st January, 1851, by a Mr. Nash, who was captain of the sloop Maidstone, in favour of Messrs. Allen, Deffell, and Co., and endorsed by them to the plaintiffs. The case for the defendant was that he had discharged the note by remitting a sum of 100l. to Messrs. Allen. Mr. John Deffell deposed that the 100l. was sent to pay off moneys which they had advanced. Verdict for plaintiff. Damages 100l.

AT THE ASIATIC SOCIETY (Feb.), a cast of a very interesting Hindu sculpture was brought to the notice of the meeting, as having been presented to the society by James Fergusson, Esq., in the name of the Crystal Palace Company. Prof. Dowson said that all he had been able to learn about this sculpture was, that it had been brought from Madras. At the bottom of the stone there is an inscription, which has been somewhat damaged; and he had not been able to make out a connected reading of the whole; but he had deciphered sufficient to prove that it was a votive offering to a Buddhist temple; and he thought this was the only point of importance in the inscription. The language is Pali.

THE PERSIAN WAR.—On Saturday appeared in print a copy of the correspondence showing the proportion of the expenses incurred in sending an expedition against Persia which is to be defrayed out of the revenues of the United Kingdom. It appears that the Bombay expedition was prepared (at least, so it is presumed) under the orders of Her Majesty's Government, communicated through the secret committee; and the Directors of the East-India Company accordingly addressed the Board of Control on the 22nd of October last, "suggesting how far it might be just and proper to subject India to the whole of the charges consequent on the orders" referred to. Allusion is made to the case of Afghanistan, and the burden entailed on India by the Afghan war. This letter was referred to the Foreign-office, and thence to the Treasury. Their lordships decided to propose to Parliament to provide for one moiety of the extraordinary expenses of the expedition; viz., that portion of the expense over and above the ordinary pay and allowances of the troops, and the ordinary charge of the Company's ships employed. The Court of Directors expressed their satisfaction at this arrangement, and promised to transmit an estimate of the expense prior to the meeting of Parliament. That estimate does not appear on the face of the papers before us.

PUBLIC MEETINGS ON CHINA AND PERSIAN AFFAIRS.—A tea-duties meeting was held in Edinburgh on Feb. 16, when resolutions were unanimously passed, that the proposed interference with the reduction of the tea duty was a breach of public faith, tending to unsettle all confidence in any commercial legislation whatever; that whilst thus protesting against any further interference with a trade already tampered with repeatedly within the last few years, in the event of the proposed postponement of the duty to 1s. being carried out, it should be by two changes—one just now, and one in 1860; instead of four—one every year, as proposed by Government—on account of the excessive inconvenience caused year after year, both to the trade and to the Customs.—The wars with Persia and China were discussed at an important meeting at Ross, held on Feb. 16. A petition against the aggressive policy of the Government in the East, with reference particularly to Bushire and Canton was agreed to.—A public meeting was held at Bristol, on Feb. 19, to petition Parliament against the Persian and Chinese wars. The chair was taken by R. Charleton, Esq. A resolution proposed by the Rev. Mr. O'Neil was unanimously adopted, expressing deep regret at the bombardment of Canton by the British fleet under Admiral Seymour. The resolution also declared that the meeting viewed the expedition against Persia as an aggression.—On Feb. 22, meeting, against the Chinese and Persian wars, was held at Bridge-house Hotel, London Bridge; Fred. Doulton, Esq., the chair. A condemnatory resolution was carried.

EMPOWERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

At the FIFTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING, held on 27th November, 1856, it was shown that on the 30th June last—

The number of Policies in force was 5,738
The Amount Insured was £2,752,197 7s. 3d.
The Annual Income was £118,557 16s. 3d.

Two Bonuses have been declared (in 1848 and 1853), adding nearly two per cent. per annum on the average to sums assured, and by which a Policy of £1,000 issued in 1842 on a healthy life, is now increased to £1,200.

Since the last division of Profits in 1853, the accumulated funds have increased by more than £105,000, offering considerable advantages to present assureds.

Profits divided every five years—next division in 1858.

The Society, since its establishment, has paid claims on 651 Policies, assuring £354,008.

Assurances are effected at home or abroad on healthy lives at as moderate rates as the most recent data will allow.

Indian Assurances at very moderate rates, and great facilities given to assureds.

Invalid Lives assured on scientifically-constructed tables.

Policies issued free of stamp-duty, and every charge but the Premiums.

Agents wanted for vacant places.

Prospectuses, Forms of Proposals, and every other information, may be obtained of the Secretary, at the Chief Office, or on application to any of the Society's Agents in the country.

A Bonus of Twenty per cent. from realized profits has been declared for the present year to all policy-holders on the profit scale who have paid five years' premium.

The advantages of this Society are as follow:—

Low Rates of Premium, calculated on the best and most recent investigations of mortality in India.

Annual participation in the profits after payment of premium for five years, by parties assured on the profit scale.

Immediate reduction of premium to the English rates in the case of a party assured proceeding to Europe for a permanency, and reduction after one year in the case of the party visiting Europe for a short period.

The civil rate only charged on the lives of parties in the military service, holding civil offices, as long as they continue in such office.

The Society also grants Deferred Annuities and Endowments payable at any given period.

Tables and full information may be had at the Office in Chatham Place; or on application to the Secretaries at Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or to the Agents of the Agra and United Service Bank, at the other Indian Presidencies.

SURVEYING ARMY APPOINTMENTS IN INDIA.

OFFICERS at Home on Furlough, and GENTLEMEN CADETS, desirous of qualifying themselves for the Diplomas in SURVEYING and ENGINEERING, may obtain the requisite information by applying to Mr. HENRY JAMES CASTLE, Associate of the Institute of Civil Engineers, and Lecturer in Surveying and Levelling at King's College, London, who is at all times prepared to give Private Instruction (or to form a class for practical field-work) in the use and application of the several instruments required for Surveying and Levelling. If desired, one or two Pupils could reside with the Lecturer.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to future insurers FOUR-FIFTHS of the PROFITS, with QUINQUENNIAL DIVISION, or a LOW RATE of PREMIUM without participation of profits.

The next division of profits will be declared in June, 1860, when all participating policies which shall have subsisted at least one year at Christmas, 1859, will be allowed to share in the profits.

At the five divisions of profits made by this Company, the total reversionary bonuses added to the policies have exceeded 913,000*l*.

At Christmas, 1854, the assurance in force amounted to upwards of 4,240,000*l*., the income from the Life branch in 1854 was more than 200,000*l*., and the Life Assurance Fund (independent of the guarantee capital) exceeded 1,700,000*l*.

FOREIGN RISKS.—The extra premiums required for the East and West Indies, the British Colonies, and the northern parts of the United States of America, have been materially reduced.

INVALID LIVES.—Persons who are not in such sound health as would enable them to insure their lives at the tabular premiums, may have their lives insured at extra premiums.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, provided such policies shall have been effected a sufficient time to have attained in each case a value not under 50*l*.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written notices of, received and registered.

MEDICAL FEES paid by the Company, and no charge will be made for policy stamps.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—Insurances are effected upon every description of property, at moderate rates.

Losses caused by Explosion of Gas are admitted by this Company.

The East-Indian Railway is open to Ranegunge, on the route to Delhi, and will soon be completed to Rajmahal. The object of the present undertaking is to construct a northerly extension to Dinajpore and Darjeeling, accommodating the districts of Ranepore, Malda, and Purneah. The connection may be made by one of several routes, the comparative advantages of which can only be determined by actual survey. The total length of railway to be constructed will be between 200 and 300 miles, to be undertaken in sections, as the Court of Directors of the East-India Company may direct.

The proposed lines will accommodate a country of great traffic and vast resources, as shown in the report of Dr. Campbell, who has occupied an official position for above twenty years in these districts. The lower country sends largely to Calcutta, for consumption and shipment, sugar, tobacco, cotton, hemp, jute, rice, oil-seeds, &c.; and in the upper country lines will be the chief route. The hill regions also produce coal, and Assam and Central Asia. Besides this, Darjeeling, which enjoys a climate equal to that of England, is a sanatorium of great importance to the community of Calcutta, and will command a first-class traffic, which will be greatly increased when the distance is reduced from a week of laborious travelling to a single day of convenient transit. The East-India Company have felt it to be so great an object to increase the means of communication between these places, that they have it in contemplation to expend £150,000 on an improved high road to Darjeeling.

It is estimated that the cost of the railway will not exceed £9,000 per mile.

The grounds on which the Northern Bengal Railway rests its claims to the support of the East-India Company and the public are,—

That it is a natural and necessary extension, in a northerly direction, of the East-Indian Railway, near Rajmahal, where it diverges to the north-west, and will open up the communications to the north-east.

That it is required for developing the advantages of the sanatorium at Darjeeling, and the neighbouring districts.

That it would be admirably adapted for the purposes of a European military depot on the frontier of Nepal.

The Directors are in communication with the Hon. East-India Company, with a view to place this Company upon the same basis as the other Indian railway companies, under a guarantee of a minimum rate of interest. Should this arrangement, which is regarded by the Directors as an essential and indispensable condition, not be effected, the deposit of three shillings per share allotted, less the expenses which shall have been incurred. The Certificates will not be required to execute any deed, but will receive Scrip Liability.

Applications for Shares may be sent to the Brokers, Messrs. SCOTT, CORBORN, and SCOTTS, 16, Throgmorton Street; or to the Company's Office, No. 2, King's Arms Yard, E.C., in the form provided; but no application will be considered unless a deposit of three shillings on each share is previously made to Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS, and Co., Bankers of the Company. The Deposit will be returned if the application is not needed to.

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS, FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

THE First Number of the Overland Newspaper, which is to supersede the CIRCULAR hitherto forwarded to India by Messrs. W. THACKER and CO., was published and will be continued upon the day of the departure of each succeeding Overland Mail.

ON THE 10TH OF JANUARY, 1857,

In entering upon the field of competition with established Journals having the same object in view, it will be required of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. that they should explain on what peculiar ground they lay claim to public support.

Their long and intimate connection with the Anglo-Indian community entitles them to believe that every confidence will be placed in their assurance, that they will endeavour to deserve the preference they seek to obtain; but they are aware, that even amongst their oldest and warmest friends, some rational demonstration of an intention to achieve superiority is expected.

Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. beg, therefore, to state that in their OVERLAND NEWS they propose to aim at a more perfect CONDENSATION of General News than has hitherto been attempted, that they may be enabled to devote a greater portion of their space to COMMERCIAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The peculiar constitution of British Society in India, and the immense impulse that has been given of late years to Railway Speculation, Agricultural Improvement, and Commercial Enterprise in that vast Empire, suggest the importance of a close attention to all these matters, which bear particularly on the interests of the great classes concerned.

From several channels of information, hitherto closed or neglected, the fullest details will therefore be sought.

LITERATURE in all its branches, as bearing essentially on the experience of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., will receive, as hitherto, the minutest care; and as they have been able to secure the services of a gentleman who moves much in literary circles, occasional items of pleasant gossip, which do not find their way into the public journals, will embellish the pages of the OVERLAND NEWS.

Upon all subjects connected with Indian politics, the interests of the Services, contemplated Local Changes, the arrival in and departure from this country of Passengers, by Ship or Steamer, the retirement of Officers of all classes, &c., the greatest attention will be bestowed; while the intelligence from Europe, of a general nature, will be presented in a striking form, accompanied by such Commentaries as may be expected from the pen of an experienced Journalist.

In a word, Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. hope that their Paper will be all that the best papers have hitherto been—AND SOMETHING MORE.

The Publication will be of the same size as the ordinary English Overland Papers, viz., a folio of Twenty-four pages, with Supplements when necessary, and it will be issued in time for transmission to India by each Fortnightly Mail, via Marseilles. The Price, inclusive of postage, will be Rs. 8 per annum, payable in advance. Orders to be addressed to Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., 87, Newgate Street, London; Messrs. THACKER, SPINK, and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Calcutta; Messrs. THACKER and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Bombay; and Mr. JAMES HILL, Lucknow.

HINDUSTANI IN CLASSES.

THE REV. G. SMALL, believing that many Ladies and Gentlemen, though aware to some degree of the desirableness of acquiring, at least, the rudiments of Hindustani before going to India, are yet deterred from doing so by the usual expensiveness of a course of private lessons under a competent teacher in this country, proposes to form CLASSES for the study of that most useful language, on very economical terms, for Ladies as well as Gentlemen, at his CLASS ROOMS, No. 3, LEADENHALL STREET.

For Terms, &c. address, 1, St. John's-grove, Croydon.

TO GENTLEMEN WITH TENDER FEET.

J. CHAPPELL, 383, STRAND, LONDON, BOOT-MAKER, and Professor of Fitting; Successor to the celebrated Mr. B. Smith, late of Great Queen Street, begs to call the attention of such to his method of measuring, by which he guarantees to produce a PERFECT FIT AT FIRST TRIAL, combining comfort with a gentlemanly form. J. C. particularly solicits those gentlemen who despair of obtaining comfortable Boots, as from his great success and consequent increase of business, he is confident of their becoming regular customers. The leather used is dressed so as not to draw the feet or become hard in wear, although it requires blacking in the ordinary way. Established 1825.

THE successful results of the last half century have proved beyond question that ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL possesses peculiarly nourishing powers in the growth, restoration, and improvement of the human hair, and when every other specific has failed. This celebrated Oil is now universally acknowledged to be superior to all other preparations for the hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, produces a thick and luxuriant growth, cleanses it from scurf and dandruff, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. Its operation in cases of baldness is peculiarly active; and in the growth of whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios, it is unfailing in its stimulative operations. For children it is especially recommended, as forming the basis of a beautiful head of hair. In dressing the hair nothing can equal its effect, rendering the hair so admirably soft that it will lie in any direction, and imparting a transcendent lustre.—Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

NEW LABEL.—To prevent the substitution of spurious imitations for the genuine article by unprincipled shopkeepers, a new label from steel, by Messrs. Perkins, Bacon, and Co., is now used, upon which are engraved in white letters, the words "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," and the signature of the Proprietors in red ink, "A. ROWLAND & SONS." The whole, with the exception of the profile of her Majesty "the Queen," being covered with a lacework pattern in transparent colourless ink.

Sold at 20, Hatton Garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS matchless remedies for Inveterate Ulcers.—Mrs. Anne Edwards, of Gloucester, was a great sufferer for nearly twelve years with several obstinate ulcers in the legs, accompanied with a continual and preternatural discharge, corrupting the entire system, resisting every mode of treatment devised by her medical attendant and others of the faculty. Having heard of the numerous cures effected by Holloway's Pills and Ointment, she was induced to give them a trial, and to the astonishment of herself and friends was quickly and soundly cured.

Sold by all Medicine Vendors, and at PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY'S Establishments, 244, Strand, London, and 80, Maiden Lane, New York; by A. Stampa, Constantinople; A. Guidicy, Smyrna; E. Muir, Malta; and by all European and Native Vendors of Medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

WATCH, CLOCK, and CHRONOMETER MANUFACTORY, 33 AND 34, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON. ESTABLISHED 1749.

J. W. BENSON, MANUFACTURER OF GOLD and SILVER WATCHES of every description, construction, and pattern, invites attention to his magnificent and unprecedented display of Watches, which is admitted to be the largest and best selected Stock in London. It consists of Chronometer, Duplex, Patent Detached Lever, Horizontal, and Vertical Movements, Jewelled, &c., with all the latest improvements, mounted in superbly-finished engine-turned and engraved Gold and Silver Cases. The designs engraved upon many of the cases are by eminent artists, and can only be obtained at this manufactory. If the important requisites, superiority of finish, combined with accuracy of performance, elegance, durability, and reasonableness of price, are wished for, the intending purchaser should visit this Manufactory, or send for the ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, published by J. W. BENSON (and sent post-free on application), which contains sketches, prices, and directions as to what Watch to buy, where to buy it, and how to use it. Several hundred letters have been received from persons who have bought Watches at this Manufactory, bearing testimony to the correct performance of the same. The following extracts from the opinions of the Press will, it is hoped, be a sufficient guarantee to the public that they may secure at this House a good Watch at a reasonable price:—

NEW GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

OF

AND OF THE

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq., Author of the "History of the British Empire in India."

The work has been compiled by the authority of the Court of Directors, and though comprised within a single volume, it will be found to contain the great mass of information comprehended in the four volumes of the "Gazetteer of India," published by the same author in 1854. This result has been obtained by retrenching some few redundancies, and by adopting an enlarged page and distributing the matter into two separate columns. By these means space has been also acquired for the insertion of much new matter, rendered necessary by the political and territorial changes which have more recently taken place within our Eastern Possessions.

On the character of the work a few remarks will be sufficient. Its chief objects are,—

- 1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and
- 2ndly. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these will be added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which could not otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The volume, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has yet been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India. Its merits have been frequently discussed in the General Courts of the East-India Company, where successive Chairmen have borne ample testimony to the utility of the publication, and where it has been characterized by the best-informed among the Proprietors as "a complete history of India, untainted in any degree by political bias."

On Monday, March 9, will be published, in two vols. 8vo.,

derable force at Hongkong. This will consist of two brigades of infantry, composed of the 5th Fusiliers, now on their passage from the Mauritius; the 59th regiment, now at Hongkong; the 23rd Fusiliers; the 82nd, 90th, and 93rd regiments, which will proceed from this country as soon as the shipping arrangements are completed. This force will be further reinforced by four companies of artillery from Woolwich, 1,000 marines, and 190 men of the Royal Engineers; while, in the shape of auxiliary corps, it will be accompanied by one battalion of the military train and 200 men of the medical-staff corps. Major-General Pennefather not being sufficiently recovered from the illness he had contracted in the Crimea, the command will devolve upon Major-General Ashburnham, c.b., who held a command in the Suttlej campaign: he goes out with the rank of lieutenant-general. The first brigade will be commanded by Major-General Sir Robert Garrett, k.c.b., now commanding a brigade at Gibraltar; and the second brigade by Major-General Straubenzee, c.b., who holds a similar position in Dublin garrison. Colonel Pakenham, c.b., who was adjutant-general of the Crimean army, will be the adjutant-general to the division, and Colonel Wetherall, c.b., late quartermaster-general of the Turkish Contingent, goes out in the same capacity to China. Provision has also been made for a supply of gun-boats and small vessels, in addition to the larger ships conveying the troops. This demonstration of force will not be directed against either of the four friendly ports of China, but solely against the Cantonese. It is to be observed, however, that hostilities are not to be resorted to, except in the last extreme; and the policy of the British Government in the first instance will be exerted in an endeavour to bring the state of affairs at Canton to a satisfactory conclusion by pacific measures. For this purpose it has been determined to send to Peking, from this country, a plenipotentiary of high character and position, with the view of negotiating a renewal of the treaties of 1842 and 1843, which, on the part of the Chinese, have never been duly observed; and we are gratified to find that the mission has been offered to the Earl of Elgin, and that it has been accepted by that able and distinguished diplomatist.

From Bushire the intelligence is to the 23rd January. At that date General Outram had not arrived from Bombay, nor had any further military operations taken place; but the general health of the army was stated to be good. Our readers are, however, aware that a treaty of peace with Persia was signed at Paris on the 4th inst. The treaty has been forwarded to Teheran for the ratification of the Shah. Its main provisions are the following:—

- I. The Persian troops and authorities to withdraw from Herat and Afghanistan within three months of the conclusion of the treaty, and the Persian territory to be simultaneously evacuated by the British troops.
- II. Persia renounces all claim of sovereignty over Herat and Afghanistan; she engages to abstain from all interference in their internal affairs, and to recognize the independence of both.
- III. In the event of any difficulties arising between Persia and Herat or Afghanistan, the Persian Government is to have recourse to the good offices of England before resorting to acts of war; and England on her part engages to use her best efforts to effect a settlement of any such differences in a manner honourable and satisfactory to Persia. The Shah further stipulates, that if it shall be necessary to repel aggression from Afghanistan, he will not make use of the hostilities in which he may engage for the purpose, for any other object, and that as soon as he attains his object, and immediate satisfaction has been given, he will withdraw within his own frontier.

IV. Great Britain, with respect to commercial relations and all arrangements connected with consular appointments, to be treated by the Persian empire on the footing of the most favoured nations; and Mr. Murray, on his return to Teheran, to be received with due ceremony.

V. British protection to the subjects of Persia to be henceforth restricted to such individuals as may be in the immediate service of the embassy or consulate.

VI. A prolongation, for ten years, of the period during which the provisions of the treaty between Persia and Great Britain, for the suppression of the slave-trade in the Persian Gulf, are to remain in force.

From the North-west we learn that the conferences at Jumrood, between Dost Mahomed Khan, the ruler of Caubul, and Sir John Lawrence, broke up on the 28th January; on which day the Dost, taking leave of the British Plenipotentiary, commenced his return towards his own dominions. The results of the conferences had not transpired, but various rumours were afloat. According to the Bombay Times,—

The belief is very confidently entertained, that the great result is the consent of the Dost to the establishment of a British residency at Candahar, and it is distinctly affirmed that it will consist of Major Lumsden, commander of the Punjab Guide Corps, Lieut. P. S. Lumsden, his brother, and Dr. Cox. We are to have again an accredited vakeel at Cabul in the person of the Nawab Foujdar Khan Alizaie, while Golam Surmar Khan Khagwarree is to accompany the Resident to Candahar. What reception the embassy may meet with in Candahar is at present doubtful. It is well enough known that the influence of the Dost is by no means all-powerful there. A soldier, however, is worthless without daring, and Major Lumsden, who has already distinguished himself for this quality, is a wisely-selected man. Too implicit confidence must not of course be placed in the correctness of our information, as we above stated it rests upon rumour only.

The departure of Dost Mahomed was preceded by a melancholy occurrence. On the evening of the 27th January four British officers were riding towards the Dost's quarters at Jumrood, and, when within a short distance of his camp, were met by a small body of men apparently in charge of cattle. These, however, proved to be Afreedies, who, upon being passed by the British officers, turned round and discharged a volley, and immediately afterwards rushed into the Khyber Pass. Lieutenant Hand, 51st N.I., we lament to state, was mortally wounded, and, after riding a short distance towards the Dost's quarters, fell from weakness, and lived only about an hour after being carried into camp. A ball had passed through his body, going in at the back and coming out at his chest. The three other officers, Captain Thompson, Lieutenant Campbell, and Dr. Annesly, had been placed under arrest for breach of orders in proceeding to Jumrood without permission.

At Calcutta the principal subject of interest is the publication of the penal code for India, which has been read a second time in the Legislative Council, and is to be considered in committee on the 21st April. Some of the provisions of the code are objected to by the Indigo Planters' Association, who have petitioned Parliament on the subject. The Delhi Gazette says,—

There are reports of Lord Canning being seriously inclined to abandon the helm of affairs, partly on ground of ill-health, and partly on grounds of personal dissatisfaction with affairs, which must be better known to the English public than they are to that of India.

To this the Madras Athenæum adds :—

“However much his lordship's inclinations may prompt him to take such a step, it is scarcely likely that he will do so, as the world looks with far less favour on a man who voluntarily shrinks from difficulties than upon him who manfully struggles on, even if the end be failure.”

DaCosta, 48th regt. N.I.; Lieut. Stewart, 61th regt. N.I.; Lieut. Thorp, 69th regt. N.I. We have not obtained the names of the officers doing duty with the detachments of H.M.'s 70th and 87th regiments, nor of the 55th and 52nd regiments, N.I. Those with the numbers above given make a total of twenty-six corps represented, aggregating 1300 men, who will carry with them, on their return to their regiments, the germs of a thorough knowledge in the art of killing their enemies with precision.—Hurkaru.

* Lieut. Stafford, 4th N.I., was appointed adjutant, but declined.

BENGAL.

THE AMALGAMATION OF THE COURTS.

Mr. Peacock, in introducing the Code of Procedure, announced that the clause amalgamating the Supreme and Sudder Courts had been withdrawn. It is to be referred once more to the home authorities, or, in other words, indefinitely postponed. The announcement has been received by the public with a degree of pleasure, which seems to us as short-sighted, as it will certainly be short-lived. The amalgamation of the courts, as suggested by the commissioners, involved three very important changes.

1. The first abolished the separate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court over Calcutta. Three of the judges, it is true, were still to form that court, and they were still to be selected by the chief justice. They need not, however, be of necessity English lawyers. They need not always consist of the same persons. They might possibly even include a native, and the change, even if unobjectionable, is certainly not required. The Supreme Court of Calcutta, moreover, is not like that of Madras. It has not killed the goose. It is overwhelmed with business, for which the whole time of all the judges is scarcely sufficient. To attach these judges to the Sudder, or High Court, would be either to increase delay, or to compel the chief justice to entrust the business of Calcutta to men not regularly trained. The recommendation on this ground, if on no other, was opposed by her Majesty's judges. The objection is reasonable, but only in degree. The High Court may be created without the slightest injury to its rival. It is a mere question of expense. If three judges cannot complete the work, six can, and if India cannot afford to pay its Appellate Court, the sooner a succession duty is established, the better. A court of twelve superior judges may seem monstrous enough, but it is after all nothing beyond precedent. England, with half the population, a people infinitely less litigious, and a procedure in one language only, has in practice more.

2. The second innovation is altogether mischievous. It permits an appeal from the Supreme Court. Hitherto, the residents of Calcutta have been exempted from this nuisance. Nobody desires an appeal, nobody complains of the absence of an appeal, nobody wants to be worried with any privilege of the kind. The appeal itself must be either from the Court itself to itself over again, or to the court plus a number of assessors less competent than itself. Sir L. Peel had a habit of allowing appeals in the shape of a new trial, and it was the most objectionable feature in his career as judge. There is no one argument in its favour, except the fact that the oppressive nature of an appeal system would at last be patent to the ruling class. That system, always the expedient of timid jurists, has in India almost neutralized the benefit of our role. It has made every claim, however simple or however clear, a Chancery suit, in which justice is nothing to length of purse and dogged pertinacity. That we do not abolish it is a result partly of accidental circumstances, but chiefly of that absence of courage which distinguishes our legislation. To introduce it among a community as yet free from the pest, is to sacrifice justice to a pedantic uniformity of procedure.

3. The third change is a reform so beneficial, so wide-spread, and so lasting in its effects, as to overbalance the evils we have described. The amalgamation of the courts involves the extinction of the Sudder. With three trained judges on the bench, and its name forgotten, the character of that court would be completely changed. No amount of precaution about majorities, no clause intended to contract the field of selection, could even postpone the result. The court may remain unaltered; but if men like Sir James Colvile, Mr. Ritchie, or Mr. Wylie have right of speech in its judgments, the judgments must be changed. It is at this point that the Europeans are making a mistake. They forget that, sooner or later, equality before the law must be established. By opposing the amalgamation, they secure to themselves also equality before the Sudder. Their right of appeal will be to a court which cannot define perjury, which transports men for resisting dacoits, which has no single principle for the reception of evidence. They are opposing not the abolition of the Supreme Court, but the absorption of the Sudder. It may be argued that the commissioners still left the old Court a majority. They did nothing of the kind, but if they had, a numerical majority is not worth much. The strongest will win. There is always, even in the Sudder, a chief justice, though no one appoints him, and the office is not known to the law. We put it to any candid observer of the existing system. Does he believe that three gentlemen such as we have named could sit on the Sudder Bench without guiding the Sudder decisions? Oil will rise to the top of water, though the latter be fifty times greater in bulk. The natives are equally the victims of a fallacy. If the British Indian Association approve the Supreme Court, why object to an infusion of the materials out of which that Court is constructed, into the less useful edifice? We must repeat, there is no certain good to be sacrificed for an uncertain gain. The amalgamation of the High Court need not interfere with the Supreme Court. It can exist without draining away the life-blood of a sister institution.

Let us not be mistaken. We are not defending this scheme as the very best that could have been adopted. We incline ourselves to a change differing somewhat widely from the one proposed. But it appears to us that the choice offered is this, or none. We must either put up with a somewhat cumbersome but efficient novelty, or retain the existing system. As for any reform from within, it is hopeless. The Sudder Court has the power which Charles Dickens ascribes to one of his heroes. Its shadow is sufficient to make men evil. Its traditions swamp the strongest brain as easily as the weakest. We shall have no abler man than Mr. Colvin, and Mr. Colvin wrote the famous minute which abolished the sixth commandment in Bengal. We shall have no better regulation lawyer than Mr. Trevor, and Mr. Trevor's decision in the recent perjury case was one degree more laughable than Mr. Raikes'. Still less is reform probable from without. Except through amalgamation we shall have no infusion of new blood. Generation after generation of civilians will issue volume after volume of constructions. The codes will be overlaid, as the regulations have been smothered. New loopholes will be constructed for the criminal, new fetters for the judicial officer to wear, till either the fabric is brushed away by some strong legislator, or, more probably, extinguished by an insurrection not confined to the Sonthals. As in the case of the Ecclesiastical Courts, nothing short of abolition can meet the evil. The hydra must be cauterized as well as cut. So long as the name of the Sudder Court is retained, so long will natives continue to believe that crime is a recommendation for acquittal, and perjury an act almost meritorious. This is the end to be gained by the amalgamation of the courts. It might be achieved even were all the excrescences of the plain remorselessly stripped away.

We perceive that some opinions have been published on the propriety of admitting uncovenanted servants, vakeels, and natives to the bench of the High Court. The Queen's judges, as might have been expected, are against any such concession. So are the majority of the sudder. So also is Mr. Grant, whose opinion, as usual, is without compromise. We have no objection to any amount of restriction, provided we obtain two sets of opinions in the court. The time may arrive for admitting natives, but it is most assuredly not yet come. It is not only the few who might be judges, but the mass who must be suitors who are to be consulted. That natives may be found above corruption we are ready to admit. That they can be found above suspicion we most earnestly deny. There are other forms of influence besides the vulgar one of money. There are a hundred strings pulling at every native from family and clan, caste and neighbourhood, which it is nearly impossible for him steadily to resist. Should ever the time come when such a word as principle has place in the language, when the idea of personal honour has made itself felt generally through the land, natives may be qualified for the Appellate Court. Till then they must rest content with the justice, which they admit the Europeans strive to secure. With the uncovenanted Europeans, the case is different. They have the opportunity already open to them. There is nothing to prevent the best of their number studying at home, entering the profession, and returning with every qualification necessary for either court. It may be an injustice to compel them to incur such an expense. It would be a far greater injustice to impose judges on forty millions of people without the certainty that they had at least imbibed the principles of English education.

The argument for restriction is, however, pushed too far. The selection should be confined, say some, to the Zillah judges, for the man who is not fit for a local Court is not fit for the Sudder. In other words, none but civilians are to occupy the bench of the Appellate Court. The argument is somewhat dangerous in form. The objectors may be taken at their word, and the primary Courts also thrown open. The objection, in truth, though plausible, is based upon a fallacy. There is a material difference between the duty of a Zillah judge and that of a judge of the High Court. The former is to decide on facts, and local knowledge, familiarity with natives, an intimate acquaintance with the vernacular are therefore essentials. But the judge of the High Court deals with principles; he is to a large, and perhaps a dangerous extent, a legislator; he ought not to enter upon facts at all, or if he does, their importance must still be subordinate to a thorough comprehension of the law. It is for this reason that we would admit on the bench of the Appellate Court, classes not admitted among the judiciary of the interior. We would not compose the Court of them exclusively. The very object of a heterogeneous selection is to add to the judicial faculty secured by English training, the local experience possessed by the civilian. It is no use to talk about the law being unknown to barristers; they can acquire the Codes as easily as anybody else; and as for civil law, Mr. Peacock probably knows as much of it as any civilian in the country. Western thought and Indian experience, it is from the union of these two that we may at last obtain an Appellate Court equal to its task. We can tell those who resist this scheme as a dangerous innovation what will be the consequence of obstinacy. It must result in the separation of the judicial from the administrative service, the utter annihilation of the existing scheme.—Friend of India.

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 26 arrived at Calcutta Feb. 1 (per Hindustan).

LIGHT-SHIP AT THE ENTRANCE OF THE MUTLAH.—A light-vessel has been temporarily stationed at the entrance of the river Mutlah in latitude 21° 6' N., longitude 88° 48' E. (nearly) in 10 fathoms low water spring tides, about 7 miles south-east of the outer or Bulcherry Reef Buoy. This new floating light will hoist a red flag at the mainmast-head by day, and exhibit a clear white light from sunset to sunrise; and in addition to this she will, if she continues in her position, fire a rocket at 8 P.M., at midnight, and at 4 A.M. from March 15 until Oct. 16.

THE DALHOUSIE TESTIMONIAL.—The total amount of subscriptions to the Dalhousie Testimonial Fund on the 31st December, was Rs. 83,383 2-3. Mr. J. Steel, of Edinburgh, is to execute a statue of Lord Dalhousie for 1,800*l.*, which for 200*l.* more will be erected in Calcutta. The balance of the fund, or about 6,000*l.* is to be invested to found scholarships in the Government College of Civil Engineers.

THE DEATH OF MR. G. R. WILBY is announced as having occurred on the 30th January, at Serampore, of brain fever, we believe. The deceased was a native of Canada, and took the degree of B. A. at the University of Nova Scotia. He came to India about ten years ago, and shortly afterwards joined the Bengal Hurkaru as sub-editor. More recently he became editor of the Mofussilite, of the Delhi Gazette, and then of the Lahore Chronicle, and lastly, was connected with the Friend of India. He was a young man of great ability as a journalist, being a sound thinker and ready writer.

GENERAL ANSON, the Commander-in-Chief, was to start on the evening of Jan. 24, by carriage dakh on his return to Agra.

THE MONEY MARKET.—The state of the money market is calculated to cripple the operations of Government materially, unless bold measures are immediately taken to remedy the existing state of things, with the view of replenishing the treasury. Government having failed to obtain a loan of three millions sterling at 4½ per cent., raised its terms to 5 per cent. in the hope that capitalists would be induced to lend at that rate, but this hope has also been delusive, as only the merest trifle has been subscribed hitherto, and there is not the slightest prospect that the loan will be filled under any circumstances at present, and what adds to the difficulty which Government experience is the fact that the Bank of Bengal—partially a Government institution—has raised its discount on good paper having less than three months to run, to the unprecedented rate of fourteen per cent., while even on Government acceptances it charges twelve per cent. Under these circumstances there is no chance that Government will be able to raise a loan except at a rate of interest, not less perhaps than 7 per cent., unless it is inclined to adopt a scheme which is pretty generally advocated by the holders of the depreciated 3½ and 4 per cent. paper. These people propose that Government should notify its willingness to borrow six millions sterling instead of three, and agree to accept one half the amount in its own Three-and-a-Half and Four per Cent. Stock, valued at par, and the remainder in cash, paying interest on the whole at five per cent. The adoption of this course, it is contended, will cause money to flow into the Government Treasury to the required extent. A great portion of the embarrassment which is experienced at present, decidedly originated from Lord Dalhousie's ill-judged tampering with the old Five per Cents. which he converted into Four, and then immediately afterwards raising what is called the Public Works Loan. His lordship's reputation as a financier was ruined by these proceedings, and his successors are now reaping the consequences in the mistrust with which the public view the attempt to raise money, and their hesitation to lend it on terms which, some time ago would have been considered tempting. With regard to the bank rates, we may mention, that on the 7th of January, discount on private bills, and interest on loans on deposit of tangible security, was six per cent.; on the 8th idem it was raised to seven; on the 22nd, to ten; on the 29th, to twelve; and on the 5th February, to fourteen, at which it now stands: it will thus be perceived, that in less than one month, rates have risen from six to fourteen per cent.—Hurkaru.

THE SEPOYS AT BARRACKPORE are in a state of considerable excitement in consequence of imagining that the new muster cartridges have hoglard in them. Several fires, supposed to be the work of incendiaries, have occurred at Barrackpore during the last few days.

DR. RENNY, Surgeon-General, memorialized the Governor-General to be permitted to remain in the medical board beyond the usual period of five years, on the ground that he was promoted to that body before the time when he would have become intitled to it by seniority. The answer was "No."

THE CALCUTTA DOCKING COMPANY.—At a General Meeting of the Calcutta Docking Company a dividend was declared at the rate of 12 per cent.

CAPTAIN STONE, an officer of the Bengal army, was found by a native policeman on the morning of the 23rd Jan., in Imaumbaugh-lane, incapable of taking care of himself, dressed in his night garment, with various wounds about his head and face, and admitting that he did not know where he was. The policeman took him to the thannah, where, though he did not then seem drunk, he admitted having been so, and said that the wounds about his head and face had been caused by his falling about his room, and against his boxes, in Muddock's Hotel, on the previous night. Ultimately, he was taken to the hospital, where, on the 27th, he died. A coroner's jury found the usual verdict of accidental death at the inquest.

THE SENATE OF THE UNIVERSITY having delegated the task of selecting examiners to conduct the Matriculation Examination of the ensuing April, to Mr. Gordon Young and the Rev. Dr. Duff, they have nominated amongst others the following gentlemen who have been selected for the task:—"George Smith, Esq., Doveton College—English, Latin, and Greek. Professor Cowell, Presidency College—History and Geography. Wm. Masters, Esq., Metropolitan College—Mathematics. Rev. K. M. Banerjee, Bishop's College—Sanskrit and Bengalee. Capt. St. George, Madrasa—Oordoo and Persian." It will be observed that only five examiners have at present been fixed upon as representing in some one branch of education the institution to which they belong, and the class of institutions of which such individual institution may be considered the leading type.

A NEW MEDICAL ARMY LIST.—The Editors of the Indian Annals of Medical Science announce their intention to bring out a Medical Army List of the three Presidencies, containing a comprehensive view of the professional qualifications, services, and literary labours of every surgeon and assistant-surgeon in the country, on the plan of the London Medical Directory.

MR. G. O. WRAY, an attorney of the Supreme Court, took his seat on the bench of the Small Cause Court on Saturday, Jan. 24, in place of Mr. John King, the junior judge, who proceeds to England for twelve months.

WIDOW MARRIAGE.—The Hurkaru mentions the marriage at Saharanpore, in the N. W. Provinces, of a widow of the Brahmin caste to a young man of the same creed, under the provision of the new Act.

THE COMMISSIONER OF POLICE prohibited a raffle for a horse which was to have taken place at the Town Hall on January 21. The same functionary has also put a stop to a lottery of fancy articles, which was advertised to come off in the same building during a Fancy Ball.

ARMY OF OBSERVATION.—The Delhi Gazette has heard a rumour to the effect that an army of 15,000 men is immediately to be formed on the N.W. frontier. This, he presumes, will be an "Army of Observation." Everything is reported ready for the order to be issued, and next mail will probably bring final instructions.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

BAND FUNDS.

Fort William, Jan. 21, 1857.—In order to relieve band funds of regiments from the heavy expense caused by paymasters forwarding remittances on thick paper bearing postage, the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in council, is pleased to direct that, whenever the sums deducted cannot be included in the pay statements and drafts of corps, paymasters shall make use of thin paper for both statements and envelope, and shall pre-pay the letters by stamp, deducting only the value of the minimum stamp from the draft remitted.

Paymasters will be held personally responsible for any excess of postage arising from neglect of these precautions.

LEAVE TO EUROPE.

By the Lieut. Governor N. W. Provinces, Jan. 23, 1857. Covenanted and uncovenanted servants, under the government, N. W. P. applying for leave to Europe, under circumstances which, according to the rules in force, entitle them to receive a portion of their pay during such absence, are directed to state in their applications whether they desire to draw the authorised allowances during their leave, in England, or in this country, and if the latter, to what parties the amount is to be paid, these parties giving a guarantee for the refund of any excess payments in conformity with the resolution of the Governor-general in council in the financial department, No. 1, of January 2nd, 1857.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Fort William, Jan. 27, 1857.—No. 147 of 1857.—The Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in council, is pleased to direct that the following rules be published for general information:—

1. All applications from military officers employed in the Department of Public Works for leave, on whatever grounds, to places in India, including preparatory leave for furlough, are to be submitted, through the head of the local civil administration, to be dealt with in the Public Works Department only.

2. All applications from military officers employed in the Department of Public Works for leave to proceed to sea, or on furlough, are, in the first place, to be laid before the head of the local civil administration. On receiving his sanction, the original application will be transmitted by him to the adjutant-general of the army, or to his deputy, at the presidency, and, on the approval of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, will be forwarded, through the secretary, to government in the military department, for submission to the Governor-General in council, and will be finally disposed of in the military department.

3. In urgent cases, or on medical certificate, the deputy adjutant general of the army at the presidency will be authorized, as heretofore, to submit applications of the above nature to the supreme government, without first obtaining the sanction of the commander-in-chief when his excellency may be absent from Calcutta.

4. In all cases in which applications for leave of the nature above specified have not been preceded by the grant of preparatory leave to visit the presidency, it is further directed that the head of the local administration, on transmitting such applications for leave, with his approval, in the manner above prescribed, shall, at the same time, cause an intimation to that effect to be forwarded to the secretary to government in the public works department.

SPECIFICATIONS OF INVENTIONS.

Fort William, Jan. 30, 1857.—The under-mentioned specifications of inventions have been filed under the provisions of Act No. VI. of 1856, in the office of the secretary to the Government of India, in the Home Department, and have been sent to the office of one of the secretaries to each of the Governments of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, and the North-western Provinces.

A copy of each specification is open, at all reasonable hours, at the office of the secretary to the Government of India, in the Home Department, to public inspection, upon payment of a fee of one rupee; and a certified copy of any specification will be given to any person requiring the same, on payment of the expense of copying.

No. 6.—Teignmouth Sandys, of Gya, for the en pisé compression of mortars and cements.

No. 18.—William Barton Wright, of Madras, for giving motion to punkahs, oscillating or rotatory, by means of the application of a water-wheel.

No. 23.—John Stalkartt, of Goosery, in the 24-pergunnahs, for increasing the produce of indigo in process of manufacture.

The Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council is pleased to re-attach to the Bengal division of the Presidency of Fort William, Mr. E. F. Radcliffe, of the Civil Service, who reported his return from furlough on the 1st inst.

FURLONGS AVAILABLE

Fort William, Jan. 30, 1857.—The furlough available by the return to India of Mr. E. F. Radcliffe is assigned to Mr. C. W. Mackillop, of the civil service, for two years, from the date of his embarkation for Europe.

The furlough available by the return to India of Mr. J. Guthrie is assigned to Mr. A. Abercrombie, of the civil service, for three years, from the date of his embarkation for Europe.

CECIL BEADON, Sec. to the Govt. of India.

TELEGRAPH STATIONS.

Fort William, Jan. 30, 1857.—It is hereby notified for general information, that telegraphic stations have been opened at Kurnool, Mercara, Cananore, and Calicut, in the Madras presidency, for the transmission of messages, and that messages for transmission to the above-mentioned places will be received at all telegraph stations throughout India.

PORT OF MUTLAH.

By the Lieut. Governor of Bengal.—February 6th, 1857.—It is hereby notified that—

1st. Buoyage and light dues will be charged on all vessels frequenting the port of Mutlah at the rate of half what is now levied on vessels of the same size at the port of Calcutta.

2nd. The pilotage charges for vessels employing Government pilots on the Mutlah will also be half the rates charged on the Hooghly.

3rd. It is optional with the agents and commanders of vessels to employ the Government pilots, or to make any other arrangements for piloting their vessels to sea.

4th. Port clearance will not be given by the customs' authorities to any vessel, till a certificate has been produced from the superintendent of the port that the Government port and pilotage dues have been paid.

The rates for port dues and pilotage charges above specified are experimental only, and subject to future modification, but six months' previous notice will be given before any alteration is made in them.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Fort William, Feb. 6, 1857.—Notification.—Read again the papers noted in the margin.*

Read para. 85. of a despatch from the Hon. the Court of Directors, addressed to the Government of India, in the financial department, No. 97, of 1856, dated the 19th November.

Para. 85. We cannot acquiesce in your having ruled that it may be "discretionary with the several local governments, when good cause is shown for the indulgence, to sanction leave of absence, under Section XIV. of the New Rules" (the section which authorizes the grant of six months' leave on special private affairs),† "to such parties as may not have occasion to apply for the whole at once, in instalments not to exceed in the aggregate six months in six years." This interpretation would have the practical effect of making the grant of this description of leave almost as much a matter of course as the grant of the privilege leave of one month in each year; whereas, it is our intention, and Clause 3 of the rule, Section XIV. expressly states that it should be the duty of the Government to consider and determine in such cases, whether the grounds on the application are sufficiently urgent to justify the concession of the leave. The rule will, therefore, remain in its original form.

Order.—Ordered, That a copy of the above paragraph be published in the Calcutta official Gazette for general information, and that a transcript thereof be sent to the Governments noted in the margin; and also to the Civil Auditor, Fort William, in supercession of the orders, dated 7th September, 1855.

C. HUGH LUSHINGTON.

Sec. to the Govt. of India.

MADRAS.

HUMAN SACRIFICES.—THE MERIAH AGENCY.

On the 17th September, 1856, the court of Directors thus wrote on this subject to the Madras Government:—

The reports and diaries from time to time furnished by the agency officers continue to indicate steady progress towards the final eradication of the barbarous practice of human sacrifice. Considering the great difficulties to be encountered, we are disposed to consider this progress satisfactory and as rapid as under the circumstances could have been anticipated. The Meriah officers appear to have applied themselves to their duties with unremitting zeal and attention. Their great experience and personal knowledge, which are of far greater weight than any theoretical rules or doctrines, led them to adopt a line of caution and gradual inculcation of their views. Hasty measures and abrupt innovations would have been attended with considerable danger, and would rather have postponed than accelerated the attainment of the end in view, by arousing the fears and jealousies of ignorant and fanatical tribes, and combining in hostility against the exertions of the agency officers. Instead of this it is satisfactory to find that generally speaking the chiefs and leading men continue to give their adhesion and co-operation to the principles and measures of the agency. The Khond chiefs have taken a leading part in pledging themselves to abstain from Meriah sacrifices, and the example thus set will, it may be confidently hoped, act beneficially on those tribes whose opposition is scarcely overcome, or whose support and co-operation are but reluctantly yielded. Measures of repression and punishment, however necessary they may be, should always be held subordinate to those of prevention. One of the most powerful among the latter class of measures is education to which, together with the improvement of communications, and increase of intercourse with civilization, we can look with hope for the rescue of the hill tribes from practices which have their origin in ignorance and barbarism and for the spread of enlightened and humane principles. The attention of the Meriah officers has been directed to this important point, and their exertions have met with some success. We regret, however, to observe that the progress of education has received a serious check in Goomsoor, which was partly attributed to the withdrawal of magisterial jurisdiction from the Khond agent, and its transfer to the ordinary officers of police, whereby the influence and authority of the agency officers were weakened. On the urgent representations of Colonel Campbell, the agent, and Captain McVicar, officiating agent, supported by the recommendation of the Madras Government, you invested the officers of the agency with joint magisterial powers within the sphere of the agency; such powers being confined to cases of Meriah sacrifice, and female infanticide exclusively, and to be exercised on the same principles as regulate the jurisdiction of officers in the Thuggee department. Under this arrangement, too, the local officers will, we imagine, have no ground of complaint, and we trust that the Khond schools which had unfortunately been almost entirely closed, will, after their reopening, have been carefully encouraged, and no means neglected for regaining the support of the people which had been formerly extended to them. Tours of personal inspection on the part of the agency officers are calculated to lead to very beneficial results, and should be steadfastly adhered to. Not only do they afford the agency officers adequate means of forming an opinion on the condition of the country, but by bringing the people into direct communication with the British authorities, and thereby circulating and diffusing a correct knowledge of the benevolent intentions of the Government, they will do much to remove suspicion and hostility. We have perused the report of Captain McVicar, dated the 21st May, 1855, forwarding a summary of the operations of the agency for the season of 1854-55, which is apparently the result of most careful investigation. The tenor of this report is satisfactory, with the exception of the part relating to Bustar and Jaypoor. The former place is described as the head-quarters of the Femnah Poojah, and Capt. McVicar affirms that "human sacrifices have never ceased to be offered, despite all orders of the Nagpore Durbar, and the several residents at the late Rajah's court." The real head of the Zemindary is Laull Deloyongona Singh, the uncle of the Rajah, who appears to be a man of turbulent character and fanatical in the highest degree, and wedded to the superstitious rite of human sacrifice. The promises which he has on various occasions made to successive residents have never been adhered to, and Captain McVicar does not anticipate that much good can be effected in Bustar until he is removed from authority, a measure which does not appear likely to be found opposed to the feelings of the people. We shall be glad to be informed of the measures taken in this matter.

We observe with satisfaction that the total number of Meriahs received in the Hill Tracts of Orissa, during the season 1854-55, was 46, of whom 21 were males and 25 females.

Lieutenant Macdonald's tour through the Hill Tracts of Goomsoor affords another exemplification of the beneficial effects of the personal visits of European officers on the people, and we entirely approve the orders of the Madras Government that Lieut. Macdonald, or some other officer of the agency, should make such tours annually. The progress of education in these tracts appears to be very satisfactory, and we approve the measures adopted for extending it. The measures for facilitating traffic by the construction of choultries and wells, at a cost of Rs. 1,650, have our entire approval. The schools recently established in these tracts will be placed under a native superintendent entertained for that purpose, by whom an annual report will be furnished. All measures relative to education in these districts should in future be reported in the education branch of the public department. Vigorous measures were very properly adopted for putting a stop to depredations in the Boad Country, and the energetic conduct of Lieut. Macdonald merited praise. The survey operations in the Tributary Mehals appear to be progressing very favourably under Captain Luxton; the impediments alluded to in our despatch, dated 18th June (No. 14), 1854, being no longer in existence. The road to Sumbulpore has been surveyed, and partially opened and it is expected to be available for traffic throughout its entire length during the hot weather of 1856. The country appears to possess considerable mineral resources, and to be well worth a thorough scientific investigation. We shall be glad to receive some of the mineral specimens forwarded by Capt. Luxton to Dr. Hunter at Madras, as stated in the 4th para of his letter, dated Sept. 23, 1854. In conclusion, we would express our high sense of the services of the Merah agency officers, who appear to have shown great discretion and assiduity in the discharge of the important duties entrusted to them. It was with the deepest regret we received the account of the death of Captain Frye, an officer so earnest in this cause, and, as you remark, whose labours have proved of such essential service to the cause of humanity.

The Madras Government on the 6th January issued the necessary orders relative to the above despatch.

SURGEON R. H. BUCHANAN, 5th N.I. is about to retire from the Company's service.

BREV. MAJOR G. FORSTER, 49th N.I. is going to retire from the service.

OUTRAGE ON EUROPEANS.—A Bangalore paper states that a party of thirty recruits and three officers belonging to H.M.'s 43rd, while on their way to Bangalore from Madras, were attacked by robbers, deprived of everything, with the exception of their beds and the clothes which they wore. One of the men, it is stated, had his "abdomen ripped up;" and as the party were without means of defence, they were all severely handled.

MADRAS EXHIBITION.—The director of arrangements, Dr. Hunter, has notified that the Madras Exhibition will open on the 16th February.

THE SECRETARY TO THE MARINE BOARD at Madras advertises for ships willing to convey 2,000 barrels, or about 100 tons, of gunpowder from that port to the Straits. It is supposed the powder is required for the purpose of being administered to the Chinese, with a due proportion of the pills used on these occasions.

DEATH OF ENSIGN PECK.—The Spectator regrets to announce the death, in Fort St. George, from cholera, of Ensign W. A. Peck, of the 40th N.I., doing duty with the 1st Madras fusiliers; his remains were interred in Saint Mary's burial-ground, with military honours.

MILITARY ON-DITS.—A Jaulnah correspondent of the Bombay Gazette states that the 2nd Madras cavalry has left that station for Sholapore, and that it has been relieved by the 6th.—The Bangalore Herald supplies the following items:—"We learn that a soldier of H.M.'s 74th Highlanders has been taken away by a tiger, on the high road between Ootacamund and Jackatalla. We trust that some of our Nimrods at the station will not rest until they have tracked this man-eater, and desroyed him.—We hear that the 6th regiment native infantry will leave this for the presidency immediately on the arrival of the 39th regiment native infantry from the French Rocks, which is to relieve that corps, and which may be expected here in a few days."—The 14th regt. N.I. from Bellary arrived at the presidency by the train Feb. 7th, and encamped on the Black Town esplanade.—We regret to record the death of Ensign W. A. Peck, of the 40th regt. N.I., doing duty 1st Madras fusiliers, which event occurred at his residence in the fort: his remains were interred in the evening in St. Mary's burial-ground with military honours.—A detachment of recruits of the Hon. Company's service has arrived from England on board the ship Devonshire. The infantry portion were marched into the fort to join the 1st Madras fusiliers, and the artillery to St. Thomas's Mount.—The H. C. steamer Coromandel had left for Maulmein with eighty-one boxes of treasure.—A detachment of the 12th lancers had embarked for Bombay.—We regret to record the death of Captain (Brev. Major) Hillyar Young Pope, of the 27th regt. N.I., at Vellore, on the 4th Feb., of cholera. This casualty promotes Lieut. C. A. Pierce to captain, and Ensign R. B. Mathew to lieutenant.

SCHOOL OF MUSKETRY.—One subaltern from each of the following regiments is to be detached immediately to Poona, for instruction at the School of Musketry:—2nd grdr. regt. N.I., 5th, 6th, 7th, 10th, 12th, 13th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 24th, 27th, and 28th regts. N.I.

THE DEATH OF H. H. THE IMAM OF MUSCAT is reported.

SIND IRREGULAR HORSE.—On Wednesday morning last the whole of the 1st regiment of Sind irregular horse marched into cantonments, en route to the seat of war. They were met on the road by their gallant leader, Brigadier-General Jacob, and several other officers, who accompanied them to the encamping-ground in the immediate neighbourhood of the Sindian office. Great care must have been exercised by Captain Briggs on the march, as neither men nor horses seemed at all fatigued from their long journey. The martial bearing of these brave auxiliaries drew together a host of European and native spectators, who looked with admiration on the cavalry of their own province, who plainly evinced their readiness to take the field against our Persian foe.—Scindian, Feb.

COURT-MARTIAL ON CAPT. DICKSON.—The following is the charge, as published by the Madras Spectator, upon which Capt. Dickson, of the 1st Madras Fusiliers, was arraigned before a general court-martial. It is of a sufficiently grave character, involving, if proved, serious consequences:—"For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Fort Saint George, Madras, on the night of the 15th or morning of the 16th December, 1856, been drunk at a ball given by the non-commissioned officers of the 1st Madras Fusiliers, and then and there conducted himself in a quarrelsome and indecorous manner, striking and attempting to strike some of the non-commissioned officers and soldiers present; namely, Sergeant Patrick McClary and Private William Loftus, of the said regiment, and Sergeant Francis Dwyer, of the commissariat department; and walking about the room with his shirt-sleeves tucked up, with a stick in his hand, thereby interrupting the harmony of the party, and showing a bad example to, and lowering himself in the eyes of, his military inferiors; and ultimately, from his helpless state, rendering it necessary for him to be led and supported to his quarters by the provost-sergeant and his assistants; the above being in breach of the Articles of War."

THE BRITISH CONSULATE AT BANGKOK.—The Singapore Free Press learns, by late accounts from Bangkok, that his Majesty the King of Siam has purchased a piece of ground near the Portuguese Consulate at his private expense, which he intends to present to the British Government as a site for the Consulate. His Majesty also intends to build a large house on a piece of ground at Bangplasoe, on the eastern shore of the Gulf of Siam, which will be set apart for the use of foreigners who may wish to go there for change of air. To this will be attached a suitable burial-ground.

THE ELECTRO-MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH has been introduced into Java, and a line of wires completed between Batavia and Buitenzorg, the first intelligence by it having been transmitted to the Governor-General on the 22nd October in the space of four minutes. The line is to be immediately extended to Samarang and Sourabaya, and afterwards in other points in different directions, such as Anjer, Cheribon, Pekalongan, Rembang, and Banyuwangie. The natives are very much astonished, and rather frightened at the invention, which they call bichara anoin (wind-speech).

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

THE following notification is republished for general information:—

Government Notification.—Diplomatic Department.—Her Majesty's plenipotentiary and chief superintendent of British trade in China has received from her Majesty's consul in Shanghai the following notice to mariners, which his Excellency has directed to be published for general information.—By order,

W. WOODGATE.

Superintendency of Trade, Hong-Kong,
12th December, 1856.

Office of Maritime Customs, Shanghai, 20th November, 1856.

With reference to a notification from this office, dated 27th October, 1855, notice is hereby given, that a tower has been erected on the south shore of the Yangtze Keang, at Kew Toan. It is a plain structure of brick, painted red and white: its height is seventy feet.

It bears from the light vessel N. 63 deg. west, distance 16 miles. The trees upon Block House Island bear from it N. 15 deg. west, distance 8 miles.

The light vessel is moored in 4½ fathoms at low water, and bears N. by W. ½ W. from Gutzlaff Island, from which she is distant 23 miles, and 1 mile from the southern spit of the north bank. Ships leaving Gutzlaff bearing S. by E. distance 15 miles should steer a north-westerly course. On making the light vessel, bearing N.W. they should steer so as to pass her on the starboard hand, not bringing her to the southward of west. After passing her, they should not bring her to the southward of S.E. by E. ½ E. making due allowance for the setting of the tides over the north bank. When about sinking her hull, the tower will be seen, and the course prescribed by Capt. Collingson's directions can then be followed.

When a vessel is observed running into danger, a gun is fired from the light vessel to attract attention, and the signal of the course that should be steered is then exhibited. A ship's signal lamp is shown on board from sunset to sunrise.

A meteorological register and tide-table are kept by the master of the light vessel, copies of which can be had gratis on application at this office.

A PURCHASING-OUT SCALE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ENGLISHMAN AND MILITARY CHRONICLE.

SIR,—Having received applications for a purchasing-out scale adapted to the present state of the Bengal infantry, I submit the following, in the hope that it may be acceptable to those concerned.

It will be observed that the shares are all divisible by eighty, which is the number of majors now on the list, and subject to this convenient condition, their amount accords with usage, our chief guide in this matter.

The use of the table is minutely explained, and the method is the most facile that I can devise.—Yours truly,

J. C. H.

Total	Rs. 30,000

Column a contains the shares for purchasing out a major, the bonus being Rs. 30,000. If a different bonus be given, then say,

As Rs. 30,000

Is to the given bonus,

So is any share in column a

To the corresponding share of the given bonus.

When other officers are purchased out, proceed as follows:—

1. Multiply the number in column d, opposite to the senior purchaser, by the number of steps that the major has attained, and add the product to the corresponding sum in column c. Call this the tabular bonus.

2. Multiply the number in column b, opposite to any purchaser, by the number of steps that the major has attained, and add or subtract the product to or from the corresponding share in column a. Call this the tabular share.

[Note.—Subtract in the cases of the senior lieutenant and the senior ensign. Add in all other cases.]

3. Then,

As the tabular bonus (1)

Is to the actual bonus,

So is the tabular share (2)

To the actual share.

This rule in words is,

Multiply the actual bonus by the tabular share, and divide the product by the tabular bonus; the quotient will be the share as required.

For example.—Required the share of the third captain, when the senior captain is bought out for Rs. 25,000, the major having attained 20 steps.

Opposite the senior purchaser, and in column d, is 149; and this, multiplied by 20, gives 2,980, which added to 18,000, gives 20,980, the tabular bonus.

Opposite the third captain, and in column b, is 11; and this, multiplied by 20, gives 220, which, added to 2,080, gives 2,300, the tabular share.

Then 25,000 being multiplied by 2,300, and the product divided by 20,980, gives Rs. 2,741 (nearly), which is the required share.

As another example.—Required the share of the senior lieutenant in the same case.

Opposite the senior lieutenant in column b, is 29; this, multiplied by 20, gives 580, which, taken from 2,720, leaves 2,140.

Then 25,000, being multiplied by 2,140, and the product divided by 20,980, gives Rs. 2,550, which is the required share.—Englishman, Jan. 28.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, March 17, 1857.

THE VAKEEL TO THE EX-KING OF OUDE.

MAHOMED MUSEEH OODDEEN KHAN, whose strictures upon one of our former articles we fully discussed in our last issue, has favoured us with a rejoinder. The communication (to which it will be seen we have given publicity) contains nothing new, and the production would be altogether undeserving of notice did it not exhibit a striking specimen of the mode of thought and special pleading common to the vakeels of the native princes of India. An attempt, for instance, is made to throw discredit upon our quotation from Colonel Dow's translation of the rich and copious materials which illustrate the invasion of Hindustan by the Persian emperor Nadir Shaw, upon the ground, forsooth, of an admission by that author, that the transactions of the Court of Delhi, subsequent to the invasion of Nadir, were very little known in the west, and had not even in Asia been previously committed to writing. Again, the oppression of his subjects by Saadut Ali Khan is admitted by the vakeel; but an argument is urged in palliation which amounts to this,—that as Saadut Ali transferred to the East-India Company a portion of his territory in commutation of an annual pecuniary subsidy, the unscrupulous miser was constrained to extort from the remaining half of his dominions the same countless hoards which, with a less degree of oppression, might have been extracted from the whole of his possessions. Further, the charge of pusillanimity against Shujah-ud-Dowlah is no longer denied; but Museeh Ooddeen pleads, in vindication of the gross breach of faith on the part of this prince towards his ally, that as he had stipulated to pay for the services of the British force, he was fully justified, notwithstanding his solemn assurance of support, in abandoning his friends at a critical juncture, and leaving them to bear the whole brunt of the battle. Mahomed Museeh Ooddeen Khan, we fear, must be in the hands of bad advisers. He should be at once told that such arguments and such morality, however successful they may have been found within the precincts of a native court, will not be tolerated in England, and unless his future communications are marked by some improvement in both these respects, he must be content with a bare acknowledgment of their receipt in our "Notices to Correspondents."

We would offer to Museeh Ooddeen a further piece of advice. In quoting an authority, common justice requires that the author's meaning should be fairly and honestly given. In Museeh Ooddeen's letter, Colonel Dow is made to say that "the transactions at the court of Delhi since the invasion of the famous Nadir Shah, king of Persia,

"are very little known." These transactions, however, were notorious enough in India, and when Colonel Dow wrote, must have been fresh in the recollection of the then existing generation. What the historian says is, that these transactions were "very little known in the West." The words in italics are omitted in Museeh Ooddeen's letter. The vakeel, probably, is not conversant with the English language, and may not be aware of their import; but if the words were omitted by his interpreter because they were found to be ill suited to his purpose, that functionary is unworthy of the post which he fills, and should be forthwith dismissed.

THE EXTINCT DYNASTY OF OUDE.

No. II.

WAJID ALEE SHAH, the last of the kings of Oude, ascended the throne on the 13th February, 1847. We have already shown that the hopes entertained by the British Government of securing a system of administration calculated to protect life and property, and to promote the welfare and happiness of the people of Oude, had been systematically frustrated by each one of this prince's predecessors. It remains to be seen whether the new reign proved an exception to the general rule. No very promising estimate had been formed of Wajid's character while heir-apparent. In 1845, the British Resident, adverting to his temper, describes it as capricious and fickle. His habits, moreover, at this time were not the best calculated to invigorate his mind, or to render it the safe depository of the irresponsible power with which he was shortly to be invested. "His days and nights," adds Capt. Shakespear, "are passed in the female apartments, and he appears wholly to have resigned himself to debauchery, dissipation, and low pursuits." Two years later, Wajid assumed the reins of power. The first steps of his administration were anxiously watched by the British Government, and these shadowed forth but little hope of improvement. Alee Nukee Khan, a man totally unacquainted with even the first principles of government, was selected as Prime Minister. Alee, however, was not the only favourite, and in the conduct of public affairs the young prince allowed himself to be almost wholly swayed by the low menials who had assisted him in his previous dissipation. Parallel instances are not wanting where youthful sovereigns, rising to the level of their exalted stations, have banished boon companions from the royal presence. Wajid proved himself more stanch to his old associates. Eunuchs, fiddlers, and songsters filled the highest offices of trust and emolument. All public orders were given by these minions, while his Majesty was content to devote himself to personal gratification and frivolous amusements. The results were such as might be anticipated. Malversation became rampant in every department, and insecurity to life and property sprung up in every part of the kingdom. Such was the state of affairs in 1847, the first year of Wajid's reign. Towards the close of that year, Lord Hardinge, then Governor-General, resolved to hold one more conference with the King. The interview took place at Lucknow, on the 22nd November. At this meeting, Lord Hardinge personally represented to his Majesty the cruel oppression which had been produced in Oude by long-continued misrule, and solemnly urged upon the King the necessity of a decisive change in his administration. He then reminded him of the warning given by Lord William Bentinck in 1831, and finally fixed a period of two years, within which the required reforms were to take place, or the British Government would be forced to interfere by assuming the administration. The menace was wholly disregarded by Wajid. The Governor-General had taken pains to refer to sundry parallel cases of interference in the history of India, from which it was hoped his Majesty might take timely warning. But the only history of which Wajid had heard was probably that of his own court. Here he had been taught, and long experience justified the precept, that the reiterated threats of the British Government might be safely regarded as idle words and waste paper. Wajid had no other motive to action. He was too intent upon the gratification of his own caprices to bestow a thought upon the welfare of his people. His feelings in this respect seemed to tally with those of his progenitor Saadut Ali, who, being reminded of the satisfaction which must be derived from witnessing the increasing prosperity of the country and the happiness of his people under a better management, answered with great candour, that the contemplation of these things would not afford him the smallest gratification. From this period the life of Wajid gradually became one of comparative seclusion. At length his aversion to business was complete. He neither felt the responsibilities of sovereignty nor performed any of its duties. One nobleman alone had access to his presence, and this was his prime minister. At the commencement of his reign he had consented to see, occasionally, the members of the royal family and the aristocracy of the city; but the effort was felt to be too painful, and soon ceased. The only other individuals, save the females, who were now permitted to see him were the singers from Delhi and Rampore, and the eunuchs, whose influence was still more mischievous. These creatures considered it their duty to protect their master from the importunity of all who had wrongs to complain of, and the King was consequently kept in utter ignorance of all that was passing beyond the walls of his palace. So complete was the King's subserviency to these sycophants, that even the Minister was obliged to conform to their will. They meddled in all affairs, and influenced every decision, while the authorities, who were responsible for the orders issued, dared not complain. The system of government at this time is thus portrayed by Colonel Sleeman: "The King leaves all power ostensibly to his Minister; the Minister is interfered with in the exercise of that power by many worthless characters, male and female, who have access to the King, and make themselves agreeable or convenient to him, and in return pervert his orders and sell his favours. The Minister is wanting in character and ability, and feels little regard for the reputation of his sovereign or the welfare of his people." The date to which this description has reference is the year 1851. Up to this time no remedy whatever had been applied by the King to the abuses which prevailed, and it seemed impossible to defer any longer the threatened interference, when, unhappily for the people of Oude, the Burmese war unexpectedly broke out. Another respite was thus afforded to the ruler of the country—a further term of oppression imposed upon his subjects. The war with the Burmese being concluded, attention was again drawn to the subject, and towards the close of 1854 General Outram received the appointment of Political Resident at the court of Lucknow, with instructions to institute a full inquiry into the state of the country. This task has been faithfully fulfilled, and the facts will be found embodied in a Report, containing a clear and temperate statement of the condition of the kingdom. In this document, the representations which General Outram deemed it his duty to make regarding the sovereign of Oude and the administration of the government are thus summed up:—

"As regards its internal state, the condition of Oude is most deplorable; and it has been my painful duty to demonstrate that the lamentable condition of this kingdom has been caused by the very culpable apathy and gross misrule of the sovereign and his durbar. I have shown that the affairs of Oude still continue in the same state, if not worse, in which Colonel Sleeman, from time to time, described them to be; and that the improvement which Lord Hardinge peremptorily demanded seven years ago, at the hands of the King, in pursuance of the treaty of 1801, has not in any degree been effected. And I have no hesitation in declaring my opinion, therefore, that the duty imposed on the British Government by that treaty cannot any longer admit of our honestly indulging the reluctance which the Government of India has felt heretofore to those extreme measures which alone can be of any real efficacy in remedying the evils from which the State of Oude has suffered so long."

In this view Lord Dalhousie could not fail to concur. The results of the inquiry brought conviction to his mind, not only that no improvement had taken place, but that there was no prospect—no hope—of improvement. The vices of the Oude Government seemed inherent in its constitution. Change of prince and change of resident, interference and non-interference, entreaty and menace—all had been tried, and all had terminated in one and the same result—the progressive deterioration of the country. Every effort to recall Government to a sense of its duty had failed; it had become thoroughly effete and corrupt, and it was obvious that there was no prospect of ameliorating the condition of the people but by the transfer of the administration to the British. The treaty of 1801 was accordingly declared to be null and void. The King was then invited to enter into a new engagement, whereby the government of Oude should be transferred to the paramount power in India. To this arrangement Wajid refused to assent. Hereupon the British Government determined no longer to tolerate the existing evils, and a proclamation was forthwith issued, declaring that the government of the territories of Oude was vested exclusively, and for ever, in the East-India Company. No one can doubt that this decision was the right one. The most important condition of the treaty had been violated by every member of a long line of princes, and the British Government had been thereby released from its obligations to the sovereigns of Oude. But another obligation remained. A reformed system of government had been promised to the people, and as every hope of securing an efficient ruler for the country had long since vanished, the assumption of the administration was the only means by which this obligation could be fulfilled. The King has been deposed, and five millions of people have thereby become British subjects. For the latter, a mild and beneficent rule has been substituted for one of cruel oppression; for the former, ample provision has been made—a provision sufficient to secure all that can enchant the senses or corrupt the heart, and this is all that the sovereigns of Oude have ever desired. Both prince and subjects have now been placed in their true position; and those who think that the welfare of the people is the great object for which governments exist, will feel little regret that the dynasty of Oude has been extinguished.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

WE observe that another scheme has been set on foot for the establishment of telegraphic communication between this country and India. The route which is proposed for the new line is that by Egypt and the Red Sea. We have, on a former occasion, explained the arrangements entered into between her Majesty's Government and the East-India Company with the European and Indian Junction Telegraph Company for taking a line of telegraph through Asiatic Turkey, and have stated that the East-India Company then expressed their readiness, upon being satisfied that measures had been taken for completing the line to the head of the Persian Gulf, to continue it at their own expense to Kurrachee. There are some who think that the line through Asiatic Turkey will never be made: that the physical and moral difficulties are too great to be overcome. We confess we do not share in this apprehension. Nor did we, when the same was said with respect to the Indian lines. Every route will present difficulties, and the Red Sea is pronounced by some to be impracticable. We presume that the Government have not chosen the Euphrates route with their eyes shut to the obstacles which naturally lie in the way of every work of any magnitude. The fact that Sir William O'Shaughnessy will be employed to contend with these difficulties may be regarded as some guarantee that, even if they should be formidable, they will be overcome. The promoters, however, of the Red-Sea route must, we presume, be of a different opinion. The time has hardly yet arrived when two lines of electric telegraph to India would be supported. So that any attempt to carry out this scheme must depend upon the failure of that which has received the sanction and support of the authorities. It is satisfactory, however, to the public to know, that if one string of the bow breaks which is to send the electric shaft from London to Calcutta, there is another ready to perform the duty.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—In your reply to my letter inserted in your impression of the 3rd instant, complaining of certain comments introduced into the article "The Extinct Dynasty of Oude," which appeared in your impression of the 30th of January last, you observe, "We plead in justification the truth of our statement. Musseh-ood-Deen Khan asserts that the charge of treachery against Saadut Khan rests entirely upon a memorandum furnished by Captain Fletcher Hayes, assistant to the Resident at Lucknow, and that this gentleman is not trustworthy, inasmuch as he quotes as his authority a Mahometan author who died a century before Saadut Khan came into existence. We have nothing to do with Capt. Hayes or his authorities. A stroke of anachronism by a British subordinate does not invalidate the testimony of the Persian historians. The facts of the case are related with great minuteness in the 'History of Hindustan,' translated from the Persian by Col. Alexander Dow. In a revised edition of this work, published in 1803, and at page 424 of the second volume, the parting interview between Saadut Khan and Nadir Shaw is thus described: 'The King of Persia finding himself in possession of Delhi, called the Nizam and Saadut Khan into his presence, and addressed them in the following extraordinary manner,' and, after quoting the offensive anecdote, you conclude by saying, "Musseh-ood-Deen will now be satisfied that the treachery of Saadut Khan rests upon something more than the memorandum furnished by Capt. Hayes."

Your anticipation, Sir, is by no means well founded; for, however convenient you may find it, after my triumphant annihilation of Capt. Fletcher Hayes as an authority, to adopt Col. Dow as your Magnus Apollo, I am very far from being disposed to follow your example.

Col. Dow, in vol. ii. p. 278, says: "The transactions at the Court of Delhi since the invasion of the famous Nadir Shaw, king of Persia, are very little known. They have not, even in Asia, been committed to writing. . . . This consideration has induced the translator (Col. Dow himself) of Ferishta's history to throw together the material events which have happened in the empire since the memorable irruption of the Persians in the year 1738. He derives his authority for some of the facts from a Persian manuscript now in his hands, concerning six years of the reign of Mahomed Shaw," &c.

Nothing, Sir, can be more certain or more reasonable than that, as all history rests upon the testimony of the authors who have transmitted it to us, it is of the utmost importance that we should know who those authors were; the part, if any, which they took in the affairs they record; the means by which they acquired their information; and, above all, whether the characters they give us of public men have been drawn sine ira et studio.

Now Col. Dow either could not or would not satisfy his readers upon a single one of the above essential points, and they are, consequently, fully justified in declining to receive as authentic, facts which rest solely upon the credit of an anonymous writer; and they have the more reason to do so as Scir-ool Mutakherin, Miroot Aftab Noonah, Tareekh Moozuffurree, Nadir Namah, and Yadgar Bahadorree, writers renowned throughout all Asia for their great learning and strict impartiality, are wholly silent as to the indignity said to have been offered to Saadut Khan by Nadir Shaw, and contradict, moreover, most positively, the account of his having committed suicide.

For these reasons, therefore, Sir, you must excuse me if, in this case, I consider the Colonel to be no better an authority than the Captain.

As regards the charge of pusillanimity brought against Shooja-ood-Dowlah, that nawab had paid the price of blood, and he naturally expected that those who had received it should perform their part of the bargain. He was present, in case of need, and that was enough. That such is the true view of the case is proved by the following letter from Warren Hastings to Shooja-ood-Dowlah, dated 22nd April, 1775:—

"In reply to your letter authorizing the Hon. East-India Company to annihilate and exterminate the Rohillas, if they refuse to pay the agreed sum of forty lakhs of rupees, I beg leave to know if, in case of their complying with your request, and placing you in full possession and entire control of their state, your excellency will promise to pay the amount of fifty lakhs of rupees to the Hon. East-India Company, in consideration of this service, as this sum will enable the Company to discharge the tribute they owe to the King of Delhi, and thus relieve themselves from the existing embarrassments upon their finances."

In meeting the charge of avarice brought against Saadut Allie Khan, I accounted for the means by which he accumulated so large a sum as 13,000,000*l.* sterling, thus:—1. By savings. 2. By the immense wealth bequeathed to him by his brother. 3. By the property which came into his possession in consequence of several of the begums, slaves, eunuchs, &c. dying intestate. That, in your answer, you should have only alluded to the first of these means, I suppose I must, in charity, attribute to inadvertency, rather than to a want of candour. The subjects of Saadut Allie were, there is no doubt, grievously oppressed; but it was in order that the coffers of the East-India Company might be replenished, and therefore that corporation and its advocates should be the last to complain of acts from which they derived so much benefit, and for the commission of which they themselves are chiefly responsible. "Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione quereutes?"

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

MOHD. MUSEEH OODDEEN,

Accredited Vakeel to H.M. the King of Oude.

Harley House, New-road, March 9, 1857.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—I have been struck by a paragraph in your last Mail, of the 3rd instant, to the following effect:—

"EUROPEAN SERJEANTS FOR NATIVE REGIMENTS. — It is suggested, they say, that a European serjeant be attached to every company of sepoy in the army."

Having inquired at the India House, I find the idea is not entertained there; but there is a speciousness in the proposition which, if it be not examined, might pass current with a majority of the Court.

The complaint, for a series of years, by all officers, both of the Queen's army and that of the Company, that the regular native army is inadequately officered, is well known to every one. Indeed, it has often been to me a subject of astonishment that the native troops should on all occasions have supported the Europeans as they have done, and obtained their high character; even when unsupported by Europeans they have performed prodigies of valour, with not more than one officer to a hundred, and frequently to two hundred men. There is no instance in the disciplined army of any nation in the world, where troops, under similar circumstances, could have behaved better. In reply to the want of European officers, we are told that they have native officers who supply their places. Now let us see what sort of a substitute is the native officer of the regular army. He enters the service as a private on wages of 5½d. per diem, and comes from that class of society to whom this pay is fair remuneration. In nine out of ten cases he has never attended even a village or parish school. He seldom rises to the lowest grade of officer till he has been twenty or twenty-five years in the service; and by the time he obtains the second, or the highest grade, he is looking out for his pension and to quit the army. Now here is the substitute for the well-educated European gentleman, who, by his demeanour and intercourse with his men, is respected and obeyed with alacrity.

In the irregular branch of the service the native officers frequently enter at once as such, or they come in as cadets of the families whose members are officers in their corps, and are promoted to the rank of officers as vacancies occur. These expectants never associate with the men, but mess with those of their own rank in life, and when promoted naturally command obedience of the non-commissioned officers and privates over whom they are placed. In corps thus constituted, two or three European officers only of rank and experience selected from the line for their qualifications are found sufficient, and it therefore becomes necessary to keep up the full strength of officers in the regiments of the line as a school from whence these highly-favoured officers may be drawn.

What the troops of the line require, is efficient officers in sufficient numbers, either Europeans or natives, or both. The deficiency may be severely felt at some future period, when there may be no time for a remedy.

In order to supply this deficiency it is suggested, it seems, to attach a European serjeant to every company of sepoy. Not having a commission, he must be subservient to the present race of soi-disant native officers, properly warrant officers; and if it is not intended to supersede these officers, of what use will he be? But he may be of most serious disservice, and even of mischief. The serjeants so selected would naturally be chosen on account of their facility of speaking the native language, and would necessarily become the interpreters between the young European officers and their men. The latter having passed in French in England (which is deemed a sufficient qualification here as an oriental linguist) would not be compelled, as at present, to learn the vernacular language, and the native army would virtually fall to be commanded by serjeants. The character and conduct of the European officer of the present day ensure respect from his men. Are we so sure that out of the ten serjeants in every regiment all would uphold their respectability? Wherever they did not, the European reputation, which is now so highly estimated, would sink in the eyes of the native soldiery.

In former times, every sepoy regiment had a drill-serjeant or serjeant-major, and a quarter-master serjeant in charge of the stores and ammunition. In later times, owing to the difficulty experienced in retaining such men in the corps as were fit for the office, the native adjutant took the place of the drill-serjeant, and a European commissioned officer, as quarter-master, now has charge of the stores and camp equipage.

It is true, that in every company or troop of native artillery there is a European serjeant for the express purpose of looking after the ammunition; but he must be ignorant indeed of military matters who should command a company of artillery, with its two or three European officers, with a company of native infantry or a troop of cavalry often without one.

It is supposed that the native troops of the line require European serjeants to lead them into action, and to inspire them with courage to do their duty, to such men I say they know nothing of the sepoy, and the supposition is an insult to the well-earned reputation of the native army.

GOVERNMENT CENTRAL MUSEUM AT MADRAS.

The statement which we give below illustrates, in a very striking manner, the interest which is taken by the natives of India in exhibitions of instruction and amusement. We trust that the results which have attended the Madras Museum will induce the Government to establish similar institutions in other parts of India.

PROPOSED NEW INDIAN BISHOPRICS.—At a recent meeting of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, it was resolved that memorials should be sent to the Prime Minister, the President of the Board of Control, and the Directors of the East India Company, with the object of obtaining the necessary parliamentary authority for the erection of three new sees at Agra, Lahore, and Tinnevely.

CITY MEETINGS IN FAVOUR OF THE CHINESE POLICY.—On Friday, the 13th inst., a large and influential meeting of the merchants, bankers, traders, and electors of the City of London, held at the Guildhall, unanimously passed a resolution, expressing high confidence in Her Majesty's Government, and the policy pursued towards China. The Court of Common Council had previously passed a similar vote in favour of Lord Palmerston's government.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

OPIUM TRADE OF CHINA.

The Earl of Shaftesbury having moved that the following questions be referred to the consideration of the judges,—

“1. Whether, according to the true construction of the 4th section of an Act passed in a session of Parliament holden in the 3rd and 4th years of the reign of his late Majesty King William IV., entitled ‘An Act for effecting an arrangement with the East-India Company, and for the better government of his Majesty’s Indian territories until the 30th day of April, 1854,’ it is lawful for the East-India Company to derive a revenue from opium by the following system—that is to say, by prohibiting and preventing the growth of the poppy from which opium is made within their territories, except as grown on their account and under their license and superintendency, advances of money being annually made by them to the cultivators of the poppy by way of pre-payment of the price of all the juice of the poppy of a specified consistence, to be produced from the land in respect of which such advances are made, such price being estimated according to a price fixed by the Company for the district in which the land happens to be situated, the cultivators delivering to the Company as much of such juice as the cultivators can produce, such juice being afterwards sent by the Company to their factories, and there manufactured by them into opium; afterwards sent by them from those factories to Calcutta, and there sold by them by auction at their sales, the excess of the sale prices over and above the first cost constituting the revenue in question.

“2. Whether, having regard to the supplemental treaty between her Majesty and the Emperor of China, bearing date the 8th day of October, 1843, which contains the following words:—‘A fair and regular tariff of duties and other dues having now been established, it is to be hoped that the system of smuggling will entirely cease,’ it is lawful for the East-India Company to deal with such opium in the manner stated in the first question, with the full knowledge that it is so purchased at the above-mentioned sales for the purpose of being smuggled into China in contravention of the laws of that empire, and so to cultivate and manufacture the same with a view principally to the China market, and to its being so purchased for such purposes as aforesaid, the Company, with that view, manufacturing the opium into the form which the Company consider best adapted to facilitate and promote that contraband trade.’”

Proceeded to state that his first object was to ascertain whether or not the trade was one recognized by our laws, and then to proceed, with the assistance of their Lordships, to devise some means for its total abolition. He believed it was illegal, not only as inconsistent with the spirit of our laws, but in direct contravention to many of them. He had been taunted with having brought the subject before the notice of their Lordships in order to embarrass the Government and take advantage of the present state of feeling among parties with regard to the affairs of China. But he denied that imputation on the honour of a gentleman. His simple object was to obtain an answer to his question. If the Judges declared the trade illegal, then it was for the Government to put an end to it at once and for ever. If, on the contrary, they declared it legal he would then start from a new point, and appeal to the moral feelings of the people of this country to put an end to a traffic which had nothing to support it either in a commercial or a financial point of view. He then proceeded to recapitulate the provisions of the various Acts which had been passed from time to time regulating the Indian trade, but none of which, he contended, recognized the trade in opium, though, as their Lordships were aware, some of the latter entirely prohibited the East-India Company from engaging in commercial transactions of any kind whatever. He begged, therefore, to press his motion upon the attention of their Lordships, and to intreat in its behalf the grave consideration which was demanded by the importance of the subject.

The Lord Chancellor submitted that Lord Shaftesbury’s question was one which from its peculiar nature could not fairly be referred to the consideration of the Judges, who would in that case be called upon to try the whole Government of India unheard, and, if the trade was thought to be illegal, to condemn them and leave them open at a day’s notice to the penalties of indictments for having systematically violated the laws of the realm. It was impossible to ask the Government to take such a course, and that, too, upon entirely ex parte statements. The question as to the legality of the trade, however, might be submitted privately for the opinion of the law officers of the Crown.

The Earl of Shaftesbury had no wish to expose any parties to the penalties of indictments, and he was willing to withdraw his motion, on the understanding that his question as to the legality of the traffic was so submitted to the Judges.

Earl Grey thought that Lord Shaftesbury had exercised a wise discretion in withdrawing his motion, though he attached no value to the opinion of the law-officers of the Crown based upon the legal technicalities of an Act of Parliament, as he believed the question of the legality of the traffic should be tried by far higher considerations. He believed no legal enactment would check the abuse of opium, as when once it went into the market it was impossible afterwards to regulate the proportions in which it should be used by private individuals. He had hoped that this motion would have included a question as to whether the Government had ever directly or indirectly connived at the practice of smuggling opium into China, for that was the main point at issue. He then reviewed at length the present state of our relations with China, condemning in the strongest terms the conduct of the English Government, and referring to the objects with which it was intended to send out an envoy to Canton.

The Earl of Albemarle begged to recall the attention of their Lordships to the question before them. Much misapprehension existed in this country as to the smuggling of opium. Legally in China the trade in opium was prohibited, but practically it was free. To a certain extent the Chinese were dram-drinkers, though whenever they could get opium they preferred it. But if they had not the latter they would resort to the former, and there could be no doubt but that opium-eating was a much milder form of vice than dram-drinking, and he believed that when not carried to excess it was less deleterious in its effects upon the human frame. He quoted various medical and scientific authorities to show that the effect of opium when eaten or smoked in moderation was not so hurtful as it was generally reported to be. The destructive effects of ardent spirits they all knew, and knew that the records of their abuse filled half the criminal statistics of the United Kingdom. If the motion was pressed to a division he should vote against it.

Earl Granville, in replying to the remarks made by Earl Grey, denied most distinctly that there was any ground for supposing that the smuggling of opium into China was encouraged or connived at by the colonial authorities. It was the intention of the Government to despatch an envoy to Canton, in order to place our relations with the Chinese empire on a satisfactory basis, having, at the same time, due regard to the real interests of this kingdom.

After a few remarks from the Earls of Malmesbury and Shaftesbury,

The Earl of Ellenborough said he feared the moral question of the traffic would be quite lost sight of in solving the legal doubt. He, however, would be glad to learn from the Lord Chancellor what conclusion had been come to with regard to the way in which the motion should be finally disposed of.

The Lord Chancellor explained that the noble earl’s question would be submitted, though not by a vote of their Lordships’ House, to the opinion of the Judges and law officers of the Crown.

This reply led to a brief conversation as to whether their Lordships’ House would be in any way committed or bound by the legal opinions, in which the Earl of Derby and the Duke of Argyll took part. It was terminated by Earl Granville, who explained that the motion was withdrawn on the understanding that the question should be submitted to the opinion of her Majesty’s law officers. Their Lordships, however, were not bound by that decision, whatever it might be.

The motion was then withdrawn.

CHINA.

The Earl of Ellenborough moved for certain returns connected with the execution by the British authorities in China of the Supplemental Treaty of 1847. Those returns related to three articles of that treaty, which aimed at the prevention of smuggling and illicit trade; and, now that we were disposed to be severe on the Chinese as to their execution of treaty obligations, it was desirable to know whether British officials had been scrupulous in their observance of those obligations. The noble lord then passed to the subject of the reinforcements about to be sent to China, and contended that they would arrive too late, or, at any rate, at such a time of the year as to render the troops liable to great mortality. He trusted, too, that the Government would take care that the troops were not overcrowded, and that proper arrangements would be made for their ventilation. He had heard with great regret that it was intended to send out some important personage as a Plenipotentiary, that there was to be an expedition directed against other parts of China besides Canton, and that there was to be a joint interference in Chinese affairs with other nations. All these propositions, if carried out, would only impede our operations and embitter our quarrel, which, in his opinion, ought to be brought to as speedy a settlement as was possible. The noble lord concluded by moving for the returns.

Lord Panmure said that the present season of the year was, no doubt, the worst for sending troops to China with a view to military operations. The Government, however, on mature consideration, had resolved that the course about to be pursued was the only one suited to the emergency. The troops about to be sent to China were already under orders for India, and to India they would proceed if on their arrival in China it was found they were not wanted. Every precaution would be taken to send them out in a state of efficiency. It had also been determined not to make use of any native Indian troops on the present occasion.

Earl Grey wished to know whether the Government had received by the last mail despatches of an alarming nature.

The Earl of Clarendon said that Admiral Seymour, as had been already stated on a former occasion, had announced to the Government his intention of abandoning some of his positions before Canton, owing to the threatening aspect of affairs at Hongkong. With regard to the returns moved for by Lord Ellenborough, there could be no objection in producing them.

The motion was then agreed to.

WAR WITH CHINA.

The adjourned debate on Mr. Cobden's motion—

"That this House has heard with concern of the conflicts which have occurred between the British and Chinese authorities in the Canton river; and, without expressing an opinion as to the extent to which the Government of China may have afforded this country cause of complaint respecting the non-fulfilment of the treaty of 1842, this House considers that the papers which have been laid upon the table fail to establish satisfactory grounds for the violent measures resorted to at Canton in the late affair of the Arrow."

being again resumed, a lengthened discussion ensued, at the close of which the House divided, when the numbers were—

MARCH 6.

ALI MOORAD KHAN.

Sir F. Kelly asked the President of the Board of Control whether in the case of the petition presented to her Majesty the Queen by his Highness Ameer Ali Moorad Khan on the 13th day of November last, and by her Majesty referred to the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, any decision had been come to by the Board; and, if so, on what ground the communication of that decision was withheld from the petitioner, who was now in London awaiting such decision.

Mr. V. Smith said that such petitions were referred to the Government of India, in order that they might be investigated by the local authorities. He had been informed that Ali Moorad Khan had left England, and that was the reason why no communication was sent to him. He was, however, told on Monday last that such was not the case, and he therefore at once forwarded a communication to him on the subject of the petition.

In answer to Sir F. Kelly,

Mr. V. Smith added that the decision of the Board of Control had been transmitted, together with the petition, to the Governor-General of India.

OUDE.

In answer to Mr. Otway,

Mr. V. Smith said that he had not yet perused the despatches with regard to the State of Oude, and was not, therefore, able to furnish a list of the creditors' claims upon it. He had, however, no objection to lay upon the table any papers which might throw light upon the subject.

PERSIA.

Mr. Layard understood from the public journals that a treaty with Persia had been signed at Paris, and therefore wished to be informed whether her Majesty's Government had now any intention of laying the papers relating to Persia on the table.

Mr. V. Smith thought that his hon. friend would admit the propriety of withholding these papers until the treaty had been ratified. There was no intention on the part of her Majesty's Government to lay them on the table at present; and, indeed, their production at present could not be of much service, as a dissolution of Parliament impended. His hon. friend would have an opportunity of bringing the matter forward in the next Parliament, in which he hoped he should have the pleasure of meeting the hon. gentleman and discussing it with him.

Mr. Layard observed, that the House had hitherto had no knowledge whatever of the causes of the war with Persia, and that it had a right, before it separated, to some information respecting the history of the war, by having the papers, or a selection of them, laid before the house.

Mr. V. Smith considered that it was not desirable that the House should depart from the discretion it had hitherto exercised, and force a discussion on a matter still pending.

Sir H. Willoughby objected to a war of this kind being entered upon without the previous sanction of the Home Government.

Mr. Gladstone was not satisfied with what had fallen from Mr. V. Smith, the upshot of which was that a war would have been entered into without the consent of Parliament; that when Parliament met negotiations were commenced, which could be assigned as a reason for not inquiring into the cause of the war; and when papers were asked for it was said that their production would interfere with the negotiations. According to this, the representatives of the people would have no opportunity of pronouncing an opinion upon the war, and the conduct of the Government in relation to it, until the meeting of the new Parliament.

THE HONGKONG ORDINANCE.

Sir F. Kelly inquired whether the Government intended to allow the Hongkong Ordinance of 1855 to remain in force?

Lord Palmerston replied that he was not aware of any intention to repeal it.

EAST INDIA AND CHINA.

On the motion of Lord Holham an address was agreed to for copies of any memorials received by Viscount Palmerston in 1847 and 1848 from the East-India and China Association of Liverpool, together with the answers returned thereto.

DEATH OF EARL AMHERST.

We have to record the death of Earl Amherst, who expired at nine o'clock on Friday night, March 13, at Knowle-park, near Sevenoaks, Kent.

The venerable Peer had been in an indifferent state of health for some weeks past, arising from a thorough decay consequent on old age, so that to the immediate members of his family the mournful event was not unlooked for. Viscount and Viscountess Holmesdale and Sir John and Lady Sarah Hay Williams were with the noble earl at his dissolution.

William Pitt Amherst, Earl Amherst, of Aracan, in the East-Indies, Viscount Holmesdale, county of Kent, Baron Amherst, of Montreal, county of Kent, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, was eldest son of Lieut.-General William Amherst, brother of Jeffrey, first Lord Amherst, by Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Thomas Patterson. He was born on the 14th of January, 1773, and succeeded to the barony, on the death of his uncle Jeffrey before named, in August, 1797. The late earl was twice married—first in 1809, to Sarah, daughter and co-heir of Andrew, second and last Lord Archer, and widow of the fifth Earl of Plymouth, who died in May, 1838, by whom his lordship had surviving issue Lady Sarah, married to Sir John Hay Williams, Bart., and Viscount Holmesdale (now Earl Amherst); and secondly, on the 25th of June, 1839, Lady Mary Sackville, eldest daughter and co-heir of John Frederick, second Duke of Dorset, widow of Other Archer, sixth Earl of Plymouth, by which lady, who survives him, he leaves no issue.

The late Earl had been a Lord of the Bedchamber to Kings George III. and IV., and William IV. He was one of the Canada Commissioners, and early in 1816 was appointed Ambassador Extraordinary to the Emperor of China. He left England in the Alceste in February of that year on his mission. On reaching the precincts of the Imperial Palace at Peking, and refusing to submit to the humiliating ceremonies of the Emperor's Court, he was refused admission to the presence of the Emperor, and his mission was thus rendered useless. On his return in the Alceste, Captain Murray Maxwell, he was wrecked off the island Pulo Leat, from which he proceeded, accompanied by the late Right Hon. Sir Henry Ellis, in the boats of the wrecked ship, to Batavia, then recently conquered by the British under Lord Minto. He and his shipwrecked companions there met with a safe asylum, and the remainder of the crew were rescued from the island on which the ship had been lost. In 1817, on his return to England, he visited the Emperor Napoleon at the island of St. Helena, and was honoured with several interviews by that illustrious captive. He subsequently was appointed Governor-General of India, and for his services there was in 1826 created Earl Amherst and Viscount Holmesdale. The deceased Peer was afterwards selected as Governor-General of Canada, but never proceeded on his mission. Since his second marriage in 1839, his Lordship has led a retired life, rarely interfering in politics, chiefly directing his attention to the welfare of the poor on his estates in Kent.

The late Earl was made a Privy Councillor in 1815, and in 1834 nominated a Grand Cross of the Order of the Guelphs of Hanover. By his death a pension of 3,000*l.* a year, which he enjoyed for his public services, ceases.

The late Peer is succeeded in the family honours and estates by his only son, William Pitt, Viscount Holmesdale, born 3rd of September, 1805, and married in July, 1834, to Gertrude, sixth daughter of the late Bishop (Percy) of Carlisle, by whom he has a family, his eldest son, William Archer (now Viscount Holmesdale), a captain in the Guards, having served at the battle of the Alma, where he was dangerously wounded.

THE EARL OF ELGIN has accepted the office of Plenipotentiary to the Court of Peking.

A SALE OF THE WORKS OF ART, and manufacture of British India, lent by the Hon. East-India Company to the Great Exhibitions of London and Paris, is proceeding at Messrs. Christie and Manson's, St. James's Street.

APPOINTMENTS.—The Queen has appointed Mr. R. H. Walsh, Esq., to be superintendent of Government schools in the island of the Mauritius, and Frederick H. A. Forth, Esq., to be treasurer for the island of Hong Kong. Captain H. W. Palin, late of the Indian army, has been appointed chief constable of Manchester in place of Captain Willis; the salary is 500*l.* per annum.

THE REPORT OF THE OTTOMAN BANK, just issued, states that the profits from the commencement of the undertaking to the 31st December, have amounted to 31,179*l.* A distribution of 15*s.* per share is recommended. Branches of the bank have been established at Smyrna, Beyrout, and Galatz.

BANK OF EGYPT.—By the report issued, preparatory to the meeting of the shareholders, announced for the 24th inst., we learn that business was commenced at Alexandria on the 7th July last, and that from that date to the 31st December, a profit was realized of 5,941*l.* The paid-up capital was 125,000*l.* at the beginning, and was increased to 187,500*l.* on the 31st October. It is proposed not to divide the profits until the expiration of twelve months from the date of opening.

THE LEVEE.—His Royal Highness Prince Albert, on behalf of her Majesty, held a levee (the second of this season) on Thursday, the 12th inst., in St. James's Palace. The following were among the presentations which took place on the occasion:—Capt. Barwise, Mr. J. Lumsdaine, Lieut. G. Wheeler, Bengal army; Lieut.-Col. Hinde, on return from service in the Crimea and Asia, by the Chairman of the East-India Company; Mr. J. Brant, her Majesty's Consul at Danac-us, on his return from Erzerum, by the Earl of Clarendon; Col. Vaughan Brooke, on return from the command of the 32nd regiment in India, and on having been nominated c.b., and aide-de-camp to her Majesty, by Gen. Sir W. Cotton; Col. R. P. Campbell, on being appointed a c.b., and proceeding to China, by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge; Lieut. Child, I.N., by the Chairman of the East-India Company; Major-Gen. Hanceck, on return from India, by Gen. Sir T. M. Mahon; Dr. Hunter, on return from foreign service, by Major-Gen. Lord W. Paulet; Mr. J. K. Jolly, of Ceylon, by the Right Hon. H. Labouchere; Mr. W. N. Lees, principal, Mahomedan College, Calcutta, by Sir James Graham; Captain Martindale, on appointment as superintendent of public works, New South Wales, by Gen. Sir Burgoyne; Ens. J. Richards, on leaving for India, by Lieut.-Col. Shawe; Mr. Heerjeebhoy Rostonjee by the Right Hon. R. Vernon Smith; Capt. H. Vyse, by Gen. Sir W. Gomm.

EAST-INDIA.—LAW EXPENSES.—The expenses incurred by the East-India Company, and charged, or to be charged, on the revenues of India for Law Proceedings in England during the years 1855 and 1856 respectively, were,

(The above includes 6,500*l.* advanced to the executors of Colonel D. O. Dyce Sombre for law expenses in support of his will, which will be repaid, subject to taxation, out of his estate.) The expense incurred by the East-India Company in opposing a private bill, intituled, "The Nawab of Surat Treaty Bill," before a committee of the House of Commons, amounted to 8,541*l.* 1*s.* 7*d.* Number of counsel, three.

DE BEAUCHESNE v. HODGSON (Prerogative Court, Feb. 28).—The object of the suit was to prove the will of a deceased Indian Officer, viz. Major-General Hodgson, late of St. Cloud. The suit was promoted by the Viscountess de Beauchesne, the daughter of the deceased, against Mrs. Helen Hodgson, his widow. The personal property of the deceased was valued at £17,000. It was contended, on behalf of the daughter, that her father having been domiciled in France the will he had made was not valid. On the other hand, it was contended that the deceased, having an Anglo-Indian domicile, never acquired a French domicile. The Court reserved its decision.

INDIAN FINANCES.—The accounts relating to the territorial revenue and disbursements of the East-India Company for the year 1854-55, have been published in a very comprehensive form. The gross receipts of that year were 27,312,000*l.*, and the expenditure 29,019,000*l.*, showing a deficit on the year of 1,707,000*l.* For 1855-56, the estimated income is 27,692,000*l.*, and the expenditure 29,754,000*l.*, or an excess of the latter over the former of upwards of two millions. On the 6th instant a return was issued of the receipts and expenditure of the East-India Company during the ten years 1845-55, in respect of their opium monopoly. The nett receipts were as follows:—1845-46, 1,98,82,577*rs.* 8*a.* 7*½p.*; 1846-47, 2,09,61,421*rs.* 7*a.* 8*p.*; 1847-48, 1,74,51,890*rs.* 6*a.* 8*½p.*; 1848-49, 2,46,27,136*rs.* 12*a.* 5*½p.*; 1849-50, 2,51,83,494*rs.* 15*a.* 1*½p.*; 1850-51, 2,23,72,576*rs.* 7*a.* 1*p.*; 1851-52, 2,74,47,805*rs.* 8*a.* 1*½p.*; 1852-53, 2,73,89,125*rs.* 8*a.* 9*p.*; 1853-54, 2,32,44,991*rs.* 6*a.* 4*½p.*; 1854-55, 2,18,74,489*rs.* 12*a.* 6*p.*

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—The deposit of 2*l.* per share on the two millions of new capital just issued by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, (or 200,000*l.*) fell payable on the 26th February, and was paid over to the East-India Company. A certain proportion of these shares is also stated to have been paid up in full.

EAST-INDIA RAILWAYS.—By a parliamentary return, dated Feb. 12, 1857, we ascertain the following particulars:—The capital of the several railway companies upon which interest is guaranteed by the East-India Company, although received principally in London is immediately available in India to the extent required for railway works there; and in London for the provision of railway machinery, including, in both cases, establishment expenses. It is not possible to distinguish the proportion of capital available in London at any one time from that available in India. The following is a statement of the actual amounts of capital in deposit with the East-India Company, whether in London or in India, on the 30th April last:—East-Indian Railway Company, 1,411,692*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.*; Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company, 1,104,753*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.*; Madras Railway Company, 317,656*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.*; Scinde Railway Company, 214,256*l.* 11*s.* 9*d.*; Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company, 203,913*l.* 2*s.* The capital of the railway companies is held at cash to answer their liabilities. No investment is made on that account distinct from the general balances of the East-India Company.

SOUTHAMPTON.—It is understood to be in contemplation, by a mutual arrangement between the South Western Railway and the South Western Steam-packet, and the Southampton Dock Companies, to land passengers from Jersey and Havre for London free of all dock charges for themselves and personal baggage, the South Western paying the dock company the landing charges. This arrangement is to take place from and after the 1st May next.

THE STATE OF THE BENGAL MILITARY FUND is very sad to contemplate. If we are to believe the report of its own actuary and managers, it is in a state bordering on insolvency, notwithstanding its numerous subscribers and the considerable aid which has been extended to it by the Government during the last thirty-four years. It is but recently that it has been rescued from complete collapse by increasing the subscriptions of married members twenty-five per cent., and of unmarried twelve and a half per cent., and, hardest of all, by reducing the widows' pensions by about nine per cent., this latter measure having been effected by the limitation to 2*s.* 4*d.* the sicca rupee of the exchange at which the pensions are paid in England, a rate which should never have been exceeded. But, in spite of all that has been done for it, the liabilities of the fund are still in excess of the assets. The fund's position, therefore, deserves the most serious and anxious consideration which the controlling authorities can bestow upon it. Recrimination is usually the result of failure where more than one party has been engaged in any concern. It is so in reference to the Bengal Fund. Its managers and actuaries endeavour to fix the blame on the East-India Company; while the latter ascribe the present painful position of affairs to the improvident management of the fund by its own officers in India. It is fairly urged that the East-India Company could have no feeling towards the fund but that of a desire to see it flourish; and if owing to the intricacies of exchange calculations, and the oversights which will occur in all offices, unintentional wrong has been done to an institution, it is not now wise to make matters worse by charging the miscarriage on the Government—above all, to spend money in appealing to law, and factiously struggling with authority. We may add that we have been informed that a proposition which has lately been made by the directors of the fund in India for a further reduction of the widows' pensions has been resisted by the East-India Company, who have thus thrown a shield of protection over the weak and defenceless dependents on the fund.

Mr. J. C. MARSHAM has issued the following address to the electors of Ipswich. He stands in conjunction with Mr. Adair, the present liberal member:—"I will not attempt to conceal from you that a great portion of my life has been passed in India, but my occupations there constrained me to make the progress of events in England the subject of constant study, and I flatter myself that the habit of contemplating the transactions of the last twenty-five years from a favourable distance, and free from the mists of party, will not be considered a disqualification for the distinction to which I am now aspiring. On such occasions it is necessary to the candidate to announce his political creed. But so many of the vital questions on which the great parties in the state were once divided have been disposed of, that it is no easy matter to discover the distinguishing lines of policy on which those parties now take their stand. In these circumstances I propose to offer you my own views on what appears to be the current questions of the day. I am for the extension of the suffrages. The elective franchise being a trust, and not a property, ought to be bestowed on all those now excluded from the enjoyment of it, who may be expected to use it under this sense of responsibility, and to be withheld as far as possible from those who value it only for what it will fetch in the election market. We owe it to our national position to vindicate the most important institution in this free country from the imputation of resting on a basis of corruption. I question whether lowering the standard of qualification would give us a more independent constituency, or a more dignified House of Commons. The ballot is also a question of the day. The ballot cannot be said to be open to the popular objection of being un-English or ungentelemanly. It is constantly resorted to by English gentlemen for their own protection in cases of election to their own associations. If it be necessary for the strong, it must be still more so for the weak. Though it may not cure bribery, it may extinguish intimidation, and whatever tends to purify our representative system ought to be tried. At the same time, I think there are other measures which may effect the same object without that constitutional risk which some profess to see in the ballot. I am, therefore, fully prepared to vote for it, though I confess I should prefer seeing other remedies tried in the first instance. The ecclesiastical courts have long been condemned by the universal indignation of society, and it only remains for Parliament to give effect to public opinion by passing the sentence of execution. Maynooth is another question on which a candidate is likely to be catechized by some constituencies. I am conscientiously opposed to secular establishments of religion, and the grant to Maynooth comes within the category. As a question of religious policy, there can, therefore, be no hesitation. But the grant is said to be an act of simple justice to those from whom an income of thirty times the amount has been withdrawn for the support of another creed. How far this claim may be said to over-rule other considerations is a question of some delicacy; and I am prepared to follow the course which is adopted by so many others, and give effect to the general wishes of the constituency. On the question of church-rates, however, there can be no such difficulty. The sooner this course of perpetual irritation is extinguished, the better for the interests of religion and social harmony. Administrative and financial reform have recently been added to the questions of the day. I yield to no one in anxiety to promote both these objects. But it must not be forgotten that a single unsound principle hastily adopted in Parliament, cost the country more than all the salaries in Downing Street. Financial reform must, therefore, begin in the bosom of Parliament itself. The administration of public affairs requires to be strengthened by as large an infusion as possible of that talent which in the walks of private enterprise has made this country what it is. I advocate the principle of perpetual improvement and energetic progression in every department, that while our own domestic institutions are invigorated, Great Britain may be more effectually enabled to perform those important duties which belong to her lofty position as the great agent of improvement among the various uncivilized tribes in all quarters of the globe. The immediate occasion of the present election arises out of the recent events in China, and a new question has thus been brought under discussion. The ministry has been placed in a minority on that question, and it has been referred to the arbitration of the country. Having resided many years in the East, and having acquired some knowledge of the character of orientals, I cannot hesitate to say that the collision which has taken place in China was inevitable. At Canton we were brought in contact with a ruthless and insolent Tartar viceroy, intent upon humbling those whom the Chinese were accustomed to designate the 'outside barbarians.' In the course of two years he has executed 70,000 men, guilty for the most part only of being suspected of favouring the insurgent cause. He has repeatedly insulted our flag and trampled on our treaty rights. It became necessary for the preservation of our vast and increasing commerce at that port, to check this course of aggression, which every fresh instance of submission only serves to aggravate. The British representative in China—the former secretary to the Peace Society in England,—was suddenly called to act in a difficult emergency, and, after his demand for reparation for a fresh insult had been evaded with Chinese duplicity and arrogance, he felt himself constrained to force. In the East, on such occasions, any appearance of hesitation and timidity only serves to beget presumption, and is sure to end in the most fatal consequences. The wisest as well as the most humane policy is that which exhibits energy at the commencement. In these circumstances it is difficult to see what other course Lord Palmerston could have pursued in accordance with the dictates of sound policy, and in justice to our political, naval, and commercial authorities in China than to give them the full support of Government. To have paralysed their efforts in the presence of an insolent and overbearing foe would most seriously have compromised British interests in China, and probably have led to the expulsion of our merchants from all other ports in that empire. If the present election is to be influenced by the question of sustaining Lord Palmerston's policy, or expelling him from office, it would be an act of ingratitude to forget that he has nobly maintained the dignity and interests of England throughout Europe during the late arduous struggle, and that he took charge of the vessel of the state when it was among the breakers, and conducted it safely to port. He is not less entitled to our confidence in the present crisis, and I have no doubt that, if our affairs in China continue to be intrusted to his direction, they will be managed with the same regard to the honour of England, and be brought to the same auspicious issue."

MESSRS. CHEAPE AND LESLIE, an old and respectable firm in the East India trade, have suspended payment.

GENERAL BEATSON.—The Court of Inquiry ordered by the General Commanding-in-Chief on the charges preferred by Colonel Shirley against General Beatson, at the urgent demand of the gallant general, has commenced proceedings at the late offices of the Army Works' Corps in Whitehall-yard. The board of officers is presided over by Lieutenant-General Sir Colin Campbell, G.C.B.

GUANO.—The Government have engaged to station a ship of war at the Guano Islands, in Kooria Moorla Bay (Island of Muscat) in August, and the trade will then be thrown open to all British ships, and be protected by the Government from molestation.

THE LATE MR. DYCE SOMBRE.—A petition was presented to the Lords Justices of Appeal on the 6th inst., from Mrs. Dyce Sombre, the administratrix of the personal estate of her late husband, praying the payment out of court of a sum of money standing in the lunacy, and for the taxation of certain costs. No objection was made on the part of the next of kin and the co-heiresses of Mr. Dyce Sombre. An application was then made on behalf of Mr. Larkins, that before the papers in his hands were delivered over to the committee, they might be examined by the Master in Lunacy, and arranged that those which were of a private nature might be left in Mr. Larkins's hands. Among the papers, almost innumerable, were letters of Mr. Dyce Sombre, the disclosure of which might be painful, and could do no good to any one. Lord Justice Knight Bruce said that the papers were mere wastepaper. Their being given up could do neither good nor harm.

ADVERTISEMENT.

East-India House, 28th January, 1857.

THE COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby GIVE NOTICE,

That a QUARTERLY GENERAL COURT of the said Company will be held at their House, in Leadenhall Street, on WEDNESDAY, the 18th MARCH next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

TO SHIPOWNERS OR PROPRIETORS OF COLLIERIES.

East-India House, 18th February, 1857.

THE COURT of DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY do hereby give notice,

That the Government of BOMBAY are ready to purchase, at reasonable prices, any quantity of COAL which may be offered for sale at that port, provided that such coal be found upon examination to be of good quality and suitable for steam navigation.

JAMES C. MELVILL, Secretary.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.THE COURT of DIRECTORS of the EAST-INDIA COMPANY have lately received from the Government of BENGAL the following Notification, which is published for general information.

A TEMPORARY

LIGHT-SHIP AT THE ENTRANCE OF THE MUTLAH.

A Light-Vessel has been temporarily stationed at the entrance of the river Mutlah, in the following position, viz.:-

In Latitude $21^{\circ} 6'$ North, } nearly,
Longitude $88^{\circ} 48'$ East, in 10 fathoms low water spring tides, about 7 miles South-east of the outer or Bulcherry Reef Buoy.

2nd. This new Floating Light will hoist a Red flag at the Main-mast Head by day, and exhibit a clear White Light from Sunset to Sunrise, and in addition to this, she will, if she continues in her position, fire a rocket at 8 P.M., at Midnight, and at 4 A.M., from the 15th of March until the 16th of October.

3rd. For the present a Pilot Brig will show the light.

By order of the Officiating Superintendent of Marine.

H. HOWE, Secretary.

Fort William, the 9th January, 1857.

Published by Order of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company.

East-India House, 11th March, 1857.

INDIA.—Clergymen, and Members of the Universities, resident in India, who may be desirous of holding the appointment of LOCAL DIRECTORS, are invited to apply for information as to the duties and remuneration, to the Rev. J. E. COX, M.A., Chairman.

TRUSTEES.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Yarborough.

ENGLISH and IRISH CHURCH and UNIVERSITY ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 4, Trafalgar Square, Charing Cross, London.

ESTABLISHED 1841.

MEDICAL, INVALID, and GENERAL LIFE OFFICE, 25, Pall Mall, London.

EMPPOWERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

At the FIFTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING, held on 27th November, 1856, it was shown that on the 30th June last—

The number of Policies in force was 5,738

The Amount Insured was £2,732,197 7s. 2d.

The Annual Income was £118,557 16s. 2d.

Two Bounties have been declared (in 1848 and 1853), adding nearly two per cent. per annum on the average to sums assured, and by which a Policy of £1,000 issued in 1842 on a healthy life, is now increased to £1,260.

Since the last division of Profits in 1853, the accumulated funds have increased by more than £105,000, offering considerable advantages to present assureds.

Profits divided every five years—next division in 1858.

The Society, since its establishment, has paid claims on 651 Policies, amounting to £254,000.

Assurances are effected at home or abroad on healthy lives at as moderate rates as the most recent data will allow.

Indian Assurances at very moderate rates, and great facilities given to assureds.

Invalid Lives assured on scientifically-constructed tables.

Policies issued free of stamp-duty, and every charge but the Premiums.

Agents wanted for vacant places.

Prospectuses, Forms of Proposals, and every other information, may be obtained of the Secretary, at the Chief Office, or on application to any of the Society's Agents in the country.

C. DOUGLAS SINGER, Secretary.

A Bonus of Twenty per cent. from realized profits has been declared for the present year to all policy-holders on the profit scale who have paid five years' premium.

The advantages of this Society are as follow:—

Low Rates of Premium, calculated on the best and most recent investigations of mortality in India.

Annual participation in the profits after payment of premium for five years, by parties assured on the profit scale.

Immediate reduction of premium to the English rates in the case of a party assured proceeding to Europe for a permanency, and reduction after one year in the case of the party visiting Europe for a short period.

The civil rate only charged on the lives of parties in the military service, holding civil offices, as long as they continue in such office.

The Society also grants Deferred Annuities and Endowments payable at any given period.

Tables and full information may be had at the Office in Chatham Place; or on application to the Secretaries at Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or to the Agents of the Agra and United Service Bank, at the other Indian Presidencies.

SEA-SIDE RESIDENCE.—On the West Coast of England (by railway from London).—TO BE LET, furnished or unfurnished, an excellent PRIVATE RESIDENCE, built on an elevated site six years since, commanding beautiful sea and land views, with the use of adjoining pleasure-grounds. The house is in the Elizabethan style, contains twelve rooms, and is in thorough repair. The furniture, which is handsome, may be taken at a valuation, and the house let as unfurnished for a term of years. There is a small unfurnished four-roomed Cottage, immediately attached, which may be used for extra servants, or as play-rooms for children. The Residence is within ten minutes' walk of the church, and twenty minutes of the railway-station.

BROKER—J. S. Walker, Esq., 25, Austinfriars.

Offices—9, Billiter Street, London.

This Company rests its claims to public support on two plain considerations—1st, that the steam companies already navigating the rivers of India are realizing large profits; and 2nd, that the vessels of this Company will, by the aid of improvements to which it has the exclusive right, be able to carry three or four times the quantity of cargo that can be carried by the vessels at present employed. Cheap conveyance is necessary to India to enable the produce of the interior to reach the coast. Of all known means of conveyance, the cheapest is conveyance by water; and railways, even when made, cannot supersede the necessity of navigating the great rivers which will still remain the great arteries of commerce, as has been found to be the case in America, and where experience has shown that railways and river conveyance assist instead of opposing one another. The rivers of India are of vast extent—they flow through the richest parts of the country—and they only require that vessels should be established upon them which shall be capable of carrying a large cargo on a light draught of water to insure results more remunerative than is usual in commercial undertakings.

The calls will not exceed £2 per share every three months, and interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum will be allowed on all calls during construction, and also on shares paid in advance.

Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained from J. S. Walker, Esq., 25, Austinfriars, or from the Secretary at the offices of the Company, 9, Billiter Street, London; but no application will be considered unless accompanied by the receipt of Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co. for 10s. per share on the number of shares applied for. This deposit will be returned in the event of the application not being accepted to.

By order of the Board,

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS, FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

THE First Number of the Overland Newspaper, which is to supersede the CIRCULAR hitherto forwarded to India by Messrs. W. THACKER and CO., was published

ON THE 10TH OF JANUARY, 1857, and will be continued upon the day of the departure of each succeeding Overland Mail.

In entering upon the field of competition with established Journals having the same object in view, it will be required of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. that they should explain on what peculiar ground they lay claim to public support.

Their long and intimate connection with the Anglo-Indian community entitles them to believe that every confidence will be placed in their assurance, that they will endeavour to deserve the preference they seek to obtain; but they are aware, that even amongst their oldest and warmest friends, some practical demonstration of an intention to achieve superiority is expected.

Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. beg, therefore, to state that in their OVERLAND NEWS they propose to aim at a more perfect CONDENSATION of General News than has hitherto been attempted, that they may be enabled to devote a greater portion of their space to COMMERCIAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The peculiar constitution of British Society in India, and the immense impulse that has been given of late years to Railway Speculation, Agricultural Improvement, and Commercial Enterprise in that vast Empire, suggest the importance of a close attention to all these matters, which bear particularly on the interests of the great classes concerned.

From several channels of information, hitherto closed or neglected, the fullest details will therefore be sought.

LITERATURE in all its branches, as bearing essentially on the experience of Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., will receive, as hitherto, the minutest care; and as they have been able to secure the services of a gentleman who moves much in literary circles, occasional items of pleasant gossip, which do not find their way into the public journals, will embellish the pages of the OVERLAND NEWS.

Upon all subjects connected with Indian politics, the interests of the Services, contemplated Local Changes, the arrival in and departure from this country of Passengers, by Ship or Steamer, the retirement of Officers of all classes, &c., the greatest attention will be bestowed; while the intelligence from Europe, of a general nature, will be presented in a striking form, accompanied by such Commentaries as may be expected from the pen of an experienced Journalist.

In a word, Messrs. W. THACKER and Co. hope that their Paper will be all that the best papers have hitherto been—AND SOMETHING MORE.

The Publication will be of the same size as the ordinary English Overland Papers, viz., a folio of Twenty-four pages, with Supplements when necessary, and it will be issued in time for transmission to India by each Fortnightly Mail, via Marseilles. The Price, inclusive of postage, will be Rs. 8 per annum, payable in advance. Orders to be addressed to Messrs. W. THACKER and Co., 87, Newgate Street, London; Messrs. THACKER, SPINK, and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Calcutta; Messrs. THACKER and Co., St. Andrew's Library, Bombay; and Mr. JAMES HILL, Lucknow.

TO GENTLEMEN WITH TENDER FEET.

J. CHAPPELL, 388, STRAND, LONDON, BOOT-MAKER, and Professor of Fitting; Successor to the celebrated Mr. B. Smith, late of Great Queen Street, begs to call the attention of such to his method of measuring, by which he guarantees to produce a PERFECT FIT AT FIRST TRIAL, combining comfort with a gentlemanly form. J. C. particularly solicits those gentlemen who despair of obtaining comfortable Boots, as from his great success and consequent increase of business, he is confident of their becoming regular customers. The leather used is dressed so as not to draw the feet or become hard in wear, although it requires blacking in the ordinary way. Established 1825.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS extraordinarily efficacious in curing Erysipelas.—Mr. Charles Henley, aged 18, of Abingdon, Oxon, suffered with intermittent attacks of this most direful of cutaneous disorders for several years, and had recourse to every known remedy for the cure of the same, but without success. As a dernier resort, he tried Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which were, as usual, signally beneficial, for he was entirely cured in five weeks, to the astonishment of all who had beheld his sufferings, and to the infinite delight of his family and friends.

Sold by all Medicine Vendors, at PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY'S Establishments, 244, Strand, London, and 80, Maiden Lane, New York; by A. Stamp, Constantinople; A. Guidici, Smyrna; E. Muir, Malta; and by all European and Native Vendors of Medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

THE successful results of the last half century have proved beyond question that ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL possesses peculiarly nourishing powers in the growth, restoration, and improvement of the human hair, and when every other specific has failed. This celebrated Oil is now universally acknowledged to be superior to all other preparations for the hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, produces a thick and luxuriant growth, cleanses it from scurf and dandruff, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. Its operation in cases of baldness is peculiarly active; and in the growth of whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios, it is unfailing in its stimulative operations. For children it is especially recommended, as forming the basis of a beautiful head of hair. In dressing the hair nothing can equal its effect, rendering the hair so admirably soft that it will lie in any direction, and imparting a transcendent lustre.—Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

NEW LABEL.—To prevent the substitution of spurious imitations for the genuine article by unprincipled shopkeepers, a new label from steel, by Messrs. Perkins, Bacon, and Co., is now used, upon which are engraved in white letters, the words "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," and the signature of the Proprietors in red ink, "A. ROWLAND & SONS." The whole, with the exception of the profile of her Majesty "the Queen," being covered with a lacwork pattern in transparent colourless ink.

Sold at 20, Hatton Garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

WATCH, CLOCK, and CHRONOMETER MANUFACTORY, 33 AND 34, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON. ESTABLISHED 1740.

J. W. BENSON, MANUFACTURER OF GOLD and SILVER WATCHES of every description, construction, and pattern, invites attention to his magnificent and unprecedented display of Watches, which is admitted to be the largest and best selected Stock in London. It consists of Chronometer, Duplex, Patent Detached Lever, Horizontal, and Vertical Movements, Jewelled, &c., with all the latest improvements, mounted in superbly-finished engine-turned and engraved Gold and Silver Cases. The designs engraved upon many of the cases are by eminent artists, and can only be obtained at this manufactory. If the important requisites, superiority of finish, combined with accuracy of performance, elegance, durability, and reasonableness of price, are wished for, the intending purchaser should visit this Manufactory, or send for the ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, published by J. W. BENSON (and sent post-free on application), which contains sketches, prices, and directions as to what Watch to buy, where to buy it, and how to use it. Several hundred letters have been received from persons who have bought Watches at this Manufactory, bearing testimony to the correct performance of the same. The following extracts from the opinions of the Press will, it is hoped, be a sufficient guarantee to the public that they may secure at this House a good Watch at a reasonable price:—

INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

The increasing importance of the cultivation of the LANGUAGES of the EAST, and the immediate advantages that result from their acquisition, have induced the Principal to make arrangements for affording INSTRUCTION therein.

The rudiments of Hindustani, Persian, and Arabic, will be taught to all who are intended for employment in our Eastern Possessions; and the more advanced Pupils will be prepared for their examination on their arrival in India.

The course of instruction includes not only that which is necessary to pass at Addiscombe or Haileybury, but all that may be requisite for those who are destined to pursue an Indian career.

The history and geography of the country, and the general features of Anglo-Indian life, are taught by a gentleman whose perfect acquaintance with India, from long residence there, peculiarly qualifies him for the duties he has undertaken.

The great advantage to Parents in India of an Institution of this kind must be evident. At a short distance from London, in a proverbially healthy locality, they may place their children from an EARLY AGE under a system from which there need be no departure until their education is completely finished; a class being expressly formed for the matriculation at the University of London, wherein they may matriculate at sixteen years of age, and graduate two years after that time.

Prospectuses, with full particulars, may be had on application to the Rev. J. A. EMERTON, D.D., Hanwell College, Middlesex.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE present mail brings intelligence of a signal victory obtained near the small town of Khooshab, by the British expedition under General Outram, over the Persian forces commanded by Soojah-ool-Molk. General Outram landed at Bushire on the 27th January, and having ascertained that the Persians were about to make an attempt to recapture the place, the British commander resolved to anticipate the attack, and at once to offer them battle. The British troops consisted of the 3rd cavalry, the Poonah Horse, the 64th foot, the 2nd European light infantry, the 78th Highlanders, the sappers and miners, the 20th Native infantry, the 4th rifles, the 26th Native infantry, the Beloochees, 3rd troop horse-artillery, and the 3rd and 5th light field-batteries—numbering in the aggregate 419 cavalry, 2,212 European infantry, 2,022 Native infantry, and 18 pieces of artillery. On the 3rd February this force quitted Bushire, and marching in a north-easterly direction, reached Boorazjoon, the site of the Persian encampment, on the 5th. Boorazjoon is distant forty-six miles from Bushire. On hearing of the approach of the British, the enemy withdrew from their intrenchments, and retreated to the mountains, carrying off their guns, but abandoning their stores and a large quantity of ammunition. The latter being destroyed by the British, General Outram, after occupying for two days the position evacuated by the enemy, prepared to retrace his steps to Bushire, carrying with him the stores of flour, rice, and grain, which the Persian government had collected for their army. During the return march, which commenced on the evening of the 7th February, an attempt was made by the Persians to throw our men into confusion by a night attack of cavalry. General Outram ordered a general halt, and so formed his troops as to protect the baggage and resist the charge in whatever direction it might be made. In the mean time, four of the enemy's guns were opened upon our force, but the darkness of the night precluded any attempt to capture them. At daybreak on the 8th, the Persian force, mustering between 6,000 and 7,000 strong, with the pieces of artillery, was discovered at the village of Khooshab, east of the line of march, and close to the village of

ARRIVAL OF MAILS.

Khooshab. The British force without hesitation advanced rapidly to the attack. Two separate charges of cavalry were made with great gallantry and success, and the fire of the artillery caused fearful execution. Upon these two arms indeed the whole brunt of the battle may be said to have fallen, as the enemy's retreat was too rapid to allow the infantry to participate in the contest. By ten o'clock the rout of the Persians was complete, their loss amounting to 700 killed. The number of their wounded could not be ascertained, as they had been carried off; but it must have been considerable. The defeated force fled in great disorder, leaving the field strewn with their arms. The loss of the British did not exceed 10 killed and 62 wounded. Lieutenant A. C. Frankland, of the 2nd European regiment; and acting brigade-major of cavalry, we regret to state, was among the former. Among the officers wounded were Captain J. Forbes, 3rd light cavalry; Captain R. Mockler, her Majesty's 64th; Lieutenant J. Greentree, of the same regiment; Ensign Woodcock, 2nd European regiment light infantry; and Assistant-Surgeon J. M. Barnett, of the 26th native infantry. The wounds of the two last-mentioned officers were slight; those of the remaining three are stated to have been far more severe. On this occasion the credit of guiding the British troops to victory is due to Major-General Stalker and Colonel Lugard; General Outram having been placed hors de combat, by being stunned, from the falling of his horse at the commencement of the contest, and recovering only in time to resume his command shortly before the close of the action. After a brief absence of one week, during which these brilliant results were achieved, the British force returned to their quarters at Bushire on the 10th February.

From China we learn that no further active operations had taken place beyond those described in our last issue, with the exception of an attack upon the Chinese war-junks in the Canton river. We transcribe the details of this affair from the Hong-Kong Overland Register of the 15th February last:—

The Barracouta on her way up the river saw a large fleet of junks cruising in the river between Second bar and the Bogue; the Niger was sent down on Monday to give an account of them. The Barracouta seemed, however, to have frightened them back into the creeks in the neighbourhood. As the Niger could do nothing but try her guns at long ranges, she returned and reported her want of success. The admiral judging that the Chinese would think, that as the two steamers had been down without being able to do anything, they would have the river clear and come out again, sent the Hornet down. On Tuesday this vessel, in company with the Hongkong, caught the Chinese fleet in the broad way of the river with a strong ebb-tide. The steamers had been descried, and the junks were sailing and pulling to get up the creek. A bar at the mouth prevented their escape, and about seventy junks got jammed in the mouth of the creek, unable, owing to the state of the tide, to get up further. Seeing they could do nothing in the way of escape, they commenced firing on the Hornet. This vessel quietly steamed up to within six or seven hundred yards, then anchored by the stern, and opened upon the junks. The fire was so rapid and effective, that the Chinese shortly deserted their guns, and such as could, landed, and fled across the paddy-fields. The tide continuing to make, the larger number of the junks managed to escape up the creek—one junk, the vessel of the Chinese admiral, which had grounded, was captured with all her flags flying, and towed up to Canton. The slaughter must have been very great, as the junks were completely jammed in the mouth of the creek, and every shot of the steamers told; the Hornet having fired upwards of 350 shots, and the Hongkong having expended her total allowance of ammunition.

Up to the 15th February, Admiral Seymour was at Hong-Kong, waiting the arrival of reinforcements. The first instalment of troops, consisting of a small detachment from the 29th and 38th regiments of Madras native infantry, had arrived from Penang and Singapore, on the 1st January.

A-lum, the baker, who had been arrested on suspicion of attempting to poison the European community of the island, by mixing arsenic with his bread, was arraigned before Chief-Justice Hulme, on the 2nd February, to answer the charge. The trial extended over five days, and resulted in a verdict of "Not Guilty," by a majority of five jurors to one. The jury consisted of Messrs. M. A. Macleod, W. H. Sutton, John Lemon, W. A. Bowra, E. T. Duncanson, and George Lyall. No small degree of surprise and disappointment appears to have been excited by the verdict. The Overland Register observes:—

"The crime is now laid to the charge of two absconding foremen, who, for anything we see that could be brought against them, might return and take their trial, in all confidence that the black deed could be proved by no evidence that would satisfy a jury of this place. There is one consolatory point of view in this bad business; it is the fact that the English public are not bloodthirsty, and that an English jury will do what it believes to be its duty, even although that duty may run counter, not only to outside prejudice, but even to the opinion of the judge on the bench. In that view the trial is a great triumph."

The three Presidencies have been thrown into a state of excitement in consequence of the contemplated law reforms under which Europeans in India will be subjected to the jurisdiction of the East-India Company's Criminal Courts. At Calcutta a public meeting had been held, at which it was resolved to petition both Houses of Parliament against those clauses of the new penal code now pending before the Legislative Council, the object of which is to place all persons, without respect to birth, nationality, religion, or colour, on an equality with regard to the criminal laws of India as administered in the Company's courts beyond the limits of the presidency towns. Similar petitions have emanated from the Native Association of Madras, and the Native Association at Bombay was about to follow in the same track,—all three, says the Madras Athenæum, dreading the extinction of the Supreme Courts, consequent upon their amalgamation with the Company's chief courts at the three capitals. The Madras Exhibition was opened on the 16th February by Lord Harris, with all the éclat which royal salutes and military pageantry could confer.

Vague rumours were afloat at Bombay that the Emperor of China disapproved of the policy of his viceroy Yeh, and had enjoined that functionary to conclude peace with the English on any terms.

From the Bombay Telegraph and Courier we learn that an insurrection had broken out in Burnah. The following are the particulars, as extracted from the Moulmein Advertiser, dated the 27th January last:—

"Shoag Gheen, 27th Jan. 1857.—Further information has been brought in from the camp. The village of Kyoukyee has been burnt down by the rebels during the absence of the detachment in the interior in search of the chief. Of the four wounded, as stated in my last, two are Europeans of H.M.'s 35th regiment and two sepoy. The names of the two Europeans are Sergeant McAuslin and Private Johnstone. Two sepoy of the 18th were shot dead. Sergeant McAuslin died on the night of his arrival (the 25th), and was buried yesterday with all military honours. The following return of casualties was brought in by Lieut. Watson:—

“Lieut. Pohle, of H.M.’s 35th, wounded in the forehead slightly. Lieut. Sladen, asst. commr. Sittang, got a poisoned spear through his arm, and is dangerously ill from the effects of it. Dr. Demster shot in the knee very severely. Two European soldiers of H.M.’s 35th regiment shot dead, and one severely wounded: these three men were the only ones that wore the Punjab medal in the detachment here.

“10 sepoys of the 18th N.I. wounded.

“On the enemy’s side the casualties are very small.”

THE DELHI BANK has held its half-yearly meeting. The report was very favourable, and the auditors certified that the operations are very efficiently conducted, that Lucknow is a highly encouraging field, and other items of praise. Ten per cent. dividend was declared by the shareholders; everything arranged as the managers wished, and Colonel James Ramsay has been elected a trustee in room of Colonel Barlow, resigned. The profit arising out of the operations is the gross sum of nearly a lakh and a half, from which a net sum of Rs. 116,458-4-10 remained to be disposed of by the proprietary—admitting, at the superior limit, of a dividend at 13 per cent. Carrying 1 per cent. of this to the reserves against a wet day would increase that fund to one of almost nine per cent. on the present capital of twenty lakhs. Out of 398 new shares created, 352 were subscribed and paid for, and a premium of 7 per cent. (realized upon the sale of the 46 remaining) was paid as a bonus to their proprietors who could not take up any of the new creations. Mr. Parry has conducted the branch at Lucknow, so as to realize all the expectations which induced a venture in that quarter, and this success has led to a fresh venture at Kurrachee.

INDIGO.—In some of the Madras districts indigo is cut, dried, and stacked like hay, and manufactured at leisure. The quality of the indigo so produced is inferior; but this is not necessarily a consequence of the mode of manufacture. Any process which would enable the planter to wait without spoiling his crop would be of the greatest advantage to the trade.

POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has the highest satisfaction in publishing, for general information, the following despatch received from Lieut.-General Sir James Outram, K.C.B., commanding the Persian expeditionary force, dated February 10, 1857, announcing a decisive victory, obtained on the 8th of the same month, by the British forces over the Persian army at Khoosh-ab.

The Right Hon. the Governor in Council directs that a royal salute be fired from the garrison of Bombay at noon this day, in honour of this victory.

By order of the Right Hon. the Governor in Council.

H. L. ANDERSON,
Secretary to Government.

Bombay Castle, March 3, 1857.

From Lieut.-General Sir James Outram, K.C.B., commanding expeditionary force, to His Excellency Lieut.-General Sir H. Somerset, K.C.B. and K.H., Commander-in-Chief, Bombay.

Camp, near Bushire, Feb. 10, 1857.

SIR,—I have the honour to report, for your Excellency’s information, that the Persian expeditionary force obtained a signal victory over the Persian army, commanded by Shooja-ool-Moolk in person, on the 8th instant.

2. The enemy’s loss in killed and wounded must have been very great. It is impossible to compute the exact amount, but from the number of bodies which strewed the ground of contest, extending several miles, I should say that full 700 must have fallen. Two brass 9-pounder guns, with their carriages and horses, eight mules laden with ammunition, and several hundred stand of arms, were taken; and the Persian commander-in-chief, with the remainder of his army, only escaped annihilation owing to the numerical weakness of our cavalry.

3. The loss on our side is, I am happy to say, comparatively small, attributable, I am inclined to believe, to the rapid advance of our artillery and cavalry, and the well-directed fire of the former, which almost paralyzed the Persians from the commencement. I have, however, to regret the loss of Lieutenant Frankland, 2nd European regiment, who was acting as brigade major of cavalry, and was killed in the first cavalry charge; Captain Forbes, also, who commanded and most gallantly led the 3rd cavalry, and Lieutenant Greentree, 64th foot, were severely wounded.

4. Returns of the killed and wounded, and also of the ordnance stores taken, are annexed (A, B, C).

5. I myself had little to do with the action, being stunned by my horse falling with me at the commencement of the contest, and recovering only in time to resume my place at the head of the army shortly before the close of this action.

6. To Major General Stalker, and Colonel Lugard, chief of the staff, is the credit due for successfully guiding our troops to victory on this occasion.

7. The circumstances preceding this satisfactory termination of a brief but arduous campaign I now proceed to detail for your Excellency’s information.

8. On the 27th ultimo I landed at Bushire, and assumed the command of the army. The vast preparations of the Persian Government for the recovery of Bushire then came to my knowledge. Shooja-ool-Moolk, who commands the Persian troops, had assembled a force, said to amount to 8,500, and subsequently found to be as per margin,* at the town of Burazjoon, forty-six miles distant from Bushire, and entrenched his position. This army was well supplied with food and ammunition, of which considerable magazines had been collected. It was intended that this force should form the nucleus of a very large army to be assembled for the recapture of Bushire.

9. The 1st brigade, 2nd division, which arrived on the 31st ultimo and 1st instant, was landed by the 2nd, and, on the evening of the 3rd, the troops, as per margin,† marched from this camp without tents or extra clothing of any sort, each man carrying his great coat, blanket, and two days' cooked provisions, the commissariat being provided with three days' in addition; the protection of the camp and town of Bushire being duly provided for by a detachment of troops under the command of Lieut.-col. Shephard, reinforced by a party of seamen from all the ships in the harbour, which the senior naval officer was so good as to place at my disposal.

10. After a march of forty-six miles in forty-one hours, during which the troops were exposed to the worst of weather, cold nights, and deluging storms of rain, they reached the enemy's entrenched position on the afternoon of the 5th, and found it abandoned; the enemy, on hearing of our approach, had evacuated his entrenchments the previous night so precipitately that his tents and camp equipage and ordnance magazines were left behind. The former were being rapidly carried off by village plunderers operating for some hours before we arrived. I endeavoured to intercept the retreat of some of the "Eilkhanee's" horse, who had held the camp during the night, and were still in sight, and a little skirmishing took place, but eventually they made off.

11. The enemy having succeeded in withdrawing their guns to the strong passes, where I did not deem it prudent to follow them, and being satisfied with the moral effect of our occupying their position for two days, I decided upon moving the troops back to Bushire. The return march was accordingly commenced on the night of the 7th, first destroying their magazines, found to contain about 40,000lbs. of powder, with small-arm ammunition, and a vast quantity of shot and shell, and carrying away large stores of flour, rice, and grains, which the Persian Government had been collecting for a long time past for their army; thereby effectually crippling their future operations. Some of their guns are supposed to have been cast into wells, and as their wheels and axles fell into our hands, it will be impossible they can be used again for the present.

12. At midnight an attack was made upon the rear guard by the enemy's horse, and parties threatened the line of march on every side. The troops were halted, and so formed as to protect the baggage, and resist the horsemen in whatever direction they might attempt to charge. Four of the enemy's guns of heavy metal opened their fire upon the column, whilst the darkness of the night prevented any steps being taken to capture them.

13. I should here state that, on abandoning their position, Shooja-ool-Moolk, with his force, had taken the direct road to Shiraz by the "Moak" Pass, and the Eilkhanee, with his horse, had retired by the one leading to the "Huft Moolla;" and from information subsequently received, I learn that they had planned a combined attack on our camp the night we marched. Indeed, the explosion of their magazines gave them the first intimation of our departure, when they hastened after us in the expectation of being able to attack us on the line of march, and possibly create confusion and panic in the dark.

14. At daybreak the Persian force, amounting to between 6,000 and 7,000 men, with some guns, was discovered on our left rear (north-east of our line of march) in order of battle.

15. Our artillery and cavalry at once moved rapidly to the attack, supported by two lines of infantry, a third protecting the baggage. The firing of the artillery was most excellent, and did great execution; the cavalry brigade twice charged with great gallantry and success; a standard (of the Kashkai regular infantry regiment) was captured by the Poona horse, and the 3rd light cavalry charged a square, and killed nearly the whole regiment; indeed, upon the cavalry and artillery fell the whole brunt of the action, as the enemy moved away too rapidly for the infantry to overtake them. By ten o'clock the defeat of the Persians was complete; two guns were captured, the gun ammunition, laden upon mules, fell into our hands, and at least 700 men lay dead upon the field. The number of wounded could not be ascertained, but it must have been very large. The remainder fled in a disorganized state, generally throwing away their arms, which strewed the field in vast numbers, and nothing but the paucity of our cavalry prevented their total destruction, and the capture of the remaining guns.

16. The troops bivouaced for the day close to the battle-field, and at night accomplished a march of 20 miles (by another route) over a country rendered almost impassable by the heavy rain, which fell incessantly. After a rest of six hours, the greater portion of the infantry continued their march to Bushire, which they reached before midnight; thus performing another most arduous march of 44 miles, under incessant rain, besides fighting and defeating the enemy during its progress, within the short period of fifty hours. The cavalry and artillery reached camp this morning.

17. The result is most satisfactory, and will, I trust, have a very beneficial effect upon our future operations.

18. The greatest praise is due to the troops of all arms for their steadiness and gallantry in the field, their extraordinary exertions on the march, and their cheerful endurance of fatigue and privation, under circumstances rendered doubly severe by the inclemency of the weather, to which they were exposed without shelter of any kind; and I cannot too strongly express the obligation I feel to all under my command for the almost incredible exertions they have undergone, and the gallantry they have displayed on this occasion.

19. To Major-General Stalker and to Colonel Lugard my especial thanks are due.

20. To the heads of the several departments, as well as to every officer belonging to those departments, and to my personal staff (including Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Dunkellen, who volunteered his services as aide-de-camp) I am much indebted; from all I received every possible assistance; and although I do not now specify by name the departmental and personal staff and other officers alluded to, I shall hereafter take an opportunity of bringing them individually to your Excellency's notice. Indeed, when all have behaved so nobly, it is difficult to specify individuals.

21. The rapid retreat of the enemy afforded but little opportunity for deeds of special gallantry. I have already alluded to the successful charges made by the 3rd Cavalry and Poona Horse, under Captain Forbes and Lieutenant-Colonel Tapp, and to the very efficient service performed by the artillery under Lieutenant-Colonel Trevelyan. The brigadiers commanding the Infantry Brigades,—Wilson, Stisted, and Honner,—with the several commanding officers of regiments, and indeed every officer and soldier of the Force, earned my warmest approbation.

22. To the medical officers of the Force I am under great obligation for their untiring exertions throughout these arduous operations.

23. I cannot conclude without alluding in strong terms to the valuable assistance I have received from Major Taylor, whose services were placed at my disposal by the Hon. C. A. Murray, C.B.

I have the honour to be, &c.

The following is the return of Ordnance captured on the morning of the 8th instant, at Bivouac Khoosh-ab:—

One brass gun, Persian inscription, vent good, 9-pounder, length 6 feet, bore 4.2, of Persian manufacture.

One ditto ditto, spiked, 9-pounder, length 6 feet, bore 4.2, of Persian manufacture.

These guns are in good travelling order, mounted on travelling field carriages, each limber fitted with a limber box to contain about thirty rounds of ammunition. One gun was taken with three horses, harness, &c. complete.

The carriages are of block trail constructions; the cheeks of one require to be replaced.

Eighteen rounds of ammunition and some food were in the limber boxes.

Besides the above were 262 rounds of gun ammunition, which I destroyed before leaving the Bivouac on Sunday evening. The mules, eight in number, which carried it, I have brought into camp. I have 350 stand of arms, and I think fully treble that number must have been taken by camp followers and others.

One gun was spiked by our horse artillery, as they had to leave it when following on in pursuit. I have since removed the spike.

(Signed) B. K. FINNIMORE, Captain,

Field Commissary of Ordnance P. E. F. F.

The following is the return of Ordnance stores found in the enemy's entrenched position at Bórazjoon, on the 5th instant:—

3,500 gun cartridges attached to 12, 6, 3, and 1½ lb. shot; cartridges broken up and exploded in the mine on the 7th instant, shot scattered.*

600,000 musket ball cartridges; 15,000 broken up, and balls brought on by Ordnance Department; remainder destroyed by mine, 7th instant.

10 casks of flints (English); given to the troops.

5,000 fuzes, exploded by the mines, 7th instant.

20lbs. quickmatch do. do.

400 yds. slowmatch do. do.

1,000 portfires do. do.

3 trumpets, given to the troops.

* Cartridges and powder exploded in the mine amount together to about 40,000 lbs.

20 tents, given to the troops; part were brought away, the remainder destroyed.

12 wheels, given to the troops for firewood.

A large quantity in bags, exact amount not known:—

Sulphur, destroyed by the mines, 7th instant.

Indigo do. do.

Saltpetre do. do.

Tar do. do.

Charcoal, given to the troops for cooking.

Rope, destroyed by the mines on the 7th instant.

Dragrope do. do.

Wood, given to troops for cooking.

74 pigs of lead, brought into camp by ordnance department.

7 Brass nave boxes do. do.

10,000 lbs. gunpowder, exploded in the mines, 7th instant.

A large quantity of iron, distributed among batteries and troops.

Red orpiment, destroyed by the mines, 7th instant.

Field Commissary of Ordnance.

BENGAL.

THE CALCUTTA AND DACCA ROAD.

The Government has published somewhat tardily Lieut. Greathed's report on the road from Calcutta to Dacca. It is accompanied by some statistics of trade, and the report and the tables together furnish a curious illustration of Bengal as it is. Dacca is 171 miles from Calcutta, or less than the distance of Liverpool from London. With its neighbouring districts it has a trade of not less than two millions sterling. The whole of that trade passes through Calcutta as its port of export. The income of every planter, the profits of every merchant depend upon rapid and continuous communication with the capital. Yet there is no road between the two points. There is a track which, as far as Jessore, may in fine weather and under favourable circumstances be made use of. Beyond that point, however, it is a mere earthen causeway, unmetalled, and for six months of the year totally impassable. It is usually only twelve feet broad. At one point the road is laid five feet under water by every inundation. The cultivators for thirty-four miles have a habit of protecting themselves from the water by cutting the road. Throughout the line, the great rivers, some of them 1,200 feet across, are still unbridged.

Traffic, of course, is nearly impossible. Even the post, which is still carried by runners and in boats, only achieve a rate of 2½ miles an hour, and this, as Mr. Greathed quietly remarks, is "not susceptible of improvement." Produce is sent down to Calcutta by the river route through the Sunderbunds, a voyage not seldom occupying six weeks. In addition to freight, which on indigo rises to 9-35 pie, or more than a penny per mile, for river traffic, there is a risk estimated at from five to ten per cent., a rate which in Europe would almost put a stop on any business not practically a monopoly. When these expenses have been added, "the cost of transport of indigo is no less than 10 annas 10-6 pie, or 1s. 3½d. per ton per mile; of safflower, 3 annas 7-8 pie, or 5½d. per ton per mile; and of rice, 6-35 pie per ton per mile."

It is useless to attempt to gloss over or smooth away a statement such as this; it is simply an instance of the utter and most disgraceful neglect with which we have hitherto treated the communications of Bengal. These districts are the richest in the country; they contribute ½2 per cent. of the total exports of Bengal. Dacca pays five a year on the import of salt alone. Yet there has been not only no effort to make a broad permanent causeway, but no special trouble to keep up the embankment which does exist. Imagine a peasantry with a "habit" of breaching the Great North Road to let the water out! Quarter Sessions are not usually very active bodies, but they would exert more care in such a case than magistrates and collectors appear to have done. It is useless to plead expense. Captain Greathed's estimate is only 23 lakhs, or a sum the interest of which would be just one-fourth the revenue derived from the sale of salt to Dacca.

It is useless, however, to lament the past. The only subject worth investigation, is the remedy proposed. It is in brief to repair the road from Calcutta to Jessore, and then wait with patience for the railway. That railway, however, will at first only reach Jessore, and the remainder of the route is therefore unblest even with a hope. Surely, if the expenditure on public works is to continue, a portion might be directed to this neglected line of country. The mere loss in risk incurred during the next three years, will actually be in excess of the outlay required. If the railway is resolved on, the temporary bridges might be of wood. They will last five years at any rate, and even that perishable form of structure is a great deal cheaper than no structure at all.

Lieut. Greathed's report throws a strong light on the expediency of constructing a railway upon this eastern route. It confirms the opinion we have before expressed, that though profitable it will scarcely be constructed for £10,000 a mile. The line to Raneeunge has cost that, and there is no part of that road where the embankment must for miles be thirteen feet high, nor are there three rivers, exclusive of the Ganges, each above 800 feet in breadth. The trade, however, would pay for any expenditure in construction. Take, for instance, the following return from Serajunge alone:—

The whole of which pays a freight of at least five per cent. ad valorem, in the shape of risk. And this, be it remembered, is the return from one mart alone. Supposing the line to cost double the estimate of £2,520,000, the amount here returned would yield, at a penny a ton a mile, Rs. 18,81,000, or 6½ per cent. upon the total outlay. It would yield, too, at once. There is no traffic to be created. It is there already, even now able to endure a long and expensive river voyage. Mr. Greathed says there are no data upon which to estimate the amount of passenger-traffic a railway would attract. Possibly not, but it seems sufficiently clear that with such a trade there must be passengers, and few or many the receipts from this source would be in excess of the sum required for an English dividend.—Friend of India.

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 26 arrived at Calcutta Feb. 13 (per Alma.)

THE DISAFFECTION AMONG THE SEPOYS AT BARRACKPORE.—The disaffection among the sepoys at Barrackpore is becoming serious, and owes its origin, we have no doubt, to some more adequate cause than the manner in which the cartridges are supposed to be made, which we look upon as a mere pretence put forward by the sepoys to cover their real designs. We trust Government will at once put its heel upon the neck of the embryo mutiny, and crush it in the womb, as Sir Charles Napier would have done, had he been to the fore, and Sir Edward Paget too, who, it will be remembered, took rather sharp measures with the old 47th in this very place. One regiment at Barrackpore, especially, is inclined to be impertinent just now, to use a mild expression, and it would be well if the general were to remind these grenadiers of the fate of the 2nd Cavalry, the old 34th and 66th regiments, to say nothing yet of the 47th before mentioned.—Bengal Hurkaru, Feb. 9.

Two of the local regiments lately raised in Oude have volunteered for service in Persia.

MAHOMEDAN CONVERTS.—On Dec. 28, 1856, at Calcutta, Dr. Duff admitted five adults by baptism into the Christian Church—three Mohomedans, one Hindu young man from the Missionary Institution, and one Hindu female. The Mohammedans were brought to a knowledge of the truth by the zealous and indefatigable labours of a native preacher Behari Lal Singh.

A MR. LARBURY, a clerk employed in the office of inspector of jails in the Punjab, is, after an unprecedented delay of nearly fourteen months, about to be committed to the Supreme Court. The prisoner is accused of having abstracted a sum of money from a bag entrusted to his care. The witnesses, Dr. Cameron, Mr. Bryan, and others, were to leave Lahore on the 5th of February on their way to Calcutta. The prosecution will cost the Government some Rs. 8,000 or 10,000.

THE MAHARAJA OF GWALIOR is on a visit to the Governor-General. A large Durbar will be held and various festivities consequent on the occasion are in prospect.

THE GOVERNMENT SAVINGS BANK.—It is said that a rule is to be introduced to prohibit depositors at the Government savings bank to draw money, unless they give some days' notice of their intention.

MR. D. MACKINLAY, of the firm of Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co., was yesterday elected a director of the bank of Bengal, in the room of Mr. W. McAdam Stewart, resigned.

HOWRAH DOCKS.—The Peninsula and Oriental Company has, it is understood, purchased the Union Docks at Howrah from the executors to the estate of the late Mr. Reeves for Rs. 3,60,000, equal, at the exchange of the day, to 40,000*l*. Mr. McNicol, we are informed, is to superintend the establishment.

OPENING THE RAILWAY AT ALLAHABAD.—On the 2nd Feb. the railway from Allahabad to Bhurwarree, a distance of twenty-eight miles, was opened by the Lieutenant-Governor of the N.W. Provinces.

THE TRIAL OF THE FIVE BURMESE for killing a boat's crew on one of the Coco islands terminated with their conviction on Saturday, and a more romantic and extraordinary story never engaged a court of justice.

SIR HENRY LAURENCE will, it is stated, become Chief Commissioner of Oude; and Mr. Coverley Jackson, Resident at Hyderabad.

THE LIFE OF THE ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL is said to have been imperilled by the inconsiderate folly of a griffin residing at the advocate-general's house. The administrator-general and his assistant were seated at business together, when a pistol ball passed between them, at a distance of not more than four inches from the head of the administrator-general. It had been fired at a tom-cat indulging in a siesta outside the window. Not content with this exploit the same young gentleman performed a similar feat on the other side of the house, to the imminent peril of a young lady.

THE DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION has appointed Messrs. H. Woodrow, W. Brennard, and W. Lawler to be members of a committee to examine candidates for employment and promotions in the educational department at Dacca.

SMALL POX.—A severe outbreak of small pox in Calcutta is reported. No less than 25 cases have been admitted into the Medical College Hospital in the week. A temporary Small Pox Hospital is to be opened at once.

THE AGRA AND UNITED SERVICE BANK has declared a dividend at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, or 25 rupees per share for the half-year ending 30th Dec. last. Rs. 1,18,602-5-9 have been carried to the credit of the Reserve Fund.

THE BRITISH BARQUE Fattel Gallel, Captain Pattinson, was wrecked off Pahang early in December on her voyage from Bangkok to Singapore. The captain and seven men were unfortunately drowned. Mr. Thompson, the chief mate, with the rest of the crew, succeeded in getting safe ashore, but with the loss of everything save the clothes they had on at the time of the wreck.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

REGIMENTAL BANDS.

Fort William, Feb. 6, 1857.—With reference to Government General Order, No. 1504, of the 5th December, 1856, publishing modifications in the rules laid down for the establishment and maintenance of bands of music, in the several regiments of cavalry and infantry in the armies of the three presidencies. The Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council is further pleased to direct that the band donations of majors and lieutenant-colonels of cavalry and infantry, on promotion to the grades of lieutenant-colonel and colonel respectively, shall be payable to the regiment to which they may be first posted in the higher rank, and not to the corps from which they may have been promoted.

CHITTAGONG AND TIPPERAH.

Fort William, Home Department, Feb. 12, 1857.—Under the provisions of act No. XXI. of 1836, the Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council is pleased to alter the limits of zillah Chittagong and zillah Tipperah, by taking the island of Hutteah from the former and adding it to the latter.

THE JAMMOORKAUDI SUB-DIVISION.

Feb. 14, 1857.—The Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to establish a new sub-division, consisting of the thannahs Bhurtpore, Gokurn, and Govindpore, alias Sherpore, in the district of Moorshedabad, with its head-quarters at Jammuorkaudi, to be called the Jammuorkaudi sub-division.

COURT-MARTIAL.

LIEUT. ROBERT WILLIAM GIBBS, 72ND N.I.

Adjutant-General's Office, Meerut, Feb. 7, 1857.—At a general court-martial assembled at Meerut on Wednesday, Jan. 14, 1857, Lieut. R. W. Gibbs, 72nd N.I., was arraigned on the following charges:—

1st. For having, at Agra, on Nov. 25, 1856, without sufficient cause, failed to appear at the place appointed for the parade of the regimental guards, and neglected to march them off as subaltern officer of the day, a duty for which he had been previously warned to attend.

2nd. For conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Agra, on Nov. 26, 1856, been in a state of intoxication in his quarters, and thereby been unable to attend at his commanding officer's quarters, although he had been previously warned to attend.

3rd. For conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, and unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Agra, on Nov. 28, 1856, by previous intoxication, produced delirious excitement, and thereby rendered it necessary to place him under the control of a party of European soldiers.

4th. For having, at Agra, on Nov. 28, 1856, when under arrest for the misconduct stated in the first and second charges, before being set at liberty by proper authority, broken his arrest by proceeding to the mess-room of his regiment.

Finding.—Of the 1st charge, Guilty.

Of the 2nd charge, Guilty.

Of the 3rd charge, Guilty.

Of the 4th charge, Not Guilty; and the Court do acquit him thereof.

Sentence.—To be severely reprimanded, and, in addition, to lose three steps in the list of lieutenants of his regiment.

Confirmed.

(Signed) GEORGE ANSON, General,
Commander-in-Chief, East Indies.

Futtehghur, Feb. 1, 1857.

Remarks by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India.—The Commander-in-Chief has confirmed this sentence, but cannot give it his approval. The misconduct of the prisoner merited a far severer punishment than has been awarded; but General Anson will not now call upon the Court to revise their sentence, trusting that the deep contrition expressed by Lieut. Gibbs is sincere, and that he has still sufficient self-command to carry out his good intentions, and wean himself from the degrading and ungentelemanly habit that has so nearly proved his ruin. The Commander-in-Chief observes that it was attempted to be shown that no breach of arrest was committed by Lieut. Gibbs, because the mess-room to which he proceeded is in the same house in which he occupied apartments. This however made his proceeding there no less an offence; and it was equally prohibited to Lieut. Gibbs to leave his own quarters and enter the mess-room, as it would have been had he proceeded, without his arrest being enlarged, from apartments occupied by him in a barrack to a mess-room situated in the same building. The Court correctly acquitted Lieut. Gibbs of the 4th charge, on the ground that he was delirious at the time of breaking his arrest, and therefore not a responsible agent.

The name of Lieut. Gibbs is to be transposed in the list of lieutenants of the 72nd Regiment of Native Infantry, and in future will stand next below that of Lieut. Hugh Pigot Williams.

MADRAS.

THE LONDON MAIL of Jan. 26 arrived at Madras March 1, en route to Calcutta (per Bentlnck).

THE MOPLAHS—The Spectator has the following:—"We learn, on good authority, that the Moplahs are just now in a state of agitation, which requires the serious attention of Government. The state of things in their district is reported to be most unsatisfactory."

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—The dividend for the half-year ending Dec. 31, 1856, is Rs. 25 per share, being at the rate of 5 per cent annuum on the capital stock of the Bank of Madras, and was payable at Madras on and after the 12th Jan.

THE BACHELORS' BALL.—The bachelors gave their ball in the month of Feb. at the Masonic Hall. A long avenue of illuminations led up to the entrance. All round the building there was a brilliant light emitted by what appeared to us to be a string of fire-balloons. This rendezvous of the Madras Masons is one story in height. The upper and the lower floor consist of one long handsome room each. Opposite to the entrance to the ball-room the considerate bachelors had placed a thermantidote, which kept up a continuous stream of cool air upon the dancers. The band was in the balcony, to which it had access by a ladder. The supper was a stand-up one, capital in its material, and remarkably well served. The company numbered between two and three hundred.

THE MADRAS REGIMENTS EMPLOYED IN CHINA DURING THE LAST CHINA WAR.—It may be interesting if we mention the Madras regiments which were employed in China during the last war. At the commencement of hostilities, if we are not mistaken, the 37th Grenadiers was in China, but was relieved when the army was formed. The Madras regiments sent out were the 2nd, 6th, 14th, 39th, and 41st. The rifle company of the 36th was in China when the war began, and remained there throughout the contest. The A, B, and F companies of the sappers and miners were also despatched, as well as the C troop of horse artillery, the B and C companies of the 2nd, and the D company of the 3rd battalions of artillery. After the war, the 4th N.I. was one of the relieving corps and the 42nd another.—Spectator, Feb. 24.

MILITARY ON-DUTY.—Cannore, 20th January.—The 11th N.I. has arrived from Secunderabad. Officers present with the corps are as follows: Major Ireland, Captains Halsted and Fallerton, Lieuts. Pedler, Norie, Armstrong, and Sherman, Ensign Elliott, Lieut. and Adj. Girdlestone, Lieut. and Quartermaster Lampan, and Asst.-surg. H. Crocker. Lieut. West with one company of the corps marched from Yelwall (in Mysore), on the arrival of the regiment there, to Manantoddy (in Wynaad), for the relief of Lieut. Drury's detachment of the 20th N.I. on outpost duty there.—The 20th N.I. on the 19th leave en route to the French Rocks. Lieut. Berwick of this corps has applied for furlough to Europe.—Capt. Baynes (3rd L.I.), superintendent of cadets at Palaveram (in Madras), has been ordered to join the corps.—A detachment of the 35th N.I. from Hurryhur, Capt. Sandys, arrived at Sirce on the 13th January, for the relief of Lieut. Cox's detachment. The latter left Sirce on the 15th to rejoin regimental head-quarters.—The Bangalore Herald says:—"We have gained additional particulars regarding the attack on the recruits of H. M.'s 43rd regt. by robbers, between this and Vellore. We now learn that only three men were attacked, and that one of them was severely wounded, not by having his abdomen ripped open, as we mentioned, but by receiving a severe blow with a club on his head, which felled him to the ground."—The 19th N.I. from Vellore is encamped a few miles from Bangalore.

COURTS MARTIAL.

SURGEON THOMAS FRANCIS FERNANDEZ, 8TH N.I.

At a European general court martial held at Secunderabad, on Tuesday, Dec. 9, 1856, Surg. T. Fernandez, M.D., 8th N.I., was arraigned on the following charge, viz.:—

Charge.—For disgraceful behaviour, highly unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Jaulnah, on Feb. 27, 1856, when belonging to the 28th N.I., and in medical attendance on ———, wife of ———, of the same regiment, under pretence of a medical examination, taken indecent liberties with her person, uncalled for by the circumstances of her case; and further insulted her by drawing her hand towards him in an improper manner, and kissing her; and at the same time making use of the following improper and unwarrantable language to her, namely,—"Oh! you want caressing, that is what you want," or words to that effect, thereby grossly abusing the implicit confidence that the usages and well being of society require to be placed in an individual of the medical profession.

Finding.—Guilty of the charge.

Sentence.—To be cashiered.

Secunderabad, Jan. 8, 1857.

(Signed) PAT. GRANT, Lieut.-Gen. Com.-in-Chief.

Madras, Feb. 11, 1857.—Surgeon Thomas Francis Fernandez, M.D., is to be struck off the strength of the army from the date of the promulgation of this order at Secunderabad, which is to be reported to the Adjutant-General of the Army.

LIEUT. HENRY REID BELL, 25th N.I.

Head-quarters, Choultry Plain, Feb. 5, 1857.—At a European general court martial, held at Fort St. George, on Monday, Dec. 22, 1856, and continued by adjournment, Lieut. H. R. Bell, 25th N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For behaviour unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Rangoon, on June 23, 1856, in a letter of the same date, to the address of the acting adjutant of the 25th M.N.I., written for the purpose of explaining, for the information of his commanding officer, the measures he had adopted to liquidate a claim of money, amounting to Rs. 350, preferred against him by Capt. W. F. Stephens, of the Bengal L.C., the amount of which claim in another letter to the adjutant of his regiment, for the information of his commanding officer, dated Aug. 9, 1856, he had promised to pay by instalments of Rs. 20 a month, commencing from the pay issued to him in Nov., 1855, falsely stated in the said letter first mentioned, with reference to the said Capt. W. F. Stephens, and the money due to him, in substance and effect as follows, namely:—

"In the end of Dec. last I sent an order to Capt. Stephens on Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., Madras, for Rs. 60. I wrote again to Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., requesting them to pay Rs. 60 more to Capt. Stephens in April; at the same time I wrote to Capt. Stephens, and asked him, as I was under heavy stoppages by a Court of Requests, to allow me to stop payment for a few months. I have not heard from him since. This is the first intimation I have had, although I have paid him Rs. 120 since last month." He, Lieut. H. R. Bell, well knowing at the time, first, that although he had written to Capt. W. F. Stephens in Dec., stating that he had forwarded an order for Rs. 60 upon Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., that he had not forwarded any such order. Secondly, that he had not written to Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. requesting them to pay Rs. 60 to Capt. W. F. Stephens. Thirdly, that he had reason to know Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. would not honour any order for money, or pay any money on his account; and, fourthly, that he had in effect paid no money whatever to Capt. W. F. Stephens on the account in question up to the date of his letter to the acting adjut. of the 25th N.I. herein first referred to.

Finding.—Not guilty.

(Signed) P. GRANT, Lieut.-General,

Madras, Feb. 4, 1857.

Commander-in-Chief.

Lieut. Henry Reid Bell is released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty.

CAPT. FRANCIS FARHILL COLLINGWOOD DICKSON, 1ST MADRAS FUSILIERS.

Head-quarters, Choultry Plain, Feb. 21, 1857.—At a European general court martial held at Fort St. George, on Thursday, Feb. 5, 1857. Capt. F. F. C. Dickson, 1st Madras Fusiliers, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Fort St. George, Madras, on the night of the 15th, or morning of the 16th, of Dec. 1856, been drunk at a ball given by the non-commissioned officers of the 1st Madras Fusiliers, and then and there conducted himself in a quarrelsome and indecorous manner, striking and attempting to strike some of the non-commissioned officers and soldiers present, namely, Serj. P. McClory and Private W. Loftus, of the said regt., and Serj. F. Dwyer, of the Commissariat depart.; and walking about the room, with his shirt-sleeves tucked up, with a stick in his hand: thereby interrupting the harmony of the party, and showing a bad example to, and lowering himself in the eyes of his military inferiors; and, ultimately, from his helpless state, rendering it necessary for him to be led and supported to his quarters by the provost serj. and his assistants.

Revised Finding.—Guilty of conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having in Fort St. George, Madras, on the night of the 15th, or morning of the 16th of December, 1856, been drunk at a ball given by the non-commissioned officers of the 1st Madras Fusiliers, and then and there conducted himself in an indecorous manner, striking and attempting to strike some of the non-commissioned officers present, and showing a bad example to, and lowering himself in the eyes of his military inferiors, and of having ultimately been assisted to his quarters.—But the court acquits him of the remainder of the charge.

Revised sentence.—To be dismissed the service.

Madras, Feb. 19, 1857.

Recommendation.—The court begs most respectfully and most earnestly to recommend the prisoner to his Excellency's merciful consideration on account of his service of eighteen years, and the deep contrition he has expressed for his offence.

Madras, Feb. 19, 1857.

Confirmed.
(Signed) PAT. GRANT, Lieut.-Gen.
Commander-in-Chief.

Madras, Feb. 20, 1857.

Remarks by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.—The Commander-in-Chief has confirmed, but not attached his approval to the proceedings of the court, as there are some exceptions made in their finding which do not appear to be borne out by the evidence on the trial.

His Excellency has great respect for the recommendation of a court martial, and in every practicable case is inclined to give it effect. In this instance, however, he cannot but consider it misplaced, as the length of this officer's service is, in the Commander-in-Chief's opinion, an aggravation of his offence, and no evidence has been adduced to show that Captain Dickson's period of service has been marked by such unexceptionable conduct as to entitle him to lenient consideration.

In the conscientious discharge of their duty, the court have awarded a sentence suitable to and commensurate with the offence; but, in recommending this officer to mercy on insufficient grounds, his Excellency considers they have placed him, as Commander-in-Chief, in a very invidious position; for either he must disregard their recommendation, or sacrifice the discipline of the army and the best interests of the service by restoring to the functions of his commission in his regiment an officer who has degraded himself in the eyes of his brother officers, and forfeited the respect and confidence of those under his command.

Lieutenant-General Grant feels that the court should not have placed him in this painful situation; but he cannot hesitate a moment as to the course to be pursued; the sentence must be enforced.

Captain Francis Farhill Collingwood Dickson is to be struck off the strength of the army from the 21st February, 1857.

SNAKES.—The Bombay papers publish a most singular correspondence on the subject of deaths from snake-bites. It appears that Government, at the recommendation of the commissioner of police, offered a reward of two annas for every snake's head. Upwards of two hundred thousand snakes were killed, and the consequent expenditure amounted to Rs. 25,000. As this was not intended, the reward was lowered. Rutnagherry, in particular, swarms with snakes, which, but for the ichneumon, would render the country uninhabitable. If the people can kill the snakes so easily, why don't they? Do they prefer to be bit?

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

FRIDAY, April 3, 1857.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE INDIAN NAVY.

CAPTAIN GEORGE-GREVILLE WELLESLEY, C.B., R.N., has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Navy, to succeed Admiral Sir Henry Leeke, whose tenure of office has expired. Captain Wellesley's commission as lieutenant was, dated in April, 1838, as commander in April, 1842, and as captain in December, 1844. As lieutenant of the Castor he was at the taking of Caiffa and Tsour, on the coast of Syria, and at the bombardment of St. Jean d'Acre. After passing through these three grades with much credit, he was placed in command on the Pacific station in 1853; and on the breaking out of the late war with Russia he was appointed to the command of the Cornwallis, which formed one of the Baltic fleet.

Captain Wellesley is a member of the illustrious family of that name, being the youngest son of the late Hon. and Rev. Gerald Wellesley and a nephew of the late Duke of Wellington.

THE NEW GAZETTEER OF INDIA.*

At the last General Court of the East-India Company, Mr. Lewin drew the attention of the proprietors to the new Gazetteer of India, which had just issued from the press under the auspices of the East-India Company. This work has every pretension to be regarded as the most complete of its kind. It embraces within its range not only the territories subject to the administration of the Indian Government, but those also belonging to the various native princes on the continent of India. The descriptions in each instance are brought down to the latest date, and while the work comprises every important particular contained in the more bulky edition of the Gazetteer of India, published by the Court of Directors in 1854, it possesses one essential advantage over that elaborate work in the fact of its being comprehended within the limits of a single volume. This result has been achieved by curtailment of some few redundancies, but chiefly by adopting an enlarged page, in which the matter is distributed in two separate columns. In collecting the materials for this compilation, every printed volume known or believed to contain accounts relating to the localities treated of appears to have been consulted, while in addition to this, a further source of information has been rendered available in the manuscript and unpublished records of the East-India Company. To these documents unreserved access has been enjoyed by the compiler, who has not failed to avail himself of the opportunity thus afforded for amassing a vast collection of curious and valuable facts. These will be found interwoven with the separate articles to which they relate, thereby rendering the Gazetteer one of the most interesting, as well as one of the most useful, works connected with our Eastern Empire. The relative positions of the towns and cities have been made to correspond with those laid down in the great trigonometrical survey of India, and a variety of instructive particulars will be found appended to the notices of the several countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, illustrative of their physical character, or of their statistical, social, and political circumstances. Descriptions of the mountainous regions are also given, with a minuteness which their importance demands. It is worthy of notice, that the principal range of Indian mountains, that of the Himalayas, contains the loftiest peaks on the surface of the globe. Those of Mount Everest and Kinchingunga overtop the highest summits of the Andes by above half a mile of perpendicular altitude. From the centre of this elevated range the most important rivers of India derive their origin. These noble streams receive their chief supplies from the mountain-snows, which, having accumulated during the winter months, begin to melt in early spring, and roll their abundant moisture into the plains below. For ages past these invaluable stores were permitted to flow in heedless waste to the sea. Providence, having furnished the supply, seems to have been content to leave its distribution to man; and the task thus committed to him, though long neglected, has at length been ably fulfilled. An English poet, eminent for his piety, says:—

“God made the country, but man made the town.”

India, however, does not bear out the bard in this distinction. In many parts of our Eastern possessions the face of the country has been completely metamorphosed by the hand of man. Such has been the case in the deltas of the great rivers of the peninsula,—the Kistnah and the Godavary. But the most striking instance occurs in the north-west provinces of Bengal. Those who were acquainted with these tracts some twenty years back, and can contrast their then condition with their present appearance, will readily concede that here, at least, man, under Providence, has been equally the agent in fashioning the country as in building the town. At the time we speak of, the husbandman was dependent on the periodical rains, and these occasionally failed. The year 1837 will long be remembered as one of absolute drought. Whole districts presented the aspect of a scorched desert, and the partial and scanty harvest was but the forerunner of a widespread famine. At the present time the cultivator is altogether independent of the seasons. The monsoon rains may be scanty, yet his tanks are full; they may altogether fail, still his crops are secure. Such a result has been brought about by a magnificent system of artificial irrigation. We take the particulars from the Gazetteer. A little below the town of Hurdwar, in Upper India, a noble canal issues from the right bank of the Ganges, and taking a south-westerly direction along the centre of the Doab, makes its way to Allyghur, whence it diverges in two channels, one having its terminus at Humeerpore and the other at Cawnpore. Into this canal, measuring with its branches upwards of eight hundred miles, the waters of the Ganges are diverted from their natural channel, and thus economized, afford the benefit of a fertilizing process to innumerable villages in a tract supporting a population nearly equal to that of the United Kingdom. To effect the passage of this canal, works of extraordinary character have been rendered necessary. Across the valley of the Solani the canal is conducted by means of an earthen embankment protected by walls of masonry, the river Solani being bridged by an aqueduct of stone, the bed of which affords transit to the canal. This magnificent aqueduct rests upon fifteen arches, each having a span of fifty feet, thus giving a clear waterway of seven hundred and fifty feet for the passage of the waters of the Solani. The strength of the work is enormous, and its duration appears destined to be co-existent with that of the earth on which it rests. It is supported by blocks of masonry sunk several yards below the bed of the stream, most of them measuring twenty feet both in length and breadth. The total cost of the Ganges Canal has been computed at upwards of a million and a half sterling, and, regarded either as a work of art or in the light of its extended utility, it may safely be pronounced to be the grandest project which has hitherto been conceived in India to bear testimony to our national character. Our limited space will not permit us to make any extracts from the Gazetteer, but it may be observed that a degree of attention has been bestowed upon every portion of this compilation which leaves nothing to be desired. In this country, the convenient size of the book, and the stamp of authenticity which it bears, will doubtless secure for it a wide circulation. We trust that some degree of encouragement will be afforded to it in India. There the East-India Company are extending the benefits of education to the masses by means of elementary schools in which the English language is taught. None of these schools should be without the Gazetteer. The work would be regarded with interest by all classes of scholars. The younger pupils would feel an interest in ascertaining that their respective villages had not been overlooked in the alphabetical arrangement. Those more advanced would turn to the district in which they were located, and test the accuracy of its descriptions by their own knowledge of the topography and natural history of the surrounding country. If disposed to extend their inquiries, they might contrast the despotic sway of a native state with the mild and beneficent rule of the presidency within which they were comprised, and if competent to take a still more comprehensive view, a familiarity with the Gazetteer would furnish them with a complete history of India untainted in any degree by political bias.

THE NORTH OF INDIA TRAMROAD COMPANY.

NOTWITHSTANDING what has been done, and what is being done, in India, in the way of providing means of internal communication, the cry is still heard for "Roads, Roads." And if roads are, for the first time, to be made in a particular district, why, it is asked, should not the additional advantages of the rail, at the same time, be made available? The cost of draught will be less, the capabilities of transit greater, and the accommodation more complete. And all these benefits may be gained by a small additional expense in the cost of construction. The main arteries of communication in the country may be formed of permanent solid works, so that political as well as commercial objects may be gained by the speed which is obtained through the instrumentality of the locomotive; but the feeders to these trunk lines should be formed less with a view to speed than to general usefulness, and should be prepared, in the first instance, only for cattle-draught. The rails, also, should be lighter than those usually employed. Such is the system which the promoters of "The North of India Tramroad Company" propose to adopt in providing "a cheap system of communication through the province of Rohilcund and adjacent territories." So desirable an object, and one so likely to yield a profitable return, will, we should hope, meet with the support it deserves. The districts through which the line would pass are among the most fertile in India, and the damage which their markets are about to sustain by the superior advantages that will be bestowed upon the more favoured provinces on the line of the East-Indian Railway should be mitigated and counteracted by conferring more facile means of communication upon them. By these measures large tracts of country will be enabled to send forth the rich produce of their soil to neighbouring districts as well as to foreign ports, promoting thereby both the agricultural and the commercial interests of the country. We are glad to observe that it is proposed to conduct the line of tramway to the mineral districts of Kumaon and Gurwhal. This is a most important feature in the undertaking. By developing the resources of these localities, the company will obtain their iron on the spot, and thus reduce still more the cost of the work. We should like to see a detailed estimate of the aggregate cost per mile of the undertaking, in order that a comparison may be made with the more expensive lines of railway now under construction.

THE LATE SIR GEORGE WILLIAM ANDERSON, K.C.B.

ANOTHER valuable public servant has been removed by death in the person of Sir George William Anderson, who was equally well known as a distinguished member of the Bombay civil service and as the successful administrator of two important possessions of the Crown in the Indian Ocean.

Mr. Anderson entered the Company's service in 1809, and after a short but necessarily subordinate employment, rose to posts of confidence and trust. He successively filled the offices of Judge of Kaira and of Surat, Judge of the Sudder and Commissioner of the Deccan. He afterwards became one of the commissioners who framed the "Macaulay Code," on which duty he proceeded to Calcutta. On his return to his own presidency, in 1838, he took his seat in Council, and on the premature retirement of Sir James Carnac from the government, in April, 1841, he succeeded, being senior member, as acting governor, and filled that post until the arrival of Sir George Arthur, in June, 1842. In 1844 he finally left India, and remained unemployed until 1849, when, it is believed, on the strong recommendation of Lord Auckland, he was nominated to the government of the Mauritius. After efficiently administering the affairs of that colony for two years, he proceeded to Ceylon, in succession to Lord Torrington, having previously received the second class of the Order of the Bath in acknowledgment of his public services.

Sir George Anderson at one time announced himself as a candidate for the East-India Direction, but did not prosecute his canvass; and the changes since made in the Court by the Act of 1853 postponed his claims, together with those of many others which had been submitted to the notice of the Proprietors. Sir George Anderson's death occurred on the 17th ultimo, at his residence in Westbourne Terrace, at the age of 65.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Having noticed in your paper of the 17th instant an article upon the Bengal Military Fund, which appears to me to convey an erroneous impression as to its existing position and prospects, I beg to be permitted to offer a few words in reply.

You speak of "the considerable aid which has been extended to it by the Government during the last thirty-four years," as if given to an institution originally requiring no such support, whereas the so-called "aid" constituted the principal condition upon which the institution itself was established; and it is our firm persuasion that, if that condition had been faithfully adhered to, the Bengal Military Fund would now be in a flourishing state.

About the period you mention—that is, thirty-four years ago, the officers of the Bengal army consented to give up a plan of their own, and to adopt one proposed by the Court of Directors, upon the latter offering to allow 8 per cent. interest upon the capital accumulated, and an exchange of 2s. 4d. the sicca rupee in remitting to Europe life annuities for the widows of subscribers, to the amount of three-fourths of their late husbands' British pay. A rate of contribution was thereupon immediately agreed to, and that rate having shortly after been deemed insufficient, the army, without in any way asking for assistance from the Court, voluntarily raised its contributions to the scale established in 1829, in order to enable it, after defraying all other expenses of the institution, annually to lodge such a sum of money in the Government treasury as was sufficient for the purchase of life annuities, upon the condition above stated, as they annually became claimable.

In consequence of alterations in the currency which took place in 1836, the average sum thus required for each widow is found to be Co.'s Rs. 15,466-6 (fifteen thousand four hundred and sixty-six rupees and six tenths), and, upon a like average, the annual payment to each is Co.'s Rs. 1,691-2 (sixteen hundred and ninety-one and two-tenths), at a remittance of 2s. 3d. per rupee,—these amounts being computed on the assumption that the average age at which incumbents come upon the Fund is forty-five years, and the average duration of the annuity the same as that calculated upon for females of the same age in the Government life annuities of this country.

Now, supposing thirty widows to come upon the Fund at the end of each year, we should, on the above data, require Co.'s Rs. 4,64,000 to be annually invested; but our present balance applicable to that purpose, after defraying all other charges upon the institution, is, according to last year's account current, Co.'s Rs. 5,72,341, showing that our present income being Co.'s Rs. 7,41,448, and our expenditure Co.'s Rs. 1,69,107, we contribute Co.'s Rs. 1,08,341, or about fifteen per cent. more than is required, to pay the full present value of the annuities in question. As, therefore, those annuities are now temporarily reduced about ten per cent., it follows that we are at the present moment paying about twenty-five per cent. more than the just value of the contingent benefits for which we subscribe.

This is the position of present subscribers and future claimants;—I now turn to that of the present incumbents. Upon the calculation above given, the institution, to be solvent, ought to possess a capital of between eighty-seven and ninety lacs of rupees—or, say about one million sterling—whereas the Hon. Court does not acknowledge itself to be accountable for quite half that amount. What, then, has become of the remainder? It is upon this point that we most earnestly pray for a full and impartial investigation. No doubt there have been, as you remark, "oversights which will occur in all offices,"—no doubt "unintentional wrong" may have been done,—but why should the widows of officers, many of whom fell in battle, while the rest were struck down by the effects of climate, why should these unfortunate ladies be made to suffer? And why do you tell us that "it is not wise to make matters worse by charging the miscarriage upon Government?" If wrong has been inflicted, if oversights have occurred, surely a magnanimous Government, no less than an honourable individual, ought to feel it a duty to correct the one and to repair the other.

Not that I mean to aver the managers of the Fund, powerless though they be in many respects, to have been entirely blameless;—far from it—but it was much more from a too easy reliance upon the correctness of officials, than from any "improvident management," that the affairs of the Fund fell into confusion. In one respect, however, the Calcutta board of management was undeniably in fault. From an expectation, too long indulged in, that Government would consent to remit the widows' annuities upon the same terms as the pay of retired officers, viz. at 2s. 6d., instead of only 2s. 4d. the sicca rupee, no allowance was made for the lower rate of exchange, and the scale of contribution was in consequence fixed a small fraction too low. Yet still, as other benefits besides annuities were at that time in contemplation, which benefits were subsequently set aside altogether, it is surmised that the surplus which would have accrued from the latter circumstance ought to be much more than sufficient to make amends for the omission. This point, however, as all others, the subscribers are willing and anxious to have fully investigated.

It is, then, in order to ascertain whether the deduction made from the annuities of our unfortunate incumbents cannot be restored, firstly, by respectfully bringing to the notice of Government the sacred nature of the pledges which its support—spontaneously offered to us in the first instance—alone enabled us to enter into, and secondly, by showing that a strict adherence to the terms on which that support was promised would even now occasion no greater expense to the State than the Hon. Court at present declares itself willing to incur, that the ulterior proceedings which you allude to have been determined upon, and I cannot but hope that, upon further reflection, you will be inclined to regret your having stigmatized our conduct—under this explanation of our object and motive—as "factiously struggling with authority."

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

Cheltenham,

March 21st, 1857.

G. SWINEY.

[The allegation against the East-India Company is, that they have not kept faith with the Bengal Military Fund, i.e., that the advantages which were promised have been withheld. In the justice of this allegation we are unable to concur, so far at least as we have been able to gather information on the subject. The engagement of the Company we believe to have been, 1st, to make the advances for the purposes of the Fund in England at 2s. 4d. the sicca rupee, the same being repayable, at twelve months' date, with 5 per cent. interest; 2ndly, to allow 8 per cent. interest on the Fund's balances; 3rdly, to grant an annual donation of Rs. 24,000. These conditions have been substantially fulfilled. What, then, have been the main causes of the Fund's unfortunate position? General Swiney admits that the managers have been "far from entirely blameless" in the matter of management. He cannot overlook their improvidence in paying the pensions at 2s. 6d. the sicca rupee, instead of 2s. 4d., the rate authorized by the East-India Company. This is a difference of no less than nine per cent., and that, too, paid for a long series of years. But the gallant general does not allude to the heavy losses which the Fund sustained some years ago by speculations on the part of persons employed by the managers. Then again, is it not possible that the subscription and donation rates of the higher ranks were fixed at two low a rate? We believe the rates for these ranks are lower in this Fund than in the Madras Fund, while the pensions, until the late reduction, were on a higher scale. Again, may not other of the original calculations have been based on erroneous data, which experience only can correct? It is an easy course to throw blame on the East-India Company, and to suggest that they should take the Fund's affairs into their own hands for investigation, and thus involve themselves in a responsibility which does not properly belong to them. But we do not think that the managers have ground in justice for pursuing this course, though so tempting and so facile. If the East-India Company refuse to allow the widows' pensions, which have been already curtailed by being paid at a lower rate of exchange, to be again further reduced, they take the responsibility of this humane step on themselves, and we feel assured that, in thus insisting upon good faith being kept with the widows who were incumbent on the fund when the reduction was voted by the subscribers, the ruling authorities will be supported by the approbation of all right-thinking persons.]

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE CHINESE EXPEDITION.

Lord Clanricarde inquired as to the rate of pay which the troops sent to China were to receive, and whether Indian camp followers were to be attached to them.

Lord Panmure explained the arrangements in force with regard to the pay of the troops who would form the Chinese expedition, and stated that a certain number of camp followers would be furnished by the Indian Government and attached to the several regiments.

The Earl of Ellenborough explained the uses of camp followers, and made, from his Indian experiences, several suggestions for improving the efficiency of the troops. He then passed on to deplore French co-operation with the British arms in China, and concluded by declaring that much time might be saved by employing the troops set free by the Persian treaty, instead of those about to be sent from England.

Lord Panmure having thanked Lord Ellenborough for his advice,

Lord Grey deplored the extension which was evidently to be given to the operations against China.

Lord Granville reminded Lord Grey that the best means to secure a speedy peace was to negotiate with a strong force behind you.

The matter then dropped.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MARCH 16.

Sir E. Perry moved for a copy of correspondence between Mir Jafer Ali Khan and the Court of Directors, and between the same and the President of the Board of Control, respecting the property of the late Nawab of Sarat, and asked Mr. V. Smith what were the intentions of Government relating thereto. He pointed out certain modes of proceeding by which, in his opinion, justice might be done to the party claimant in the case.

Sir F. Kelly urged that the Act passed by the Indian Legislature in this matter had set aside the prerogative of the Crown, and was therefore void in law.

Mr. V. Smith did not object to the production of the correspondence, and gave explanations concerning the case, which, he said, Sir E. Perry had not stated correctly or fairly. As to the Act of the Indian Legislature of 1848, which had been in force for ten years, if it was really invalid, recourse should be had to a court of justice in England or in India. It was open for the party claiming to contest the Act in that manner, and he thought that, under the circumstances, he (Mr. Smith) could not proceed further in the case.

After a few remarks by Mr. Lowe, and a reply by Sir E. Perry, the motion was agreed to.

MARCH 18.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

In answer to Sir D. Norreys,

Mr. Wilson said that the only line of telegraphic communication between India and Europe with regard to which the Government had at present entered into any engagements was the line going from Seleucia to Kornaah, on the Persian Gulf. The Company would have two years granted to them for making their arrangements, and, of course, in the mean time the Government would not entertain any other project.

In reply to Mr. Otway,

Mr. Wilson said the only assistance to be given to the Company would be in the way of payment for work done when the line was completed. An application was before the Treasury for assistance to a company proposing to establish a line of railway; but no definite resolution had been come to on the subject.

EAST-INDIA HOUSE.

A General Quarterly Court of the East-India Company was held at their house in Leadenhall-street, on Wednesday, March 18, 1857. Mr. R. D. Mangles, M. P., Deputy-Chairman of the Court of Directors, in the chair.

The Secretary read the minutes of the last Court.

The heads of papers presented to Parliament since last Court day were read.

An account of superannuations granted since last Court day were also read.

THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

Mr. Jones.—Will you be good enough to read my notice of motion?

The Secretary then read the following notice:—

"That under the new Act, by which Government appoints six Directors to this Court, the services of the six Senior Clerks at the Board of Control are unnecessary, and that the abolition of the offices of such clerks will save 20,000*l.* per annum to the Indian revenue, and expedite and improve the home administration of India."

Mr. Jones.—Sir, on the last Court day I proposed a motion similar to that which has just been read, but one of the Directors thought fit to interfere, and prevent the Court from discussing the subject by counting out the Court. I will continue to count out this Court until I have been suffered to exercise my right of bringing on that motion, and until I have the liberty of establishing the right on the part of the people of India of being heard in this Court on the subject. I don't think this Court ought to have been so counted out by you; therefore if it is intended to count us out again say so, and I will not proceed.

The Chairman.—The hon. proprietor must be aware that, by the Act of Parliament, unless there are twenty members present, any member of the Court has as much right to bring that fact to the notice of the chairman as any other member has to bring forward any motion which he deems to be of sufficient importance to bring before the Court. The same rule prevails in the House of Commons, and no member is ever called to account for exercising that right. It is one of the privileges of every member of this Court to call the attention of the chairman to the fact that twenty members are not present; and if that is found to be the case, then no proprietor has any right to bring forward his motion.

Mr. Lewin.—If I understand you, in the event of there not being twenty members, no proprietor who has a motion to bring forward will be permitted to proceed with it?

The Chairman.—I say nothing of the sort. I say it is the privilege of any proprietor at any time to bring that fact to the notice of the chairman.

Mr. Mills (a Director).—I pursued that course on the last Court day, because the chairman had stated that he thought the matter was not fit for discussion. I believe it was the general sense of the Court that the discussion should not proceed, therefore I stated what was the law; and I can only say that, under similar circumstances, I should not hesitate to pursue the same course.

Mr. Lewin.—I think it is a very bad precedent to establish. It will tend to get rid of this Court altogether. Some think it is of little value; but if you get rid of it, you get rid of the only exponent of the feelings of the people of India at this time. I am only an advocate for the existence of this Court on that ground.

Mr. Helps.—This happens to be a very important question, I wish, therefore, to say a few words on the matter. I did not understand that it was your intention to count out the Court on the present occasion; but I understood you to say that it was the legal right of any one to resort to that measure. I think it would not at all profit us to exercise such a right on ordinary occasions, and that on the present occasion it would be a very ungracious proceeding. You have stated that the House of Commons has established an analogous precedent; but permit me to say, that the governing power—her Majesty's ministers—have no right to reckon themselves present for one purpose and not present for another. There were on the last occasion more than twenty members present, including the members within the bar.

The Chairman.—The law is made by a higher authority than ourselves, and it specifically excludes the members of the Court of Directors from the number. I think that in 99 cases out of 100 the House is counted out from the simple reason that the question in hand is not thought of any importance to be proceeded with.

Mr. Jones.—I pass by what happened at the last Court, believing that we shall not on the present occasion have the same interruption. I proceed to the leading purpose of my motion. The system that I wish to recommend is to bring back into the hands of the directorial body the real power of the Government of India. The present system, I may explain, is this,—we do not talk here to the proprietors merely; if there is any value in the Court, it is its publicity. If there exist that right of publicity, immediately we speak here we are standing on the same ground with the Court of Directors itself. Well, the system I was about to describe is just this:—A despatch arrives from India; it is handed to the secretary; he gives it to the head of that department whose duty it is to superintend that subject; in communication with the chairman and deputy-chairman he prepares an answer to that despatch; and that answer goes up to the Board of Control, and is submitted, with the original document to which it is an answer, to the head of the department or senior department in the Board of Control. He makes his comments upon that draft despatch, and submits them to the secretary of the Board, and finally to the president of the Board. The president may approve or disapprove of those comments, and according as the president turns out that draft despatch, it comes back to the committee of the Court of Directors. The committee pass their judgment upon the alterations, if any, that have been made on the original draft despatch, either approving or disapproving of them, and the committee then submit the whole to the Court of Directors. That Court accede to or disapprove of it, and in whatever state they leave it, it goes up to the Board of Control, and they will approve or disapprove of it. If they approve, then the answer goes out as a despatch to India; but if they disapprove, then there is no alternative, but the Court of Directors must submit to the Board of Control. What I complain of is, that the opinions of men of long experience of India, and who are elected on the ground of that experience, should be subject to the comments of the clerks at the Board of Control, who have no experience of India whatever. While this Company was a commercial Company, and the dividends had a fluctuating quantity, it was right that the Imperial Parliament should place restrictions upon our proceedings, lest in the pursuit of selfish gain we should violate the principles of justice and of right in our political relations towards those who were our fellow-subjects. The Board of Control therefore was a necessity; but when after the Act of 1833 our commercial character ceased, it was not reasonable to suppose that the Court of Proprietors were prepared to appoint Directors who would be unjust to the people of India, unfaithful to their trust, and incompetent to their office. The Board of Control was, when first established, necessary to take care that the proprietors did their work well; but now the system is changed and things are altogether different. The last charter has taken away a considerable portion of our authority. We have no longer the power of appointing the whole of the Directors, but the Board of Control has the power of appointing six of the Directors out of the eighteen, to which number the Court is limited. Now, my idea is, that with the power which those six Directors possess there may be an arrangement made whereby all that is necessary to be done by the Board of Control may be accomplished in the Court of Directors. It was at best an inconvenience that the Board of Control should have to revise the whole management of the Government of India. The president of the Board of Control makes his annual statement on Indian business, involving the whole affairs of India, to a collection of members of the House of Commons, amounting to about twelve or fifteen, and yet no one counts out the House. The president is dependent upon the clerks for his information, and they supply him with slovenly information. There is one of the best accountants at the Board of Control, and yet what do I find? In the accounts there was an item for interest on money in arrear, an account of which your Directors furnished to the Board of Control; and yet in the details supplied to the president there was not one shilling put down for interest. Again, these clerks are not only slovenly in matters of account, but in political information. In one year Mr. Vernon Smith stated the affairs of Oude to be satisfactory; in another year he stated that the affairs of Oude, including the time he had previously spoken, were in so unsatisfactory a state, that there was no other way of settling it than by taking possession of the dominion. If I am able to point out those errors, how much more able should I be if I had the powers of your own secretary? But the Board of Control has really no Indian experience. That is the gist of my argument. It is not reasonable that you should have your measures submitted to men who know nothing about the matters to which they relate. You, after a long residence in India, and after having accomplished some of the greatest undertakings and exploits in that country, come home to England, and on account of your long experience of Indian affairs you are appointed to the Court of Directors. Now I ask is it reasonable that you should have your judgment and experience submitted to these obscure clerks, who rise from patronage and are the creatures of favour? Competition is now the principle whereby men obtain office in India. Are we to have competition in India; and are men of merit to go abroad and then return, believing that they are to do something more than they have done in India; and are these men to see themselves exposed to the authority and correction of persons who are not worthy to stand in their shoes? The people of India have a great interest in these proceedings and in my motion to-day. The amount of alterations your secretary tells us that are made in your despatches by the Board of Control at the present time, do not amount to five per cent. on the whole. Is it, I ask, for the sake of that five per cent., worth while that the whole of that system should be maintained? It is questionable whether that five per cent. is an improvement. If you would give me some of the comments and corrections they have made, I may then be able to judge whether they are improvements or not. But that is contrary to your rules; these are secret arrangements. I will take the correspondence on the Persian war. Here is a correspondence submitted to the proprietors as to the expense of the war between India and Persia. The president has to watch with jealousy after the revenue. How does he do it? Why, he does it so slovenly that you are obliged to correct him. In a return of the extraordinary expenses sent by the president of the Indian Board to the chairman of the East-India Company with reference to the partition of the expenses between England and India in the Persian war, he says:—"By the term 'extraordinary expenses' is to be understood that portion of the expense which is over and above the ordinary pay and allowances to the troops and the ordinary charge of the ships of the East-India Company." That is the information he places before you. One would have thought that he would have defined what those extraordinary expenses were. Therefore, it was incumbent upon you to correct his vagueness of meaning. "The Court concurs," say you in your letter to the president of the India Board; "the Court concurs in your explanation of the term 'extraordinary' as distinguished from 'ordinary' expenses of the forces, military and naval, on the understanding that in the event of troops being sent from this country, or the colonies, or raised in the East-Indies, all the expenses of those troops shall be regarded as an extraordinary charge." Here is an instance of, and illustrates what I want to establish, namely, that the ignorance of the Board of Control renders it a public evil. Here is a case which has just occurred. It is a matter of expectation that the people of England and India should jealously watch every step of your proceedings, and make a matter of scrutiny what is occurring in the two hemispheres, and yet upon such an important affair the president of the Board of Control is not capable of rendering himself explicit, and, but for your explanation, the whole expense of transporting the troops to India might have been charged upon you, had you not interposed and put a proper interpretation upon the terms "ordinary and extraordinary expenses." I have said that five per cent. was the quantity of the alterations made in your despatches by the Board of Control: as to what the quality of that five per cent. is, I want no other instance than what I have adduced; nor do I require any other proof than that the clerks at the India Board are an obstruction to business, while they are a great expense and are the supervision of ignorance over intelligence. How can persons who have never been to India ascertain what are the feelings of the people of India? We may by reading travels get a sort of poetical and dreamy knowledge of a people, but such knowledge as is useful and of a practical kind can only be gained by men who have lived among that people. I should like to know what the Emperor of Russia understands about the question of the 10l. franchise in this country, or of the different tenures by which our estates are held; and yet these gentlemen who sit at the Board of Control, with their persistent pragmatical authority, believe that they are to overrule the judgments of men elected to the direction because they are competent, and have the requisite knowledge. It is an outrage to our common sense, and an outrage to the people of India. If you would at once come here and encourage our debates, and give us a little of that authority we once possessed, you might still carry on the power and authority you formerly exercised in the government of India, and the House of Commons would never allow you to be exterminated or annihilated. This question must be decided. Twenty years hence we are to become extinct, unless we arouse ourselves. But I look forward to the time, if you will but encourage my motion, when deputies from India shall assemble here, and either remonstrate against your proceedings, or suggest to you measures that would make you justly popular in India. What has been the effect of your policy in that country? You cannot raise money in India at five per cent. That has been the effect of Lord Dalhousie's expenses and debts. By the adoption of my motion, 20,000l. a year will be saved, which is the present expense of the Board of Control. I say that such an expense is an unjust incubus at the present time on the people of India, because 10s. of our currency bears the same proportion to labour here, as 2s. in India does to labour there; therefore every expense in India is a five-fold burden on the people. Such are the reasons I have for submitting this motion to your notice. The motion which I now beg to make is, "That under the new act, by which government appoints six directors to this Court, the services of the six senior clerks at the Board of Control are unnecessary, and that the abolition of the offices held by them will save 20,000l. per annum to the Indian revenue, and expedite and improve the home administration of India."

Mr. Lewin.—I should not have risen to second the motion, but that I wished to make one or two observations upon what has fallen from my friend Mr. Jones. He complains that large sums of money have been borrowed for the purpose of executing railways throughout India. So far from complaining of this, I think the Government of India cannot go too far in that way. I think that railways will benefit India in every possible manner. I think Lord Dalhousie's policy has been most liberal with one exception. I mean annexation. Money has been laid out on public works, which render good service to India, and which will be repaid in a short time. As to the change of the constitution of this Court, that is an expectation which does not appear to me at all likely to be realised by the abolition of the six clerks at the Board of Control. But the latter is a monstrous proposition. My friend could not annihilate the six clerks without the annihilating the Board itself. An attack upon the subordinates, without attacking the head, is rather absurd. As to bringing back authority to this Court, that is simply impossible. I have just as much dislike to the Board of Control, as I have to this Court. I don't think they both together make a government. There cannot be a government without responsibility. But there is no responsibility either in this Court, or at the Board of Control. We hear of despatches going to India, and of despatches coming here, but we don't know who sent them, or who is responsible for them. The people of India don't understand what the system of government is. The Government of India is unlinked from that old devotion in which it was held in that country for many years, and it has nothing now to attach the people to it.

The Chairman.—The hon. proprietor seems to have seconded the motion for the purpose of opposing it. (A laugh). Part of the observations of the hon. mover were directed against the existence of the Board of Control, and part of them against the existence of the six clerks at that Board. But the hon. proprietor had no right to assume that the president of the Board of Control was dependent upon the six clerks, nor that the whole business of supervision was performed by the six clerks, and not by the president himself, and that he was only a puppet in the hands of the six clerks. The hon. proprietor has no right to assume that. I believe it to be as far from the fact as possible. I believe that the president of the Board of Control has his opinions as much as any gentleman on this side of the bar. The presidents of the Board of Control are generally men, with regard to general politics, well qualified to form an opinion as to the measures and appointments proper to be adopted for the Government of India. It is quite clear from the fact of their being a Board of Control that we have not assumed anything like an imperium in imperio. It would be absurd to suppose that any body of men, separate and apart from the general Government of the country, could have governed India. How would it be possible? But Parliament has thought fit that India should be partially governed by an independent body; it was, however, absolutely necessary that we should be, as the French say, en rapport with the general Government in some way or other. For many years, and under very anomalous circumstances the Government of India, how desirable or not I will not inquire, was carried on by a non-political body of men, a body not subject to political and party changes; but it was at length considered that there should be another body associated with that independent body, and which other body should be in close connection with the imperial Government. I do not think that any man could devise anything better than the Government which now exists, composed as it is of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company and the Board of Control. As to the existence of the six clerks at (now four), who will hereafter be nominated directors by the Crown, cannot perform in any respect the duties of those six clerks. As soon as those gentlemen shall have been selected by the president of the Board of Control and nominated by the Crown, and as soon as they shall have taken their seats in the Court of Directors, they will be as independent of the president of the Board of Control, and as free from submitting to his views, or implicitly following his instructions, as any member of that Court who has been elected by the proprietors. Therefore, it is most derogatory to them that gentlemen of their eminence, nominated by the Board of Control, should be supposed to stand in the relation of mere clerks to the president of the Board. But there is a permanent secretary at the Board of Control, who is not in the hands of the clerks. Sir George Clerk holds that post, and is as competent to give good and sound advice to the president as any gentleman possibly can be in this Court or any gentleman in India. The hon. proprietor has complained of the Court having been counted out on a former occasion. Now, I say this is not a matter which ought to be brought before this Court. The Board of Control is placed over both the Court of Directors and the Court of Proprietors; and what the hon. proprietor proposes—a very modest request, certainly—is, that the body that is to be controlled should turn round upon and control the controlling power. The Legislature not only constituted the Board of Control, but fixed the salaries to be paid to its members; and the hon. proprietor proposes that we, the controlled body, should regulate what the controlling body should be paid. What the hon. proprietor has said about taxation is directly contrary to the facts of the case. If the Board of Control do perform the high functions it is appointed to discharge, I say that the sum the hon. proprietor proposes to save is a mere trifle as a charge on the people of India. I propose that the motion be negatived.

Mr. Tucking.—It is a matter of great surprise to me to see so thin a Court when a subject of such great importance is brought under discussion. I must say it is a subject which ought not to come before this Court, seeing that it could not lead to anything. I well remember the progress of the Board of Control, and its influence upon the trading functions of the East-India Company; and I believe that its formation had nothing more for its object than the interests both of the Company and of the people of India. But however that may be, I believe the general result of the experiment has been that the communications and deliberations between the Board of Control and the Company have tended very much to give the benefits sought for, chiefly in reference to India itself. Under the present circumstances, and at the present time, considering how well these two bodies, the Board of Control and the East-India Company, have worked together, and considering that it is the opinion of men both in Parliament and out of Parliament, as well as in this Court, when it was attended very differently from what it is at present, that we have reason to be satisfied that it works well. I should doubt if such a motion as the present were passed it would tend to good, or that we should ever be listened to. I was sorry to hear an imputation cast of a want of knowledge on the part of the clerks at the Board of Control. I have had much communication with them. I have seen much of the men; and they are known to be men of education, and well qualified to hold such situations. I may perhaps be influenced with a little predisposition to speak well of the clerks connected with the India Board, from having observed—and I am proud to acknowledge it—the great talent possessed by the clerks in this institution (hear, hear); and I have been, perhaps, too ready to entertain that opinion of the clerks employed in the other establishment. Under these circumstances, I hope the Court will negative the motion now before it; and I hope the hon. proprietor will not press it. I feel that it is a matter of very great public importance; but I cannot give my support to such a motion as the present.

Mr. Helps.—It appears almost presumption on my part to offer anything upon the subject, but I think it desirable that an expression of our opinions should reach the world. The hon. gentleman's speech goes to the abolition of the Board of Control. (Mr. Jones: No! No!) In my opinion, that is the object and would be the result of his motion if it were carried. But I know he means the abolition of the six clerks. In the first place, that is a perfectly unfeasible proposition. The tendency of the day is the merging of this Court and its powers into the Indian Government. It will be simply a question of time whether this Court shall exist as a part of the Indian Government or not. The only mode of continuing its existence is by making its continuance consistent with the parallel action of the central Government. If that can be done, you may prolong your existence as a subordinate power. The hon. gentleman says he does not want to abolish the Board of Control, but he wants to abolish the six clerks who are the permanent officers of that Board. Supposing the six clerks were abolished, the Board of Control would exist no longer as a permanent Board; but on every change of Government any persons may be appointed to exercise control over the affairs of India without having the proper means for doing so. In every department of Government it is absolutely necessary there should be a permanent staff. Upon the same principle, you might abolish all the clerks in the Foreign office or in the Admiralty office. The hon. gentleman proposes that you should control the Government of India without the assistance of the clerks or persons acquainted with the affairs of India. He has alluded to the Persian war. I know I am not in strict order in what I am going to say, but I wish to ask whether you are prepared to lay before the Court the terms of the treaty with Persia?

The Chairman.—The treaty has not yet been laid before Parliament.

Mr. Mackenzie.—I beg to say one word in reference to what the hon. proprietor has said about taxation in India. When I was in India, perhaps I was among the largest European holders of farms, and I still have a large interest there; and I can state from my own knowledge of India, that in the perpetually settled district of Bengal, if the Government were to give up the revenue there received from the zemindars altogether, that the actual cultivators of the land would not get their land one farthing cheaper. As an instance, one estate I held in lease paid a revenue to the Government of 350*l.*, I received in rent from the middlemen about 2,600*l.*, but the actual cultivators of the land paid about 4,000*l.*; and from my own experience of India, I can state that there were no cultivators in the world who got their lands proportionately so cheap with reference to the great crops they raised, they having two crops a year.

Mr. Jones.—I really think you ought all to be very much obliged to me for having raised this discussion. I have learned more from the speeches which have been delivered respecting India than I have heard for the last five years; and my purpose has been in a great degree answered. I am not inimical to the Indian Government, but to the system by which it is at present carried on. The annual deficit in the revenue is nearly two millions. I have no objection to the Board of Control, but I wish exactly to do what the hon. proprietor (Mr. Helps) says ought to be done; I want exactly to accomplish what he said was the great problem to be solved, namely, to make an arrangement between this Court and the parallel authority, so that they may work together. At present there is no harmony between them. The motion was then put and negatived.

EXCHANGES ON INDIA.

Mr. Mackenzie.—I wish to put a question to you, Sir, on the subject of the exchanges on the Indian treasury. I wish to ask the reason why the rate at which the Government draw bills on their Indian treasury is now never lowered or raised by less than one halfpenny at a time, being equivalent to two per cent., contrary to the former practice of making the variation of one farthing, being equal to one per cent. On the 3rd of December last, the East-India Company lowered the rate at which they sold their bills upon the Indian treasury a halfpenny, equal to two per cent. On the 12th of January they raised the exchange to its previous rate, viz. 2*s.* 1*d.* on Bombay and 2*s.* 0*½d.* on Madras and Bengal. In the intervening period of forty days, there was paid into the Leadenhall treasury 1,352,424*l.* for bills upon India, at a loss to the Company, relatively to the previous rate of exchange, of two per cent. upon that amount, viz. 27,048*l*. Assuming that the directors had, or imagined that they had, some reason for the reduction of their exchange in December, and some other reason for its restoration to the previous rate on the 12th of January, it may fairly be asked for what especial reason, whilst the Bank of England varies its rate of interest by the moderate and considerate amounts of a half or one per cent., the East-India Company affrights the commerce of the country by sudden and violent jumps of two, and not unfrequently four per cent. It puts the merchants in a most unfair position, because at these rates of exchange, the parties who supply you with money at the lower rate are able to purchase goods with your bills at a price which is to them relatively lower than it is to those merchants who have obtained your bills at the higher rate of exchange.

The Chairman.—The hon. gentleman asks why the Company has occasionally raised and then lowered the rate of exchange. He will see that it is a matter of discretion in the hands of the Court of Directors, and they have, I believe, exercised it on the part of India to the best of their judgment from time to time, according as the amount of money is being paid out of or is coming into the treasury. It was their duty to obtain money as cheaply as possible, but banks have arisen which have worked very much against the Company's exchange operations; therefore, there must be a large discretion given to the Court.

Mr. Mackenzie.—Do you suppose it to be a wise discretion that the Company should have no medium of exchange between what amounts to a difference of two per cent? Looking at what you do in this respect, is it reasonable to suppose that men who understand these matters will put any confidence in your financial operations?

The Chairman.—The hon. gentleman has asked a question, and to the best of my ability I have answered it.

Dr. Beattie.—I am very glad the hon. gentleman has asked the question; and I trust that the effect of his observations will be to induce the Company to make their reductions in the rate of exchange to a less amount than two per cent. at a time. About eighteen months or two years ago, one of the largest banks connected with India is reported to have made 20,000*l*. by one transaction.

The Chairman.—That is one of the difficulties of our position. These large banks take the money as a mere matter of speculation, and not for mercantile purposes; and they consequently paralyze our exchange operations.

Mr. Shepherd.—It is in consequence of these banks, which act on speculation, that we are obliged to have recourse to larger reductions in the rate of exchange than we should have had if these banks did not exist.

Mr. Mills.—The hon. proprietor has stated that the reduction of one halfpenny in the rupee makes a difference of two per cent.

Mr. Mackenzie.—Every penny reduction in exchange on a rupee is equal to four per cent., and a halfpenny is equivalent to two. When the exchange is at 2*s*. per rupee, the Company receive into their Leadenhall treasury 100*l*. for every bill of Rs. 1,000 they draw on India; but when the exchange is at 1*s*. 11½*d*. per rupee, they only receive in London for every bill on India for Rs. 1,000, 97*l*. 18*s*. 4*d*. I ask whether this does not make a difference of two per cent.

APPOINTMENT OF ADVOCATE-GENERAL.

Mr. Remington.—Since the Court met in December last, the office of advocate-general at Bombay has become vacant by the retirement of my learned friend, Mr. Le Messurier, who filled the office for a period of twenty-five years with credit to himself and equal advantage to the state. That appointment was at once and immediately filled up; and the object of the motion with which I shall conclude is to ascertain what application has been made for the appointment, and who the several applicants are. It may be within the recollection of this Court that, not many years ago, the office of advocate-general of India fell vacant by the death of the incumbent. Upon that occasion considerable delay took place in filling it up; and, in consequence of that delay, a question was put to the then president of the Board of Control, in his place in the House of Peers, to ascertain whether there was any blame in the non-filling up of the office, when the noble earl was reported to have said that, in his opinion, the office of advocate-general of India was the most important among the colonial appointments of the empire, second, indeed, only to that of the Governor-General himself; and I do not think I over-estimate the corresponding office at Bombay in placing it at as high a rate. The most important interests depend upon the judgment and advice the advocate-general may give to his Government. He should be well skilled in the criminal jurisprudence of his own country; for Indian juries, as we have had signal examples of late, are not prone to return verdicts in favour of the Government. He has to defend the rights and interests of his Government before the local courts, and not unfrequently to uphold the decisions of those courts when called in question by the aggrieved party. To fulfil that mission with any chance of success, it is absolutely necessary that he should be well skilled in the usages and customs of the country, and have a practical acquaintance with the tenures that obtain on that side of India. I do not think it an impertinent question for an Indian member of the Court to ask whom the Court have appointed. The press informs us that my learned friend is to be succeeded by a Mr. Lewis. The learned gentleman in question I believe to have been a frequent debater in this Court. A few years ago I heard him oppose the policy towards the Sattara State, but of late years an alteration is said to have taken place in his views, and annexation has found in him an ardent admirer. But in respect to his appointment, the course pursued by him in this Court need not be considered. The question that arises is this,—Is he known at the Central Criminal Court—has he held briefs, and many of them on the circuit to which he may have been attached—has he participated, and that largely, in the business conducted before the judicial committee of privy council, in other words has he been engaged in Indian affairs; and to use the language of commerce, is he the best man to be found for money? I trust the answer that will be given to this plain question will satisfy not this Court only, but the public out of doors, and the Bombay public in particular, that every diligence has been used to obtain the service of the best man, and that a sound discretion has been exercised in the selection you have made. Let it not be said, as was said by an ex-governor-general of India in his place in the House of Peers, when speaking of one of his law officers, that he was not only not the best advocate at the bar, but he was the very worst. I beg to move for a return of the applications made for the appointment of advocate-general of Bombay, vacant by the retirement of A. S. Le Messurier, Esq., and the names of the several applicants.

Mr. Jones seconded the motion.

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE CASE OF ISAAC HICKS.

Mr. Jones.—I have again to bring before the Court the very hard case of the boy Isaac Hicks, who at the age of 15½ years, enlisted into the East India Company's Service—the infantry.

The Chairman.—The answer I have to make to this case is, that the boy is not an apprentice within the meaning of the Mutiny Act, as he must have been over fourteen years of age when bound apprentice. As to the age of the boy, there must be some misapprehension. The boy, when he enlisted, swore that he was not an apprentice, and that he was eighteen years and two months old. It is hardly possible that the boy could have had that appearance and yet have been only fifteen years and a half old. There must be some mistake. But, further, it does not rest with the Board of Directors, either with regard to the release of the boy or the remitting of the money paid. The soldiers of the Company are under the Mutiny Act, and these things rest with the Horse Guards. It would be a very bad example to remit in any case the money paid for the discharge of a recruit; it would give rise to a great many claims, and might lead to very serious consequences. Therefore I am sorry the loss should have fallen in this case upon these poor people. But it often happens that the punishment of a boy's folly falls upon the parents. It has so in this instance, and they must be content to suffer for their son's foolishness.

Mr. Lewin.—The question is simply one of discipline and not of 20*l*., and I think the chairman has given a sufficient reason why the money could not be returned.

Mr. Helps.—I think it ought to be ascertained whether the boy was really as old as he represented when he enlisted.

Mr. Jones.—Here is a copy of the boy's register, if that be a matter in dispute.

The Chairman.—It appears strange that a boy of fifteen should be able to pass himself off as being eighteen years of age.

THORNTON'S GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

Mr. Lewin.—I have two motions to make, but before I proceed with them I will venture to offer an observation or two on the circumstance of Thornton's "Gazetteer of India," in one volume, having been placed in the hands of the Court of Directors. The Court will recollect that some seven or eight months ago I brought forward a motion, in which I urged upon the Court the importance of circulating that work in a cheap form, containing as it does a large store of information with regard to India, not in India alone but over the world at large. The Court of Directors did at that time express their concurrence in my views, but the Board of Control refused to give its assent to any proposition for contributing towards the circulation of the work at the expense of the Company. Not being able to obtain assistance from the Court, Messrs. Allen and Co., the publishers, undertook to publish the work in one volume, and at the reduced charge of one guinea, and this they have at length accomplished. I believe certain assistance has been received by them from the Court of Directors since the work has come out; I understand that the Company have agreed to take a certain number of copies. I think England, quite as much as India, is indebted to the Court of Directors for the assistance they have given to diffuse over the world a knowledge of our Indian empire, while to Messrs. Allen must be ascribed the merit of a publication, the profits of which will be very tardy, as they always are in publications relating to Indian subjects. I trust the book will fall into the hands of every Proprietor, and that it will be a text-book in the services of the East-India Company.

THE SALT MONOPOLY.

Mr. Lewin.—One of my motions is, that there be placed on the proprietors' table a copy of the recent report on the operation of the Salt Monopoly.

The Chairman.—As a copy of the report has been presented to Parliament, there is no objection to your motion.

The motion was agreed to.

JUDICIAL ADMINISTRATION OF INDIA.

Mr. Lewin.—My other motion is, that there be laid upon the table a copy of the report of Mr. Halliday, Deputy Governor of Bengal on the Judicial Administration of our Indian territories. I have been informed that this report is not officially before the Court. I know it is in this house, because I have had it placed in my hands, but I had not an opportunity to read it: and when I asked for it on a subsequent day it was refused to me.

The Chairman.—It is true that the report is not yet officially before the Court; but a copy was sent to the chairman, and one was also sent to me. What has become of the chairman's copy I cannot say; or what has become of mine I cannot say: it was lent to somebody. But as soon as the report is officially in England, it will, no doubt, be laid before the House of Commons, and as soon as that is done it will be laid before the proprietors.

Mr. Lewin.—It is very desirable it should be laid before the Court as soon as possible.

The Chairman.—It will be as soon as it is presented to Parliament. Even if I had my copy, it could not be laid before the proprietors.

The Court then adjourned.

FAILURE OF THE LONDON AND EASTERN BANKING CORPORATION.

The failure of this concern was announced on the 25th ult., and is indignantly animadverted on in the *Times of the last inst.:—"At the very minute that the affairs of the Royal British Bank are under exposure in the Court of Bankruptcy, those of the London and Eastern Banking Corporation are produced to maintain the public indignation at its height. This concern was established with the especial function of conducting banking and exchange transactions with our Indian empire, and is just three years old. Its capital appears to have been half a million, of which 250,000*l.* was paid up as an adequate fund, at any rate for the commencement of operations. The business contemplated was extensive in its scope, and offered opportunities of large and regular profits, without any extraordinary risk. Such were the prospects of the London and Eastern Bank in the year 1854. On Wednesday last, at a meeting of the proprietary, the actual state of its affairs, after thirty-six months' experience, was disclosed; and it was then found that every sixpence, or nearly so, of the shareholders' money was gone. The direct liabilities of the establishment amounted to 397,734*l.*, while from its assets, after allowing for probable losses, it was computed that 413,450*l.* might be realized; so that, though the creditors of the bank may anticipate payment in full, the balance remaining, after the settlement of their claims, would be something short of 16,000*l.*, to meet the 250,000*l.* contributed from the pockets of the shareholders. If this small margin should disappear in the actual work of winding-up, every penny of the original investment will have been sunk and lost since 1854.*

"The history of these transactions is briefly told. Considerably more than the whole paid-up capital of the bank was borrowed from the bank itself by its own directors, one of whom (Colonel Waugh) received no less than 237,000*l.*, while 47,350*l.* was distributed among four others. For these advances, securities of various kinds are represented as producible. The largest sum was lent upon mortgages of estates in Surrey and Dorsetshire, at a rate of no less than 10 per cent. interest on the money; the other loans were made upon shares in the bank itself, steam-shares, houses, and so forth."

The chairman, Mr. J. Carnac Morris, has admitted, at a meeting to investigate the condition of the bank, that he himself was indebted to the concern 12,000*l.*, but he believed it would be repaid in full. Mr. J. E. Stephens, director and manager, owes 27,800*l.* Mr. H. Fendall, director, 5,350*l.* on security of shares; and Col. J. G. W. Curtis, c.b., 5,500*l.*, of which only 3,000*l.* is secured.

The head office of this bank is at 27, Cannon-street, City, and it has branches in Mark-lane, Pall-mall, and Westbourne-terrace; also at Calcutta and Bombay. The chairman is Mr. John Carnac Morris; the deputy-chairman, the Hon. John C. Erskine; and the directors are Colonel Thomas Chadwick, Colonel W. P. Waugh, Colonel E. R. W. Yates, and Messrs. Henry Fendall, Robert John Lattey, and J. E. Stephens. This latter gentleman is also general manager. The trustees are General George Brook, c.b., Colonel Thomas Chadwick, and Colonel J. G. W. Curtis, c.b. The company are agents in London for the Delhi Bank, Simla Bank, the Uncovenanted Service Bank of Agra, and the Agra Savings' Bank.

The total number of shareholder is 98, including six ladies and seventeen native Indians, and some of them are persons of wealth and position.

It will be interesting to learn what proportion the 'credits' in the above assets bear to the more tangible securities, and also to whom and in what individual amounts they have been granted, and whether to directors, or their connections. Nearly two years back the Times called attention to a caution given by the East-India House with regard to this bank, to the effect that the Indian Government did not recognise its authority. The bank protested, in reply, that the step taken by the India House was defamatory and damaging, and that, as the bank held a charter from the Crown, the public required no further protection than was afforded by that charter and by the wealth, position, and standing of its proprietors.

It is curious to observe by the latest Bombay papers that, although the failure of the above bank is in London notorious, in India the concern has declared a dividend, for the half year ending 31st December last, of Rs. 15; being at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum: payable on after the 25th ultimo.

DIRECT CADETS.—The following gentlemen, having obtained nominations as direct cadets in the East-India Company's service, have passed the required examination, viz.:—Messrs. T. L. Bayliff, F. A. Douglas Cox, E. M. Smith, J. M. C. Galloway, F. N. M. Maynard, F. W. Grant, W. R. Martin, F. H. Vandervee, C. Campbell, W. G. Carr, W. Douglas, J. Ducat, F. L. S. Dyce, C. M. Boswell, H. C. A. Szczepanski, T. D. Madden, C. A. Copland, T. Pearson, G. S. Hutchings, C. E. Shirress, Geo. Pirrie, T. W. Gilchrist, F. Beeching, J. H. M. Barnett, S. Beckett, G. A. W. Barry, H. D. Cathcart, G. H. F. Codrington; R. Armitstead, F. Reeves, and R. V. Malden.

INDIAN REPRESENTATION IN PARLIAMENT.—The general election has returned to the new Parliament the following members officially or otherwise connected with Indian legislation:—The Right Hon. R. Lowe, Kidderminster; the Right Hon. Vernon Smith, Northampton; Mr. Danby Seymour, Poole; Sir Erskine Perry, Devonport; R. D. Mangles, Esq., Guildford; D. C. Marjoribanks, Esq., Berwick; J. P. Willoughby, Esq., Leominster; Sir J. R. Carnac, Lymington; Col. Sykes, Aberdeen; R. J. R. Campbell, Esq., Weymouth; and W. S. Lindsay, Esq., Tynemouth. Mr. Lowe, whose seat for Kidderminster was contested by Mr. Boycott, local candidate of extreme Radical principles, has been re-elected; but the right hon. gentleman's re-election originated a riot, during which Mr. Lowe was most brutally maltreated by the mob, and received severe injuries. He is, however, now progressing satisfactorily towards recovery.—The following new members connected with Indian interests have been elected:—R. W. Crawford (of the firm of Crawford, Esq. Colvin, and Co.), City of London; Aton Ayrton, Esq., Tower Hamlets; Capt. Mangles, Newport, Isle of Wight; Mr. Serjeant Kinglake, Rochester (in the room of Sir Herbert Maddock, retired), Mr. Bagshawe, Harwich.—Among the rejected, we notice the names of J. G. Phillimore, Leominster; R. J. Phillimore, Tavistock; Austin Layard, Aylesbury; Sir J. W. Hogg, Honiton; Malcolm Lewin, York; J. H. Astell, Ashburton; Raikes Currie, City of London; Sir Henry Rawlinson, Reigate; Sir George Clerk, Dover; and J. C. Marshman, Ipswich. Mr. J. C. Marshman was only rejected by a small number of votes, although he had to contend with strong county interest. His address to the electors of Ipswich, which appeared in our last number (Indian Mail, p. 193), is a document which may be characterized as one of the ablest elicited by the occurrence of the general election. Mr. Marshman has passed the greater part of his life in India, where for nearly 20 years he conducted the Friend of India, and made it the most successful journal of the Indian press. Mr. Marshman's extensive acquaintance with our Oriental possessions well qualifies him for a seat in Parliament, which we sincerely hope he may yet attain.

APPOINTMENTS.—The Queen has been pleased to approve Mr. Ernest Sufert as Consul at the Cape of Good Hope for his Majesty the Emperor of Brazil, and Don Toribio Lambarri as Consul at Hong-Kong for the Republic of Chili. Mr. DONALD MACLACHLAN is appointed her Majesty's Consul at Sourabaya in Java.

RUSSIA has taken steps, alike with England, to establish telegraphic communication with India; having made a contract previous to the late war, for a line from Nicolaieff, via the Caspian Sea, to Ispahan and Herat. It has since been in progress.

CHINESE BARBARITY AND CRUELTY.—A French priest, the Abbé Belloc, who arrived at Lyons from Marseilles a few days ago, attracted immense attention as he walked through the streets by his frightfully mutilated condition, and the story connected with it. He was one of the five missionaries sent to the savage tribes of Penang Kiou. His four colleagues were beheaded, and he himself, after having had his nose and ears and right hand cut off, was about to suffer the same fate, when he was rescued by some English sailors.

SMUGGLING IN CHINA.—Some correspondence relative to consular interference for the prevention of smuggling in China was presented to the late Parliament a few days before its dissolution. Viscount Palmerston, then Foreign Secretary of State, wrote to Sir George Bonham, in May, 1851, respecting the expediency of devising effectual means for stopping the system of smuggling prevailing in China, and especially at Shanghai. The smuggling appears attributable to the remissness and corruption of the Chinese authorities, and of the omission of the China Government itself to act up to the manifest intention of the existing treaties. Lord Palmerston determined to withhold for the future all interference on the part of the British consular authorities for the protection of the Chinese revenue. The Government of her Majesty came to this decision with reluctance, but as the Chinese authorities would not do their duty in preventing dishonest traders from defrauding the Emperor of his just dues, the British Government could no longer order her Majesty's consuls to do that for the Emperor which his own servants did not deem it necessary to do.
